FELLOW COMMISSIONERS

Juvenile Panel Member Holds An Investigation

By ERIK INGRAM

A former Marin County Grand Jury member and current chairman of the county's Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission has surreptitiously investigated fellow commissioners using confidential police files and other records.

Exactly how Richard J. Oesterman went about probing backgrounds, he wouldn't say, though he admitted he has "a make" on the entire 11-member commission.

"I've served two terms on the grand jury and can find out anything I want to know," he proudly told the Independent-Journal. "It's important to know who you are working with."

Reaction to the disclosure from commissioners reached by the I-J varied from disgust and indignation to acceptance and passive approval.

Oesterman, a British intelligence agent in Nazi-occupied France during World War II, served on the 1967 and 1969 county grand juries. He later contemplated running for county supervisor, but did not do so.

The first hint of his latest activities came Tuesday when he told the county Board of Supervisors it should make police checks through the state Department of Justice on every appointment to county boards and commissions.

"I think it would be a good idea to put a word through C I and I (Criminal Investigation and Identification) to find out how these people check out," Oesterman told the board. "I do."

"When I took over as chairman of the Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission, I got a "make" on everybody that came in to see what they were like . . . I have a rundown on everybody on the commission."

When Chairman Arnold M. Baptiste questioned whether he had done so under the authority of the County of Marin, Oesterman replied he hadn't but rather "as a private citizen, I can find out what I want."

A check with the justice department in Sacramento revealed, however, that C I and I records are not available to "private citizens" but are issued in strict confidence to law enforcement agencies.

When the discrepancy in his statement to the board was pointed out to him the following day, Oesterman responded he had never claimed to have made C I and I checks.

"I just recommended to the supervisors that they make the checks; I didn't say I had," Oesterman said, even after his earlier statement was reread to him. "Maybe I was too forceful, but you have to be to get your point home, 'ya' know."

Then, contradicting himself once again, Oesterman repeated his claim of the day before that he had checked commissioners' backgrounds "but I'm not going to tell you how."

He added, however, that it

Viet Peace Agreement Signed In Paris Today

Rogers Initials Cease-Fire Pact

PARIS (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers and foreign ministers of the other three parties in the Vietnam war signed a peace agreement today, ending America's longest armed conflict.

"We have every hope that the cease-fire will extend to all Indochina. Then there will be no major fighting in any part of the world," Rogers said afterward. He then was driven to Orly airport to return to Washington.

Under terms of the agreement, the cease-fire was to begin at 4 p.m. (PST). All U.S. forces in the country are to be withdrawn and all American prisoners of war are to be released within 60 days.

After the ceremony, Rogers and the foreign ministers of South Vietnam, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government toasted their agreement in champagne at a reception given by the French government.

Meanwhile in Washington the U.S. today proposed a Feb. 26 meeting of foreign ministers to guarantee and maintain the Vietnam peace agreement.

The American proposals for an international conference derived from article 19 of the agreement which Secretary of State William P. Rogers and the other foreign ministers signed in Paris.

The State Department announced that U. Alexis Johnson, Undersecretary of State for political affairs, called in the ambassadors of the Soviet Union, Great Britain, Poland, Hungary, Indonesia, and Canada to make the proposal.

A North Vietnamese delegation spokesman said Foreign Ministers Tran Van Lam of South Vietnam and Madame Nguyen Thi Binh of the Viet Cong also raised their glasses to each other and afterward talked at length.

The reception marked the first time the warring sides had mixed socially since the war began a quarter century ago.

"It was relaxed and friendly. The four sides mingled," said an official of the International Conference Center where the agreements were signed. The two signing ceremonies themselves were formal, swift and cool.

The morning session involved all four parties and lasted one hour. The afternoon ceremony in which only Rogers and North Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh participated, lasted 30 minutes.

The four ministers signed at 11.08 a.m. (5:08 a.m. EST), one generation after the war began more than 25 years ago.

The second session was more relaxed than the morning ceremony. Rogers was accompanied by his wife, wearing a gray, red and black coat, and they posed for photographers outside the hall.

Trinh, signing faster than the American, finished several minutes before him and sat with folded hands until Rogers was through.

At the end, the two stood up and faced each other across the round table 26 feet in diameter. Rogers hesitated and seemed about to speak, then raised his hand in salute to Trinh. Grinning, the North Vietnamese waved back. Two minutes later the hall was empty.

In a silence broken only by whispers from the delegations, the four ministers in the morning ceremony steadily penned signatures for 19 minutes. By the end of the day 208 signatures had gone into the green, red, olive and brown folders holding the treaty. Seventy-two of them were made by Rogers.

Some 1,200 Communist-led demonstrators booed and hissed Rogers and Lam as they arrived and left the conference hall, formerly the Majestic Hotel, once the Nazi Gestapo headquarters in Paris. Mrs. Binh got a rousing reception from the demonstrators, who waved Viet Cong and North Vietnamese flags.

After a protest from the South Vietnamese delegation, police cleared the street of spectators and there were no flags when the afternoon session started.

Before leaving for Washington aboard his special plane, Rogers said that he was "particularly pleased about how smoothly the signing ceremony went today.

"When I arrive in Washington, the cease-fire will be in effect," he said. The delegations announced tonight that representatives of the four-party joint military missions that will carry out cease-fire supervisory work on the ground in Vietnam held their first meeting today. They met in the same conference center the peace was signed.

A statement said "subsequent meetings of this commission will be held in Vietnam."

Mrs. Binh was the first to sign the agreements during the morning session involving all four parties.

Following that ceremony and a lunch Rogers gave for his South Vietnamese counterpart, the American and North Vietnamese returned to the conference table where four years of peace negotiations had been held to sign another set of the same agreements plus an additional accord providing for an end to the U.S. naval blockade of North Vietnamese harbors.

Ferry Manager Is Upset By Commuter Complaints

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

The Golden Gate Bridge District's ferry transit manager reacted with hurt pride, surprise and denials yesterday to complaints about the Sausalito ferry service. (See another bridge district story, page 1.)

Stanley M. Kowleski said more than 1 million passengers were carried last year on the ferry, "but I have had practically no complaints — including from the Golden Gate Commuters Club."

The complaints, alleging filth, inefficiency, indifference, inconvenience and discomfort, were reported yesterday by the Independent-Journal. The gripes had been aired at a club meeting Thursday night.

As for the charge by a club member that the district treated riders "as nothing but a herd of cattle," Kowleski said that although the riders were "a vocal group, we have not had a single complaint on service, vessel condition, cleanliness or personal attitude of the crew."

The only complaint he could recall was one about his decision to apply a sticky substance to the tops of the float dolphins at the San Francisco landing to keep seagulls from dirtying them.

An environmentalist objected the substance could annoy the birds, he said.

Kowleski, a resident of San Rafael and a longtime shipping executive, observed that most of the complaints at the meeting of seven persons came from the club's president, designer David Elliott Stovel of Mill Valley.

"Mr. Stovel is a well-meaning but inexperienced young man who considers himself an expert in transportation," he said, "but to my knowledge he never has had any affiliation with or experience in the transportation field."

Stovel's descriptions of the ferry as filthy, he added, made it sound as if the boat had just returned from a long voyage through the South Pacific.

Kowleski stressed that he always welcomed complaints and suggestions from any ferry rider.

As for the drop in patronage aboard the ferry, he said, last May's fare hike and this winter's extremely bad weather were the causes — not any cut in service or conditions. Business will rise again with better weather, he predicted.

"We give the maximum service we can with one vessel," Kowleski said, noting the ferry runs virtually from dawn through evening seven days a week. Most maintenance has to be done during the night, he added.

Replying to Stovel's suggestion that better cleaning would

Saigon Troops Lose, Then Regain Provincial Capital

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnamese troops lost the provincial capital of Tay Ninh city to Communist forces but then recaptured it a few hours later today on the final day of the war.

Col. Le Van Thien, chief of Tay Ninh province, said Communist troops gained control of the provincial capital about midday but were unable to hold it after a counterattack by South Vietnamese forces and an uprising by its residents about sundown.

The city of 26,500, located 50 miles northwest of Saigon near the Cambodian border, is a major center of the Cao Dai Buddhist base. Had the Communists been able to hold it until the cease-fire becomes effective at 8 a.m. Sunday (7 p.m. EST Saturday), the city could have provided a possible capital for the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government.

"Yes, we lost control of the provincial capital at midday and the Communists were in control," said Thien in a telephone interview. "But we have won it back, mostly due to the uprising of the local people who are religious Cao Dai Buddhists."

South Vietnamese military sources said the district capital of Cai Lay, 46 miles southwest of Saigon, also was lost to the Communists today and there was no indication that it has been recaptured.

There was no immediate report of casualties or damage in the heavy fighting for Tay Ninh, potentially the last major battle of the Vietnam war. The fighting was underway as representatives of the United States, South Vietnam, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong were signing the cease-fire and peace agreements in Paris.

The only provincial capital ever lost to the Communists was Quang Tri City, 400 miles north of Saigon. It was taken by North Vietnamese in May 1972 but recaptured by the South Vietnamese four months later.

Nixon Unveils 'Common Sense' Budget; No Tax Hike Pledge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon today unveiled a $268.7 billion "common sense" budget that included a sharp cutback in the federal deficit and a pledge of no tax increases for two years if Congress follows his spending mandates.

The budget for the 1974 fiscal year beginning July 1 cut deeply into "New Frontier" and "Great Society" programs of the past two Democratic administrations, and abolished the Office of Economic Opportunity, spearhead of the government's antipoverty effort.

There also were major cutbacks for farm programs and housing, a modest increase for defense and the first increase in space flight spending in seven years.

In addition, the President urged a legislative spending ceiling at $268.7 billion, and said if Congress violated his budget guidelines, it could cause renewed inflation, higher taxes — or both. Congress refused to impose a similar spending curb last year.

Nixon estimated that the government would spend $12.7 billion more than it collects in the coming fiscal year. This is about half the projected $24.8 billion deficit for fiscal 1973 which Nixon defended a year ago as "strong but necessary medicine" to stimulate a sluggish economy.

But the economy is booming now, and the President's problem is to avoid a new round of higher prices kicked off by a heavy dose of federal spending.

With a finger pointed squarely at Capitol Hill, Nixon said: "I will do everything in my power to avert the need for a tax increase, but I cannot do it alone. The cooperation of the Congress in controlling spending is absolutely essential."

"I do not believe the American people want higher taxes any more than they want inflation," Nixon said. "I am proposing to avoid both higher taxes and inflation by holding spending in 1974 and 1975 to no more than revenues would be at full employment."

The President unveiled no major new programs and indicated that spending requests outside the budget would win approval only at the expense of an existing progam of equal value.

As an example of his approach, Nixon pared 2,654 workers from the White House payroll. Of these, 1,935 were employes of OEO, flagship of Lyndon Baines Johnson's "Great Society."

Johnson's war on poverty was not the only program in the area of human resources to feel the President's knife of austerity. Other casualties included:

Nixon's own program for a $2,400 assistance stipend for families below the poverty level.

The "Depressed Areas" programs begun in the first days of the Kennedy administration.

Funds for public libraries.

Baptiste Will Seek Novato Flood Bonds

Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste said yesterday he will seek to place a $4.5 million bond issue before Novato voters in April to finance flood control work on Novato Creek.

Baptiste, who said his proposal was prompted in part by last week's flooding in portions of the community, will ask for concurrence at a meeting at 8 p.m. Monday of the Novato Flood Control zone advisory board. (The meeting will be at the Novato Community House.)

If successful there, he will ask the county Board of Supervisors Tuesday to set a special bond election for April 17 for the flood district.

Baptiste told the Independent-Journal yesterday the zone's timetable had called for setting an election in November but the damage of last week's flooding "means we have to start moving now."

"I think the people of Novato will go for it," he said, adding it would add about 25 cents to the flood district's current tax rate of 14.5 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Successful passage, which requires a two-thirds favorable vote, would provide for 25-year

Laird Announces An End To Draft

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird today announced an immediate end to the draft rather than waiting for the June 30 cutoff provided in the law.

In a message to top Defense officials, released at the Pentagon this morning, Laird said:

"With the signing of the peace agreement in Paris today, and after receiving a report from the Secretary of the Army that he foresees no need for further inductions, I wish to inform you that the Armed Forces henceforth will depend exclusively on volunteer soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines. Use of the draft has ended."

The draft was extended in 1971 to run until June 30 of this year. Laird announced a few weeks ago that about 5,000 people would be drafted in March through June.

Laird's single qualification on ending the draft applied to conscription of physicians and dentists.

The Pentagon has been pressing for large pay boosts for military doctors —including pay supplements of up to $16,000 per year per doctor —in order to attract and keep enough volunteers.

"I am particularly hopeful

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Flu Epidemic

ATLANTA (UPI) — The National Center for Disease Control (CDC) declared yesterday that the nation is officially in the midst of a London flu epidemic, with 908 deaths attributable to pneumonia and influenza through Jan. 20.

The CDC made the declaration after the deaths due to flu passed the "epidemic threshold."

The Pacific Coast is still the hardest hit area of the country, the CDC said, with the most deaths reported in California, Oregon and Washington state.

Sniper Victim

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The general manager of the downtown Howard Johnson's motel died of gunshot wounds last night — the eighth victim of the sniper incident earlier this month.

W. Sherwood Collins, 56, died at Charity Hospital. Seven other persons — including policemen and sniper Mark (Jimmy) Essex, 23, Emporia, Kan. — were killed during the two-day siege of the motel, which began Jan. 7 when firemen were called in to fight a series of fires.

Eight Fire Deaths

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — An early-morning house fire today killed eight persons.

Firemen said they found bodies in "all four corners" of the eight-room, one-story structure.

At first it was believed the blaze had claimed seven lives, but an eighth body was discovered later in a bathroom. No cause was immediately determined.

Consumer Savings

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Department of Consumer Affairs reports it saved California consumers more than $1 million during the last six months of 1972.

Department director John T. Kehoe said yesterday a record 38,168 complaints — most of them in auto repair and home construction fields — were received by the department's regulator agencies during the six-month period.

To Host Luncheon

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — President Luis Echeverria will host a luncheon tomorrow in the border city of Ciudad Juarez for the governors of Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico.

The official agenda — if any — was not listed in yesterday's announcement.

Estuary Opens

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Oakland Estuary was opened to all shipping traffic last night, more than a week after thousands of gallons of oil seeped into the water from nearby storage tanks.

Coast Guard Capt. H. J. Lunch said the job of mopping up the last traces of the gooey mess would continue for another week.

Sinatra Honor

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan will help honor Frank Sinatra next week as the March of Dimes "Man of the Year" at a dinner in Los Angeles.

The governor's office announced yesterday that Reagan will make brief remarks at the affair for Sinatra Tuesday night at the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

A Call Made To Shed Non-Partisan Cloaks

SACRAMENTO (UPI) - Local public officials should shed their historic non-partisan cloaks and run for office as Democrats or Republicans, the outgoing California Democratic chairman insisted as the party hierarchy met today for its biennial state convention.

"What we've got now is no party responsibility. And therefore vested interests have a remarkably strong control over governmental activities at all levels in California," said Democratic chairman Charles T. Manatt a Van Nuys attorney.

More than 1,100 delegates were eligible to attend the Democratic State Central Committee convention, whose theme was: "Democratic Leadership from Courthouse to Statehouse."

Asked by newsmen yesterday whether that theme envisioned scrapping reforms Hiram Johnson pushed through 60 years ago to rid California of machine politics, Nanatt replied: "You bet it does."

"Perhaps the cure for the patient 58 years ago has turned out to be something else in later times," said Mahatt. "Local party discipline" exists in several midwestern states "and they are hardly corrupt," he added.

Manatt maintained candidates for "official elected public bodies," such as city councils and supervisorial boards, should run with party labels. That would require a new state law.

The convention will elect a new state chairman tomorrow.

The favorite was liberal Assemblyman John L. Burton of San Francisco, co-chairman of Sen. George McGovern's california campaign. His challenger was Chico attorney-rancher John Merlo.

Merlo told a news conference Burton "represents an ultraliberal element" and turns off moderates. He also said the assemblyman should tend to his legislative duties and permit a volunteer to head the party structure.

"It's either suicide or Merloside," said Merlo.

There was behind-the-scenes politicking among five contenders for the 1974 Democratic gubernatorial nomination: Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, Sen. Majority Leader George Moscone and Rep. Jerome R. Waldie. They were scheduled to be the featured attractions at a banquet tonight.

Burton told reporters he felt Brown led in name recognition, Moscone was ahead in organization, Moretti had the "legislative record of accomplishment" and Alioto was favored by "certain segments of the population" he did not identify.

If elected chairman, Burton said he hoped to develop a program where the five would appear together at party fundraising banquets. The assemblyman also said he intended to call a summit conference of the five to discuss how to prevent the primary fight from becomint too bitter.

Warrants Out In Drug Case

I-J Special Report

LOS ANGELES — A Marin County man and woman indicted on cocaine smuggling charges failed to appear in U.S. District Court here and now are the targets of bench warrants with bail set at $25,000 each.

Melville E. Wolf, 24, of Tiburon and Shari Walden, 22, of San Anselmo, were to have been arraigned last Monday. The two were indicted by a federal grand jury after they were arrested at Los Angeles International Airport last November.

Federal agents said they became suspicious of the way Wold was tugging at his clothing. A search revealed him to be wearing two girdles containing 1.5 pounds of cocaine; Miss Walden was carrying 2.5 pounds of cocaine in her clothing, agents said. The pair had just arrived from Panama.

Wolf had been free on $15,000 bail and Miss Walden on $10,000 bail.

Edward G. Robinson, 79, 'The Little Caesar', Dies

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) - Edward G. Robinson, the movies' "Little Caesar," whose snarling, cigar-chomping manner endeared him to millions as motion pictures' original tough guy, died of cancer last night at the age of 79.

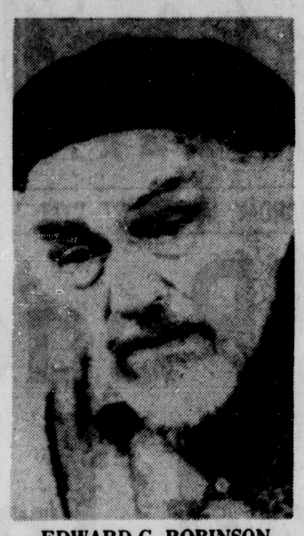
A spokesman at Mt. Sinai Hospital said Robinson died at 7:00 p.m. Beside him was his wife, Jane, who had maintained a daily vigil at the hospital since he was admitted nearly three weeks ago.

Robinson had a history of heart trouble, suffering a heart attack while making a picture in Africa in 1962 and had been involved in a near-fatal traffic accident in 1966. He succumbed to cancer of the liver.

Robinson, who perhaps gained his greatest fame for his role in the gangster film, "Little Caesar," worked almost up until the end.

He recently completed a character role as a professor with Charlton Heston in the yet-to-be released movie, "Soylent Green" at MGM.

Robinson never won an Oscar for any of his 101 films dating back to 1931. He was to have received an honorary Academy Award at the Oscar presentations March 27 in recognition of his contributions to the film art.



EDWARD G. ROBINSON
Art collector, too

In private life, the short, stocky actor, who took to wearing a silver-grey beard in later years, was one of Hollywood's quietest. His main interests outside of acting were art collecting, listening to classical music and constant reading.

"I was born a character man," Robinson said in a recent UPI interview. "Millions of persons look like me-during the first week of life. People send me pictures of their babies saying the kids look exactly like me.

"I write back and tell them to wait a week or two until the infants outgrow it."

Born in Bucharest, Romania, on Dec. 12, 1893, Robinson was brought to the United States by his parents and at age 10, became an American citizen.

"I was born at the age of 10," he often told his friends.

Robinson had four brothers, all of whom, like himself, rose well above the modest circumstances into which they were born. All his brothers became either doctors or lawyers.

Funeral services will be conducted Sunday at Hollywood Temple Israel with Heston, a close friend, expected to give the eulogy.

Burial will be in New York.

Along with his wife, Robinson is survived by his son, Edward G. Robinson Jr., 38, who wrote an autobiography about his relationship with his father; a granddaughter, Francesca, and a brother, William Goldberg.

Bombing Of Lava Island Is Debated

VESTMANNAEYJAR, Iceland (UPI) — U.S. Air Force planes skirted the roaring Helgafjel volcano Friday to determine if bombs would divert its rivers of fiery lava away from the evacuated town of Heimaey.

In Reykjavik, the Icelandic parliament debated whether such bombing missions would do any good, but did not reach a decision.

"Its a doomsday island. The churchyard is covered by volcanic ashes and at least 30 houses are buried up to the roof in the stuff", a rescue official said.

About 300 rescue workers and a handful of journalists were still on the island today. Geologists said Heimaey—the fishing center of Iceland until last Tuesday, when the volcano erupted—will be a ghost island for many years.

Damage was estimated at $140 million. Officials said the government had discussed a special surtax to compensate the loss. Heimaey accounted for some 20 percent of Iceland's fishing industry.

An $8 Million Tab In General Election

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. reports legislative candidates in last year's primary and general elections spent a record $8 million in their campaigns.

Brown said the final tabulation of campaign spending statements filed with his office point out "the urgent necessity to reform the way we finance campaigns.

"Our present system gives an unfair advantage to candidates with money and almost forces candidates to accept the large contributions from special-interest groups and lobbyists," Brown said yesterday in a prepared statement.

He said final records showed legislative candidates raised a total of more than $5.9 million and spent about $5.4 million for the November general election campaign. In the June primary campaign, the candidates raised $3 million and spent $2.5 million.

Brown said victorious Democratic and Republican state Senate candidates reported an average of $67,113 in campaign contributions in the generral election while major party losers raised an average of $27,913.

Successful Senate candidates reported spending an average of $56,761 in the campaign compared with an average of $29,192 spent by their unsuccessful major party opponents.

Democratic and Republican Assembly winners raised an average of $31,690 for their general election campaigns while the losers received an average of $20,678. The winners spent an average of $27,578 compared to $20,665 for the losers.

Brown said state Senate candidates raised a total of about $1.8 million for the November campaign and spent $1.6 million. Assembly candidates raised $4.1 million and spent $3.7 million.

Span Board Approves Pact For Larkspur Terminal Plans

Golden Gate Bridge District directors, despite strong objections about high costs, yesterday approved a $158,800 contract with a group of consultants to detail plans for the Larkspur ferry terminal. (See another bridge district story, page 1.)

The bone that almost stuck in the board's throat was the $55,000 in the contract for an environmental impact report. The contract failed to pass at first in a 9-6 vote, one short of the majority needed to spend funds.

Arguments that the district will have to be armed with the best environmental impact report it can buy — because of expected court challenges to the terminal — finally won over the majority in a 12-2 vote. Only San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini and L. E. Castner of Sonoma County voted no.

The terminal site is opposed by some environmentalists who argue it should go instead out on Point San Quentin.

Marin Supervisor Michael Wornum cautioned that opponents to the Larkspur terminal will pick apart the report "blade by blade, bird by bird, fish by fish."

If it cannot survive their test, then the district "will end up next year with three new ferries circling round and round Alcatraz and nowhere to go."

The consultants are headed by the San Francisco planning firm of Braccia-DeBrer-Heglund, who did the preliminary terminal plans for $134,000.

The contract also includes $36,000 to sample pollution in mud to be dredged, $6,100 for soil tests, $31,200 to study shoaling and a shoaling barrier, $10,500 to plot the channel and shoreline, and up to $20,000 for hearings before public agencies and citizens' groups.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

MILL VALLEY — Postponed to 8 p.m. on Feb. 14 in the district toll plaza office a hearing on a federal loan to buy the abandoned railroad right-of-way through Mill Valley.

CHAIRMAN — Heard director Daniel F. Del Carlo of San Francisco resign as chairman of the building and operating committee Del Carlo, who last month lost the contest for board president to Stephan C. Leonoudakis of San Francisco, said he resigned because Leonoudakis had pulled him off all other district committees.

CARPET — Referred to committee a request from the Golden Gate Commuters Club that the Sausalito ferry be carpeted.

BILLS — Paid bills totaling $1,819,377, including $1,358,044 for 28 new buses. The Bay Area Rapid Transit District was paid $10,000 toward a study it is doing of future travel demands in the Bay region.

PAINT — Bought 1,000 gallons of inorganic zinc silicate paint from Ameron Inc., the only bidder, for $11,720.

JANITORS — Extended for another year a $20,550 contract with Cervetto Building Maintenance Co. to clean the administration building and San Francisco ferry terminal.

JUNKET — Authorized directors Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley and Castner to attend a meeting next month in Williamsburg, Va., of the International Bridge, Tunnel and Turnpike Association.

FERRY — Received staff report that the Sausalito ferry made 6,830 runs during 1972, with only 64 canceled. Of these, 41 resulted from maintenance problems and 23 were because of drydocking. None was because of weather.

WINDOWS — Accepted a low bid from Dean's Window Cleaning Service of $4,580 a year to clean windows at the administration building and San Francisco ferry terminal.

LOBBYIST — Granted the district's special counsel for Washington grants, Richard J. Smart, an additional $25,000 for this fiscal year. He previously was budgeted $30,000 for the year.

SAN RAFAEL — Postponed to the board's Feb. 9 meeting action on spending $525,000 for an additional 15 acres to expand the 10-acre bus base on Jacoby Street in San Rafael. Bettini, objecting the purchase would take the property off the tax rolls of the city of which he is mayor, argued it should not be bought until final plans for the expansion are completed.

McDonald's Slapped On Tipping Law

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A state hearing examiner has ruled that the McDonald's hamburger restaurant chain violated state laws concerning tips.

Byran Seale of the State Division of Labor Law Enforcement ruled after a five-hour hearing Friday that the firm failed to post required notices that employees cannot keep their tips.

Seale said only "small amounts" of money were involved and the company said it would post "no tipping" signs.

He postponed a decision on a second charge that workers were pressured to take lie detector tests.

The complaints were filed by the culinary union here against the non-union firm.

Former employees charged they were forced to place tips in the cash register or a container for employee benefits.

Some former workers said they consented to lie detector tests because they felt their employment would be affected if they refused.

Aid To Aliens Is Under Attack

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Social Welfare Board, declaring aliens are receiving more than $100 million a year in welfare benefits, has urged that state aid be denied to most noncitizens and nonresidents of California.

Robert E. Mitchell, board chairman, told a news conference yesterday that it was "clear that many illegal and temporary aliens and recent immigrants avail themselves" of welfare programs.

Mitchell added that in "our viewpoint" the state aid programs "were intended and should be available only to valid residents of this state and country."

Mitchell said about 8 to 9 per cent of the more than two million persons who are on welfare in California are not American citizens, adding that 5 per cent of the state's population is comprised of immigrants who are not citizens.

The $100 million figure, Mitchell said, included all federal, state and county welfare costs, 15 per cent of which is borne by counties and 35 per cent by the state.

He estimated that the average welfare payment was about $70 a month to each recipient to arrive at the $100 million figure.

Mitchell said the state has taken some steps to curb welfare grants to aliens, but that they "are not yet fully and effectively implemented at the local level and will be of only limited value in face of conflicts" with federal regulations.

Mitchell's comments came as the board released a 54-page report called "Aliens in California.

The board, which is advisory to the state Department of Social Welfare, recommended that welfare be limited to U.S. citizens and immigrants who have permanent residence and have lived in the country for at least five years.

The panel also said welfare recipients should be residents of the state.

Other recommendations of the board included:

—Requiring a sponsor of an immigrant to meet the person's needs rather than the immigrant receiving welfare.

—Screening of noncitizen applicants for welfare through the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

—Broadening a federal program requiring posting of bonds by aliens at border entry points which could be used to defray any welfare costs they might incur.

—Development of a new Social Security card which would not be available to illegal or temporary entrants.

—Enactment of legislation under which receipt of welfare or medical assistance would create a debt

Probe Chairman Claims Deputy Killed Students

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — The chairman of a black committee that investigated the killing of two Southern University students says the students were killed by a deputy sheriff who was aiming at another student.

"As I have looked at the evidence and as we on the committee have assessed it, it is clear in my mind that there is a very real probability that murder in the first degree was committed," D'Army Bailey, a Berkeley, Calif., city councilman and chairman of the "Black People's Committee of Inquiry," said Friday.

Students Denver Smith and Leonard Brown, both 20, were killed by a shotgun blast Nov. 16 as students rushed out of the tear gasfilled campus administration building they had occupied.

Deputy sheriffs and state police had been called into the campus to clear the students out of the building.

The 12-member black committee conducted two days of hearings in which it heard mostly from students at the mostly-black, 8,700-student Southern Campus.

First Filing For County School Board

Marilyn C. Steinau, former Reed School District trustee, yesterday became the first candidate to file for election to the Marin County Board of Education on April 17.

Judith L. Vallas of San Anselmo also filed for the San Anselmo School District board, according to the Marin County elections office.

Mrs. Steinau, 45, is the wife of Belvedere Vice Mayor Allan Steinau. She was first elected to the Reed board in 1963. She filed for the Area 5 seat on the county board, to succeed Arnold T. Dolcini Jr.

He cannot run for reelection, because redistricting of the county board areas under the one-man-one-vote rule left him living outside the boundaries of the area.

Mrs. Vallas, making her first venture into elective politics, is the wife of state bridge engineer James Vallas. They have two sons, a preschooler and a second grader, and live at 260 Brookside Drive.

Mrs. Vallas is coordinating chairman with the Brookside School Parent-Teacher Association, a member of the district advisory committee on special education.

She is 33 and a graduate of the University of Hawaii with a degree in home economics education.

Mrs. Vallas said yesterday she had been attending school board meetings for most of the three years she has lived in San Anselmo and has "a very active interest" in the board.

Filings for the April 17 elections in 20 Marin County School districts will close Feb. 16 at the Marin County Clerk's office.

A special election to fill a vacancy on the board of the Marin Municipal Water District in Area 4, also will be held April 17. There had been no filings to succeed resigned Director Eugene A. Miller, as of yesterday.

The San Rafael city clerk's office is taking candidate filings for the San Rafael City Council and San Rafael Board of Education balloting, which also will be on April 17.

Carl J. (Red) Brown, former San Rafael Board of Education trustee, yesterday took out nomination papers for a city council seat. He had previously indicated interest in running.

Park Tax Election Unnecessary

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — California Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger yesterday opined that the Marin County Regional Park District need not undergo a special tax rate election.

He wrote that everyone "clearly understood" what the tax rate would be when the district was created by a 2-1 vote last Nov. 7.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, had asked for Younger's opinion on behalf of the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

It had appeared that the state's new tax reform measure, might either force a special tax rate election or delay the park district from beginning operations by fiscal 1973-74.

Measure A on the Nov. 7 ballot did not specifically mention that the proposed regional park district would have a maximum tax rate of 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

But the "ballot analyses and arguments clearly stated the maximum tax rate is 10 cents," Younger wrote in a six-page opinion, received late yesterday by Bagley.

"While the matter is not entirely free from doubt, we are of the opinion that if the matter were presented to a court, it would conclude that the adoption of Measure A by the voters satisfied the requirement. . . of the new tax reform act," Younger wrote.

"I'm certainly glad to hear it," Marin County Administrator John F. Barrows said today. "And the supervisors will be happy, too." He noted that County Counsel Douglas J. Malone earlier said that a favorable opinion from Younger probably would resolve the tax issue without the expense of a special election.

Younger's opinion declared that "to require still another election would only be duplication and would constitute a waste of pubic funds. . ."

Bagley reiterated that he was prepared if necessary, to seek special legislation to exempt the park district from the state restrictions.

The tax reform measure requires all districts to gain voters' approval before raising tax rates above 1972-73 levels, or in the case of new districts, to hold a rate election before imposing property taxes.

Two Nabbed For Food Store Thefts

Two men were arrested in San Jose last night for allegedly stealing store fixtures and cash registers from a San Anselmo natural foods store that has gone out of business.

Kenneth Charles Caramella, 27, of San Jose, and Dennis Stephen Morgan, 30, of Los Gatos, were booked on suspicion of burglary and ordered to appear in Marin Municipal Court on Thursday.

According to San Anselmo police, about $700 in equipment was reported missing yesterday from Everybody's Natural Food Store, 1 Saunders Avenue.

Police said they had observed a truck parked outside the store at noon. They traced the vehicle to a San Jose supplier of organic produce, the Well, employers of Caramella and Morgan.

According to police, the manager of Everybody's Natural Food Store, Michael Murphy, said he owed $1,500 to the Well and thought that the supplier might be trying to recover the money.

The store has been closed for about two weeks.

Police said they are also seeking a third suspect in the burglary. Caramella and Morgan were released from jail without bail.

General Plan Hearings On Monday

The Marin County Planning Commission, meeting Monday at 1:30 p.m. at Marin Civic Center, will begin formal hearings on the proposed countywide general plan.

The controversial 20-year plan, which seeks to "turn around" growth and development patterns in Marin, must be adopted in some form by the county board of supervisors by July to comply with state law.

The planning commission discussed the plan last fall during a special meeting in Point Reyes Station when it served as a sounding board for West Marin residents. It took no action.

Under state law, the plan must contain nine specific elements — land use, circulation, housing, conservation, open space, seismic safety, noise, scenic highway and safety.

Several of the elements — low-income housing, open space, transportation and population proposals — have come under fire as being either unattainable or in conflict with one another under the proposed 20-year plan.

Monday's discussion also will include continued consideration of how West Marin's villages should expand and at what rate.

General Plan Session Monday

The San Rafael City Council will meet in closed session at 7:30 p.m. Monday to consider appointments to the citizen's committee on the general plan.

At 8 p.m., the council will sit in public session to consider a federal urban aid project aimed at improvement of Fourth Street and the Miracle Mile from Marguard Avenue to the westerly city limits.

The council will also consider action on a possible landslide on Lindenwood Court in the Glenwood area.

Survey Of Flood Damage Announced

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Army Corps of Engineers employees will begin a countywide survey in Marin on Monday, to gather data on the damage caused by the flooding of Jan. 16-17, according to Nancy Osborne of the engineers' district headquarters.

Survey workers will interview both homeowners and businessmen in the Novato and Southern Marin areas. The data obtained will be used "for control improvements," she said.

DRAFT

that the Senate will promptly follow the lead of the House and enact legislation giving added incentives for service from members of the health professions, so that the requirements for health services personnel can also be put on a volunteer basis," Laird said.

He also said he was worried that without new pay incentives to attract men to the National Guard and Reserves, "it will be extremely difficult, if not impossible," to maintain those forces at the million-man-level called for by Congress. Where once the Guard and Reserves had long waiting lists, they now have none and are 56,000 men below their authorized strength.

But Laird said, "the all-volunteer era —which our Commander-in-Chief, President Nixon, has promised the American people —is upon us ... this means that we have beaten President Nixon's objective of zero draft calls by five months."

Actually the Army will not be an all-volunteer force until December, 1974. Some 51,800 men were drafted last year, including 2,500 in December whose two-year tour of duty will keep them in the Army into 1974. The ending of the draft does not mean draftees now in the service can get out.

Earlier this month in his final report to Congress, Laird raised doubts that a draft-free military would really be possible in the long run. "All of us must recognize that we are breaking new ground and that no one at this point in time can guarantee absolutely that the United States will be able to maintain an all-volunteer force for the indefinite future," he said.

He also warned that if the military continues to be the subject of brickbats and abuse, it will not be able to attract enough volunteers to make the all-volunteer concept work.

"We cannot expect to recruit or maintain a high quality volunteer force with good morale and discipline unless Americans view military service as an honorable and desirable pursuit," his report noted.

Last year 414,800 men enlisted in the military. Of that number, 331,900 were estimated to be "true volunteers" —men who would have joined the service even if there were no draft inducing them to volunteer. That was a 33 per cent increase in the number of true volunteers estimated in 1971 and a whopping 57 per cent more than 1970.

One inducement for more volunteers is certain to be the fact that American servicemen will not be fighting anywhere in the world after 7 p.m. EST this evening.

But one of the main inducements to volunteers in the past year has been the huge pay increases granted servicemen.

A private earned only $95.70 a month as recently as 1968. Now is paid $307.20 plus non-taxable allowances, free medical care, low prices in post exchanges (PXs) and a crack at 128 additional cash bonuses and benefits. The end result is pay equal to well over $100 a week in the civilian world.

The draft has been an almost continuous feature of American life since 1940. Only for 13 months in 1947 and 1948 has there been no draft law on the books in the last 32 years. The draft was also used during the Civil War and World War I.

But Laird's announcement does not mean that the 4,000 draft boards around the country will now fold up. They will remain in business doing almost everything they have done in the past —except draft men.

Eighteen-year-olds will still be required to register. There will still be an annual draft lottery and, with Congressional approval, thousands of low-numbered men will be given physical exams to see if they meet the requirements of the draft just in case it should be needed again.

All this will continue because the Selective Service law does not expire next June 30. That law is permanent legislation. What does expire is the authority of the Selective Service System to order men into uniform.

Man Arrested On Auto Theft

A Santa Rosa man was booked into Marin County Jail yesterday on suspicion of auto theft after a routine traffic stop on northbound Highway 101 near San Rafael.

A California Highway Patrol officer noticed a car without taillights on the freeway at 8:40 p.m. and stopped the vehicle. A check revealed the car had been stolen in Santa Rosa, and the driver, Perry Reed, 37, was arrested.

Reed was held in lieu of $1,200 bail to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

An Arrest Ends Stolen Goods Probe

The arrest of a San Rafael woman on suspicion of concealing stolen property yesterday capped a two-week investigation by San Rafael police.

Patricia Ann Fusilieria, 21, of 14 Pleasant Lane, was booked into Marin County Jail and held in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Police, acting on a tip, said they went to the Pleasant Lane residence last Jan. 9 and discovered the woman and three companions sitting amid a quantity of guns. Officers later discovered that three shotguns, three rifles and one automatic pistol found in the home had been reported stolen from a neighbor's residence the day before.

Also found in the residence, according to police, were three fur coats, two suede jackets, jewely and other items reported stolen from two other San Rafael homes.

Officers said Miss Fusilieria told them she had arrived home with several companions to find the items.

FERRY

be done by a professional service, Kowleski said this was forbidden by the district's agreement with the Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific, which represents the deckhands and ticket sellers.

The club's appeal for carpeting coincides with staff plans long under way to do just that. He predicted it will be installed within three months, after careful planning to make sure it can be cleaned easily and conform to fireproof regulations of the Coast Guard.

The temporary carpeting installed last year for President Nixon's visit had to be put in on 36-hours notice during the Labor Day weekend, thus it was impossible to get the right kind, Kowleski said.

As for the charge that the ferry service was aimed primarily at tourists, he declared "no effort of any kind ever has been made to attract tourists."

In a detailed rebuttal of complaints aired at the club meeting, Kowleski also explained that relocation of the Sausalito parking lot for the shuttle bus was "an economic decision" becuase of a stiff rental hike at the old lot.

Contrary to the claim by Stovel that the City of Sausalito has approved a rain canopy for the boarding area to the ferry, Kowleski reported, the district's proposal never cleared the planning commission.

Plans already are underway, however, for a permanent Sausalito ferry terminal that will provide shelter from the weather, he said.

Kowleski acknowledged the city has agreed to let feeder buses into the parking lot so they can get close to the ferry landing in bad weather. But he added that the lot is sinking on poor fill that the proposal seemed risky.

Stovel's suggestion that a second ferry be rented from Harbor Tours to expand the morning commuter service already was rejected by the bridge board as too costly, he said.

Kowleski said the district constantly was upgrading the ferry service, "but we can't do everything at once."

Three Plead Guilty To Drug Counts

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Two Marin County men and a Washington lobbyist who have pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to felony charges stemming from a narcotics raid are to be sentenced some time next month.

No definite date has been set for the sentencing of Marco F. Madio, 23, and Brian Neal Smith, 27, both of Sausalito, and George E. Miller, 31, attorney and lobbyist.

Visiting Judge Charles Wyzanski of Boston, Mass., who heard their guilty pleas earlier this month, will set the time later, according to Asst. U.S. Atty. John Cooney, prosecutor in the case.

Madio and Miller have pleaded guilty to possessing cocaine while Smith has admitted using a telephone in order to arrange a cocaine sale. They had all been charged earlier with the more serious crime of selling the drug.

The three were arrested Sept. 15 when a dozen federal, state and local narcotics agents raided Madio's home and seized an ounce of cocaine.

would be no problem for him, as a mortgage broker, to run credit checks.

The relevance of commissioners' financial backgrounds was not discussed by Oesterman, who wouldn't elaborate except to say credit checks give "other information."

"Of course I did it without their knowledge; you can't investigate (any other way)," the former grand jury member added.

Two of the commissioners, informed of Oesterman's snooping, registered strong disapproval — one saying he would seek the chairman's ouster or resign himself.

"There's not room enough for the two of us on this commission when one is employing police state tactics," said Commissioner Leroy J. Syrop, who nominated Oesterman for the chairmanship and then ran unsuccessfully against him.

"I'm amazed to hear it," Syrop said. "He should be censured and removed by the Board of Supervisors . . . I'll never be able to work with him again. If I can't have him removed, I'll resign."

"I'm amazed and resentful," Commissioner Arlene Blumberg agreed. "It's opening the door to a whole lot of assaults on private lives. I don't like it."

Oesterman's activities drew guarded support from Commissioners Mary T. Lapin and Victor R. Donati Jr. who said they didn't object to being investigated.

Mrs. Lapin said she could understand "his concerns," adding "I didn't know about it but don't object to it."

Donati, meanwhile, said by some to have been involved in the checking, flatly denied any involvement.

"I don't have anything to say and I don't want my name used," he told the I-J. "There's nothing wrong. Oesterman can check if he wants."

Commissioner Elizabeth Emerson, meanwhile, noted "It's a little unusual, I'll go that far. I can't understand why he would do it."

She said she had no serious objections to being investigated, but added the commission should concentrate on something else and avoid a flap.

Charles E. Newman, one of the newer commissioners, said he had heard rumors of something going on but was never sure. "I don't like it," he added.

"I'm sort of surprised to hear it," Commissioner Keith S. Davis said. "He can search my background all he wants but there are more important things to do."

BONDS

bonds to proceed either with the Army Corps of Engineers' controversial plan "or go it alone on a lesser scale," Baptiste said.

The Corps, which has been studying Novato Creek since 1946, has a plan which is under fire from conservationists who fear another Corte Madera Creek "concrete channel".

If the Novato community should decide to go ahead with the Corps' plan, Baptiste said, about $3 million of the bonds would be used to match federal money for the $14 million project.

The remaining $1.5 million in bonds would be used for interim dredging of the creek and acquisition of easements.

Should the community decide against the corps' proposal, the flood control zone could use the funds for a smaller project to protect against a "25-year flood." (The Corps' project would protect against a "100-year flood.")

The Corps' project would take four to five years to complete while a zone project would take about three years.

The Corps' plan calls for greater widening of the creek and use of concrete channels in some portions, Baptiste added.

Before any project can proceed, it must be approved by the flood district advisory board, the Novato City Council and the board of supervisors.

Public hearings on the corps' project will be held in late February or early March, he added.

No Travel Plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Retired Adm. John S. McCain, former commander of U.S. Naval forces in the Pacific, will await reunion with his POW son in this country rather than traveling to the Philippines, the admiral's wife said Friday.

Street Plans Due Discussion

A public hearing on plans to widen Washington Street will be held at the Petaluma City Council meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Plans call for widening Washington Street from Kentucky to Keokuk streets and installing signals at Howard and Kentucky streets.

The council also will consider a rezoning request by Sunco Development Corp. to permit homes and apartments on east Washington street at Ely Boulevard.

Suspect In Slayings Is Questioned

SANTA CRUZ (UPI) — Sheriff's deputies were reportedly questioning a bearded kayak maker today in their investigation of the brutal slayings of five persons, including two small children.

The Santa Cruz County sheriff's office refused to comment on the report which came from an informed source within the sheriff's department.

Deputies admitted earlier they were seeking the man, Robert C. Francis, boyfriend of one of the victims. They said he was not a suspect but they hoped to get clues from him.

Meanwhile, authorities were still investigating the murder of a San Rafael girl whose dismembered body was washed up in pieces on Santa Cruz and Monterey County beaches in recent days.

The slain girl, Cynthia Ann Schall, 18, of 175 Clinton Court, was identified through fingerprints taken from her right hand, found Friday by surfers at a beach near Capitola.

Miss Schall had been reported missing Jan. 8, from a Santa Cruz home where she was a live-in babysitter while attending Cabrillo College. She was the daughter of Sue Schall McEvoy of San Rafael.

The latest slayings in the area came to light yesterday with the discovery of the bodies of a young Santa Cruz couple in their hillside home, several hours after a "hippie" mother and her two young sons were found slain in their remote mountain cabin a few miles away.

James R. Gianero, 24, an unemployed carpenter, and his wife, Joan, 21, were found shotgunned to death in the bathroom of their home yesterday. The night before the bodies of Kathy Hughes, 31, her sons, David, 9, and Daemon, 4, were found in their remote cabin a few miles away.

Deputies said Mrs. Hughes, who lived with Francis, had been stabbed in the chest and shot with a small caliber pistol in the head. The children, they said, had been stabbed in the back and shot in the head.

Deputies said all the victims were "close friends." They added they had no motives for the slayings.

Investigators described Francis and his girlfriend as "hippies." But, they said, the two children had been well cared for. They had been living on welfare.

In October 1970 an eye surgeon and four others were killed at his fashionable hilltop home near here. John Linley Frazier was convicted of the slayings and sentenced to life in prison.

Wife Of Rock Singer Files For Dissolution

The wife of blues and rock singer Van Morrison filed yesterday in Marin Superior Court for dissolution of their three-year marriage and division of property including their home in Fairfax.

The suit by Janet Morrison declared that she and George Ivan Morrison, the Canadian-born recording star, were married in New York City June 7, 1969, and separated last Nov. 17. They have a two-year-old daughter.

Irreconcilable differences were cited.

The community property listed included a horse named Moondance, and business interests in Caledonia Productions, BMI, Warner Brothers recording contracts, recording equipment and a studio.

Seeks Dissolution

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Television talk-show host Merv Griffin was sued for dissolution of marriage by his wife of 14 years, Julann Wright, attorney Marvin Mitchelson said Friday.

Moretti Accuses News Media Of Unfair Capitol Reporting

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti has accused the news media of constantly attacking the Legislature in the last month and rarely reporting "some of the positive aspects" about the Capitol.

The Van Nuys Democrat was angered yesterday by reporting of the Legislature's brief session on the national day of mourning for former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

He assailed as an "outrageous untruth" reports which he said asserted the lawmakers met simply to protect loss of their $30-a-day expense allowances.

"For the last month or so, the press has seen fit to do nothing but to continue to attack the legislature and very seldom ever takes any interest in pointing out some of the positive aspects of this place," Moretti said in radio interviews.

He took exception to news stories that pointed out that by meeting Thursday the lawmakers were assured payment of their expense allowances for that day and the next three, totaling $120.

Moretti said the Assembly was not "legally required" to be in session Thursday for him to authorize the expense payments. "I can do that whether or not we were meeting in session," he said.

Under a long-standing policy, neither house of the Legislature can recess without the consent of the other for longer than 72 hours without forfeiting the expense allowance.

Passage of the legislative reorganization ballot measure (Prop. 4) at the November election abolished the three-day consent provision and allowed either house of the Legislature to recess for 10 days without the other's approval.

However, legislative rules implementing Prop. 4 have not been adopted. The legislature temporarily is operating under rules of the 1972 session.

An aide to Moretti, Ethan Wagner, said Moretti has "rethought it and has interpreted the old rules in light of the public's expression on Prop. 4. His policy now regarding per diem reflects the principle in Prop. 4.

Wagner insisted the Thursday meeting was called to pay tribute to Johnson, although most federal and state offices were closed.

The Senate met Thursday for four minutes and recessed for the weekend in Johnson's memory. The assembly met for 37 minutes, eulogized Johnson, criticized the news media for noting the expense payments and recessed until Monday. Neither house normally meets on Fridays.

Sen. Albert S. Rodda, DSacramento, disclosed he had instructed Senate clerks to waive his $30-a-day expense payments for Friday, Saturday and Sunday. He declined to offer a reason.

Deputy Testifies Magee Took Weapons From Him

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A deputy sheriff testified yesterday that accused killer Ruchell Magee took a shotgun and a revolver from him shortly before the 1970 gun battle at the Marin County Civic Center in which four persons died.

Magee is on trial for the murder of one of them, Judge Harold J. Haley.

Deputy Sheriff Norman Johnson said he was outside the building when the gunmen and their hostages emerged on their way to their nearby van. He said Magee walked up to where he was crouched behind some shrubbery.

"He told me to drop my shotgun on the ground," Johnson testified. Then, he said, Magee was ordered by another of the gunmen, Jonathan Jackson, to get the shotgun.

"I bent over, picked up my gun and handed it to Magee," Johnson said. "Then Magee reached over and unsnapped my holster and removed my service revolver."

The hostages were then herded into the van, out of Johnson's sight, and shortly thereafter gunfire broke out during which Haley, Jackson and two other gunmen were killed.

Before the jury entered the courtroom for the morning session, Magee asked to leave, as he has done on past occasions, and he was taken to a nearby holding cell.

Northridge Plan Due Discussion

The Northridge Open Space Plan will be considered at a meeting of the mayors of Mill Valley, Corte Madera and Larkspur to be held Monday at 8 p.m. in Mill Valley City hall.

The session also will be attended by county supervisors Michael Wornum and Gary T. Giacomini and Brian G. Whittenkeller, who drafted the plan.

A similar meeting in November resulted in the mayors declaring the Northridge should be given highest priority when the newly formed county regional park district considers open space acquisition.

Today is Saturday, Jan. 27, the 27th day of 1973 with 338 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

American pioneer labor organizer Samuel Gompers was born Jan. 27, 1850.

On this day in history:

In 1880, a patent for an electric incandescent lamp was granted to Thomas Edison.

In 1943, the U.S. 8th Air Force staged the first all-American air raid on Germany, bombing Wilhelmshaven in broad daylight.

In 1964, Maine Sen. Margaret Smith announced that she would seek the Republican nomination for the presidency. She was the first woman ever to seek the presidential nomination of a major political party.

In 1972, famed gospel singer Mahalia Jackson died at the age of 60.

A thought for the day: President Abraham Lincoln said, "I claim not to have controlled events but confess plainly that events have controlled me."

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Birthday countdown! Bake a cake for these celebrities, but be sure to put the right number of candles on each one. Guess who's 52, 55, 65, and 73?

1. Skitch Henderson, pianist and orchestra conductor, can play serious or pop music as the occasion demands. This Minnesotan made good in the big city, becoming familiar to national TV audiences as the band leader on Steve Allen's "Tonight" show. He has been featured on the Sinatra and Crosby radio shows. During World War II he was a U.S. Air Force pilot.

2. William Randolph Hearst, Jr., began his career in journalism in 1928 as a reporter on his father's newspaper, the New York American, and today continues his active interest in world affairs, writing a column for many of the dailies in the Hearst chain. He was a war correspondent, 1943-45, and won a Pulitzer Prize in 1956.

3. Donna Reed is that actress who resembles the girl next door, who refused to stay under "The Shadow of the Thin Man," being determined to enjoy "The Human Comedy" and make "Thousands Cheer" as she proved to audiences "It's a Wonderful Life." She won a supporting actress award from the Hollywood Motion Picture Academy and had her own TV show for nearly 10 years.

4. Hyman Rickover, who celebrates another birthday today, is that United States Naval Admiral who has been credited with developing the first atomic-powered submarine. He is a Naval Academy graduate who qualified for submarine service in 1930 and was assigned to Oak Ridge, Tenn., after World War II to see what nuclear power could do for ships. Naturally, he thought of using it for submarines.

ANSWERS

1. Henderson, 55; 2. Hearst, Jr., 65; 3. Reed, 52; 4. Rickover, 73.

WINS WITH KING

West opened the five of spades, and South won with the king.

Declarer saw that he could take eight tricks on the run. Where was the ninth trick to come from?

The long club suit was a bad risk. If South knocked out a club, back would come a spade to force out the ace. The next club trick would allow West to take the spades. It was possible, of course, that each opponent held four spades, but this was quite unlikely.

South decided to try for his ninth trick by way of a heart finesse. At the second trick, therefore, he led the eight of hearts and put up dummy's jack. East won with the queen of hearts and returned a spade.

WEST COVERS

South led the nine of hearts next, but West covered with the ten. Dummy's five of hearts was not a winner, and South had only his original eight tricks. Down one.

South was correct in trying for his ninth trick in hearts, but wrong in his method.

HEART ACTION

South should start the hearts by leading the eight and letting it ride for a finesse. If this play loses to the ten, South can finesse with the jack of hearts the next time. Thus, he cannot be worse off and the deep finesse may improve his chances.

As the cards lie, the finesse with the eight would force out East's queen. South would then have nine top tricks.

DAILY QUESTION

You have opened the bidding with one club, and partner has responded one spade.

It is now up to you again, holding:

♥- 9 8
♦- A K Q 7
♣- Q J 10 5 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two diamonds. The "reverse" bid shows your strength. You cannot afford to bid no-trump when you lack a stopper in one of the unbid suits.

Sharp Extremes In Population

CHICAGO (UPI) —The nations of North America reflect some of the world's sharpest extremes in population densities. The population for the continent as a whole, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, is 33.3 persons per square mile, but only a few of the smaller nations come close to this average.

The continental United States has a density of 56.1 persons per square mile. This is about 10 times greater than Canada's, but the highest density of all is in Bermuda, which has 2,476.2 persons per square mile, nearly 500 times the Canadian density.

Vietnam Cease-Fire Stirs Memories

THE PRESIDENT'S announcement that peace really is at hand in Vietnam releases a flood of memories for those of us who were around when World War II ended dramatically nearly a generation ago.

On Saipan, the word of Japan's offer to surrender and the subsequent cease-fire spread rapidly via grapevine telegraph. One jubilant group of junior officers piled into a jeep to head for a Navy officers' club where they were sure they could find something appropriate to drink in celebration. Enroute, they had to stop briefly for some road repair work. One of the junior officers spotted a Yale classmate, an enlisted man, in the road repair crew. They had not seen each other since college. The enlisted man was instantly invited to drop his shovel and climb aboard to join the celebration, which he did.

Two days later the officer faced court martial for taking his enlisted classmate into an officers club.

On the aforementioned road, some men of another American military road repair crew threw sizeable rocks at defenseless Japanese PWs being transported in an open GI truck. It was incredible.

THE MEMORY pageant includes recollections of the dropping of the first A-bomb.

After Iwo Jima and Okinawa were taken by American forces it was obvious that the next move must finally be against the Japanese homeland. The Japanese fought with increasing suicidal fanaticism on Iwo and Okinawa. The knowledge that some of us would now face a new high level of fanaticism on Japanese home islands was grim.

Our best guess was that it would take one to two more years of that business before the last Japanese soldier was buried on the home islands. We knew from personal experience that they didn't ever surrender, they would never quit.

We were sure we faced another year or two years of this — and losses among us which would dwarf all previous losses.

On neighboring Tinian Island we knew there was an odd-ball B-29 squadron, kept segregated from everyone else on the island. Everyone knew they had some secret new super-blockbuster bomb.

But bombs didn't do much for the foot soldier. Somebody still had to wade in and go after the enemy face-to-face, one-by-one.

THEN IT HAPPENED. The first A-bomb was detonated above Hiroshima.

Even the fanatical Japanese couldn't take that, we knew.

To know that we were spared one to two years more of that kind of life (if we were to survive at all) made it the most deliriously happy day of our lives.

No wonder we are mystified by those who at the time of Harry Truman's death a month ago asked whether he had committed some great moral wrong in approving the use of the A-bomb!

The A-bomb unquestionably saved lives of untold thousands of young American men.

Clearly, President Truman had no choice but to approve its use.

THE MEMORY pageant recalls the night when the first planeload of American PWs liberated from Japan arrived at Guam.

Some were emaciated, cruelly maimed and so weak as to be incapable of enjoying their liberation. To this day those memories bring tears.

Strangely, some were the picture of health.

Let us hope that when our young men are released from North Vietnam PW camps, they do NOT emerge emaciated and cruelly maimed. Let us pray that they somehow all come out healthy, sound and adequately nourished.

WHEN GENERAL MacArthur presided over the signing of the surrender in Tokyo Bay, he expressed lofty hopes for a new era of prolonged peace. President Nixon voiced somewhat the same, but more cautiously phrased, sentiments in his radio address announcing the Vietnam cease-fire agreement.

Really, they didn't sound much different than did Neville Chamberlain when he returned from his tragic Munich meeting with Hitler to predict rather confidently, "peace in our time."

There are still among us a representative number of World War I veterans who fought to "make the world safe for democracy" in the "war to end wars".

Those of us who are veterans of World War II felt that we had participated in a demonstration of the futility of war which humanity would surely recognize as just that.

The "UN police action" in Korea, we hoped, would reinforce the lessons of World War II.

But we let the Vietnam war happen.

No wonder our under-30s don't understand us and think we are mostly wrong!

We fervently pray that when our present under-30 generation matures, it will have better success than we have had in dealing with mankind's most devastating illness — the inclination to make war.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

What Does It Really Mean To Have Peace?

At some time during elementary school I first began hearing of a place called Vietnam, and of a war that was growing up, as I was. In junior high school, older brothers of my friends were being sent there to fight; in high school my friends and I begged for peace; and now in college, it is my friends who have fought there.

The Vietnam War and I have grown up together, and I can't remember much of what peace was like. So now I hear that there has been a cease-fire agreement. I am thankful that the war is finally over, but all I know of peace is that it is the absence of war. . .we'll have to find a better definition.

No-Fault Insurance Initiative Opposed

I read with interest Mr. (Richard W.) Shand's letter of Dec. 15, 1972 wherein he was critical of the Legislature not having acted in the matter of coastline protection and no-fault insurance.

I am totally sympathetic as is our association at Mr. Shand's frustrations with the legislation in the matter of coastline protection. . .

I do agree with Mr. Shand that the initiative process is the proper process when the Legislature fails to reflect the wishes of the voting public. On the other hand I do not believe the majority of the voting public is in favor of a specific plan of no-fault auto insurance. What they have been sold on through advertisements costing millions of dollars is the general principle of no-fault auto insurance. But it is not enough to be in favor of a general principle, it is necessary that there be a specific item of legislation which is supported by the insurance industry and opposed not only by the California Trial Lawyers but also by the California Consumer Federation representing 115 consumer groups, California Rural Legal Assistance, representing poor people, the State of California Retired Employees Association and the like. . .

Thinks Executioner Would Be Hard To Find

Since last November's election, when a majority of voters indicated that they were in favor of restoring capital punishment, I have heard a number of people indicate vigorous reaffirmation of such a course.

When and if the executions resume, I have a suggestion that some of them might consider seriously. Let the executioner — the person who actually drops the pellets into the sulfuric acid — be drawn from among the registered voters in the same manner that jurors are now impanelled. He or she could be summoned to the nearest county seat, and asked, on oath, whether or not he or she was in favor of capital punishment. On an affirmative answer, the name of the individual could be placed in a pool, with the ultimate choice drawn by lot or computer. On scheduled execution days, the transportation and other expenses would be met by the state. "Other expenses" could conceivably cover psychiatric aid if needed.

This could in effect be the end of an old, and in some quarters, revered institution, since executioners would be awfully, awfully hard to find.

We'll Be Workin' On The Railroad Just To Pass The Time Away

WASHINGTON — The Long Island Railroad temporarily is back in operation. But it is predicted that once a labor settlement is reached fares will have to be raised. This will cause fewer people to take the train, which will drive up costs, and so on and so forth.

What can be done to make the Long Island and all commuter trains and buses profitable? How can the United States get people to give up their automobiles and use mass transportation?

A SOLUTION to the problem has been worked out by Xavier Greyhound, an economist with Rolling Stock magazine.

Greyhound says, "The trouble with mass transportation is that no one is taking advantage of the American work ethic. A majority of Americans feel very guilty when they aren't working."

"That's true," I said.

"Where do you find the most idle people in this country?"

"On buses and trains," I said.

"Correct. On a bus or a train there just doesn't seem to be enough work for a person to do," Greyhound said.

"Therefore, the United States is wasting one of its greatest sources of manpower. Millions of people are spending millions of hours on our transportation systems doing nothing."

"YOU HAVE A PLAN for them?" I asked.

"Yes. What we must do is put these passengers to work. Make them fill their time with useful work which will give them pride and satisfaction, as well as let them earn extra money to pay for fare increases."

"How can you do it?"

"As each person boards a bus or train, he will be handed parts of a television or radio set. He will be expected to assemble the set by the time he reaches his destination."

"What a boon to the gross national product!"

"The train conductor or bus driver will act as foreman, making sure the set is assembled correctly and passes inspection."

"What a blow to the Japanese electronics industry!" I said.

"EACH PASSENGER will be paid by piecework. Those who live far out on the island could put together two or three sets before they hit Pennsylvania Station. Those who live closer will have to content themselves with assembling one, though they will be entitled to overtime in the event the train is late."

"The Common Market is doomed!" I said.

"Once the passengers become more proficient, we could have them put together cameras, tape recorders and pocket calculators. The Long Island Railroad could become the longest assembly line in the world."

"Fantastic!" I said. "People would be fighting to take trains and buses. What about passengers who have to stand up?"

"They would be in charge of installing the vertical hold on the television sets," Greyhound said. "To make sure that no one goofs off, each bus line and railroad would have a quota. They would be expected to produce so many sets a day. If they didn't, their bus or train service would be cut off until the passengers agreed to up their production figures."

"THIS WOULD CERTAINLY put the railroads in the black," I said.

"More importantly, it will give the people a pride in riding the rails again. For years the glamor and fun of trains has been missing. But as soon as you give a passenger some useful work to do with his hands, he'll become a decent member of society."

Vietnam Has Turned Americans Away From Remainder Of World

WASHINGTON — Not the least part of the damage done by the Vietnam War is the way in which it has turned us in upon ourselves. We have become so absorbed in our own tragic entangelement that increasingly what is happening in the rest of the world is ignored.

This applies with particular force to the nearly four months of backing and filling in the now-you-see-it, now-you-don't attempt to reach a cease-fire. Without a single word of explanation from the President himself, the massive bombing of the north was turned on. That alienated peoples everywhere as almost no other move in the Vietnam War had done.

The media has a lot to answer for in the confused search for peace. It has been reported too often as though it were a tennis match or a prize fight. How many times on the television screens have we seen the arrivals and departures in Paris and in Saigon repeated ad nauseam, the long black limousines, the wave of greeting, the swift departure for a secret rendezvous. In defense of the media it must be said that, with so little of an official nature to go on, the only recourse was to record the to-ing and fro-ing across the oceans.

AS BANDIED ABOUT today, the word isolationist is entirely out of phase. That label came out of 1939 and 1940 and the concept of Fortress America. In the age of the intercontinental missile with a nuclear warhead, the isolationism of 30 years ago has little or no meaning.

Yet, as one consequence of the terrible involvement in Vietnam, withdrawal has a deep, compelling appeal. In his speech accepting the Democratic nomination for President at the Miami Beach convention, Sen. George McGovern repeated the refrain, "Come home, America." Whatever he may have meant beyond the rhetoric of a political appeal (and it was never made clear), this for the Republicans was equivalent to isolationism.

The preacher's son from the prairies of the West, the main source of that earlier isolationism, seemed to be bidding his fellow Americans to turn away from disastrous foreign adventures and begin to work on the evils besetting America. If that was his message — and it seemed to be reinforced by his repeated call for immediate withdrawal of American forces from Vietnam — the American electorate rejected it by an overwhelming majority.

NEVERTHELESS, the great middle mass, the President's silent majority, is responsive to this kind of appeal. No one knows it better than President Nixon himself. The evidence was in his inaugural address when he said:

"The time has passed when America will make every other nation's conflict our own, or make every other nation's future our responsibility, or presume to tell the people of other nations how to manage their own affairs."

That is a clear reaffirmation of withdrawal from the cold war crusade — the crusade that was the initial motivating cause of ietnam, to which Richard Nixon once subscribed with such ardor. He is engaged in creating a big power structure that he hopes will underwrite his generation of peace. Those who give him unfailing support seem convinced that the Metternichian diplomacy of Henry Kissinger cannot fail.

THIS IS CERTAINLY not isolationism. To the isolationists of the past, big power diplomacy was a work of the devil meant to draw innocent Americans into the trap of the Old World's quarrels. In the refrain, "Come home, America," something of this same suspicion was implied.

The case is put more politely by the discerning correspondent of the London Sunday Times, Henry Brandon, in his forthcoming book, "The Retreat of American Power." The question is whether it is to be an orderly retreat and not one forced by past hopes and future economies.

If peace now is at hand after so many false alarms, one must ask whether the continuing goal will be to prop up President Thieu in Saigon with a costly apparatus in Southeast Asia and in Vietnam itself. After the billions of aid Thieu has received, that will be merely to continue the war in another disguise.

Costly Education Innovations Produce Disappointing Results

By JOHN W. GILBAUGH
(Professor of Education, California State University, San Jose)

The search for educational panaceas has cost the American taxpayer millions of dollars. And worse than the squandered money has been the loss of educational opportunities to an undetermined number of American children and youth.

The Ford Foundation, a tax-exempt organization, has just issued a report which reveals that the $30 million it spent during the decade of the '60s on educational innovation failed to produce expected results. The money was spent to back experimental programs which were to serve as models for all of American education. Programs similar to those sponsored by the Ford Foundation provided the bases for virtually unrestricted federal grants to education. The amount estimated for the current year may reach $146 million.

SOME OF THE IDEAS may have been good, and under proper circumstances might have succeeded. Paul Nachtigal, a Colorado educator, in his pessimistic report on Ford Foundation educational activities attributed the disappointing results to human failures. Leadership, or lack of it, was a primary cause for the lackluster achievements of many experimental programs. The turnover in personnel at the directorship level had devastating results for the enthusiasm of originators of experiments. Keen interest in a program generally waned with each newly appointed director. Jealousy also reportedly figured prominently in the less-than-successful results obtained in other programs. Administrators, teachers, and school board members who were not sufficiently involved in the programs not only refused to support them, but in some instances openly opposed them.

Nachtigal, in his independent evaluation, along with other members of his team formed to study the results of Ford Foundation-sponsored educational projects, reportedly criticized the roles played by college and university educational theorists.

Virtually all of them — that is the theorists — had been away from the classroom so long they found themselves out of touch with reality in areas of specialization in which they should have been acknolwedged experts.

EVEN MUCH of the new gadgetry used to revolutionize education to make it better for all American children and youth lost its novelty. Consequently some of it is gathering dust.

What about many of the other innovations that have now become standardized in contemporary American education? Flexible scheduling, which in theory sends educational theorists into a state of euphoria, in practice has converted some school systems into toal chaos. Team teaching? There is no evidence that the academic achievement of children and youth has risen under the plan. And what about programmed instruction? It has yet to prove its superiority over the use of conventional textbooks.

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

Now that we've liberated women in the home, they're demanding to be turned loose down at the office.

Instead of a grey flannel suit, today's business executive sports a gay silk miniskirt.

At home she wears the pants.

It's confusing for a child to be tied to his mother's apron strings now that dad is wearing the apron.

Liberated women have demonstrated their ability to make good in the world of commerce by giving their husbands the business.

Not far from Jericho the Jordan River slips gently into the Dead Sea. Here millions of gallons of fresh water daily become part of the saltiest body of water on earth — six times more salty than any ocean. It is known, too, as the lowest spot on earth.

This area figures persistently in the Bible. And, with the route Jesus would have taken over mountain passes on his way to Jerusalem, He must have looked down many times at this large body of water and the barren stillness surrounding it — such a contrast to the lush green areas found all along the banks of the Jordan.

In 1947 a Bedouin boy cast a stone at random into one of the many isolated caves that riddle the hilly terrain. He heard something shatter and ran. Some time later he returned with a friend to discover several large stone jars crammed with scrolls. A 2,000-year-old religious library had been found — the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Abortion Ruling Religious Bomb

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Depsite the U.S. Supreme Court decision removing legal restrictions on early abortions, the question of their morality still remains dynamite in American religious convictions.

It is not simply a difference between religious groups, but runs explosively through all of them, Protestant, Jewish and Roman Catholic.

The official position of many Protestant denominations, along with that of the Roman Catholic Church, is strongly antiabortion, despite exceptions of some theologians in both groups and some Protestant bodies.

Eastern Orthodox churches and orthodox Judaism also sharply oppose abortion, while reform and conservative Judiasm have favored easing laws against it.

So sharp and sensitive are the differences over the matter that a cooperative organization of most major Protestant and Orthodox bodies, the National Council of Churches, has been unable — in four years of trying — to formulate a modern stand on it.

"The new permissiveness of the law confronts the churches with a greater, more urgent responsibility than before," Dr. R. H. Edwin Espy, general secretary of the council, said of the High court ruling.

"With the legal restraints removed, it is more essential that the religious dimensions be brought to bear to help people make a responsible decision, not only the pregnant woman, but doctors and all those involved."

Other religious leaders also said the court decision, although striking out legal barriers to abortions in the first three months, does not resolve the religious-ethical issue.

This simply is left up to the individuals, their consciences and the influence of their religious guides.

"One trusts in the decency and good sense of the American people not to let an illogical court decision dictate to them on . . . morality and human life," said John Cardinal Krol, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

While the matter now is left to individual choice, the conflict over it rolls on in religious circles, and among ethicists in biological sciences.

"Changing of laws does not change people's convictions about a practice," says Methodist theologian J. Robert Nelson, of Boston University.

The question has produced one of the keenest moral battles of the century. In numerous Protestant and Jewish bodies, it has brought about revisions of their former antiabortion stands.

At the heart of the struggle has been question of just when a human life begins.

Judeo-Christianity, emphasizing the sacred worth of each person, originally held that life began at conception and that a developing fetus thus constituted life as precious as after birth.

Modern genetics reinforced this view, contends Portestant moral theologian Paul Ramsey of Princeton University. "Genetics teaches us that we were from the beginning what we essentially still are in every cell."

Early Christianity and Judaism condemned abortion along with infanticide, both of which were permitted in ancient pagan societies.

But in modern times, amid rising concern for population control and women's rights, numerous Protestant groups have urged removal of legal prohibitions on abortion, leaving it to individual choice in early stages.

This position, taken by the Supreme Court, has been officially endorsed by the United Church of Christ, the United Presbyterian Church, the Lutheran Church in America and the United Methodist Church.

Other Protestants insist abortion be limited to cases endangering the mother's life or in cases of rape, incest or fetal deformity. Versions of this position have been taken by Southern Baptists, the Episcopal Church, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, the National Association of Evangelicals and the National Baptist Convention, a black denomination.

Blacks and other minorities in the churches generally have fought liberalized abortion policies, calling them genocidal.

Film To Probe The Wonders Found In Nature

How do we account for the marvels of nature we see around us? Are they the result of blind chance? These questions are examined in the film, "Dust or Destiny," to be shown at Calvary Baptist Church in Larkspur at 7:00 p.m. tomorrow.

Rev. David A. Tucker, the pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, says, "This is an excellent opportunity for parents, students, and educators to become better informed on the current creation/evolution controversy."

The public showing of the film will be at the Church at Baltimore and Holcomb Avenues in Larkspur.

SINGING GROUP — Members of "The Liberated Wailing Wall," a singing group of Jewish Christians who will appear tomorrow evening at Marin Evangelical Free Church, are (from left) Barry Ellegant, Steffi Geiser, Miriam Sleichter, Shelley Korotkin and Sam Nadler.

Marin Evangelical Free Church Will Feature 'Jews For Jesus'

Marin Evangelical Free Church of San Rafael will feature a special presentation of the controversial "Jews for Jesus" group tomorrow at 7 p.m.

Moishe Rosen, spokesman for the "Jews for Jesus" will speak and a group of these Jewish Christians, called "The Liberated Wailing Wall," will share in song, testimony, and dramatic presentation their attitudes and outlooks since accepting their Messiah Jesus.

The story of these young Jews is one of completion in Christ — and how Jesus made them to be more Jewish.

Last March, the Northern California Board of Rabbis announced an official policy of intolerance against this group. "The Jews for Jesus movement," the board said at that time, "represents a form of apostasy." Since that time, "Jews for Jesus" have been unwelcome in synagogues and youth centers in the Jewish community.

Sam Nadler, former dope dealer and now a member of the Jews for Jesus" presentation group, expresses hope that the day will soon arrive when the group will be welcome in the synagogues and Jewish center by their fellow Jews. "If the rabbis looked at the Old Testament with open hearts, I'm certain they would see Jesus' name written clearly between the lines."

Another of the group's members says "There is a real fulfillment in Jesus. Now that I am a Christian, I know what it means to be a Jew!"

Pastor Sam Walberg of Marin Evangelical Free Church in San Rafael said the 7 p.m. Sunday service is open to all who would like to hear these Jews for Jesus tell of their beliefs and their work.

Casper In Front By Four Strokes In Crosby Golf

By JOE SARGIS

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Veterans Billy Casper and Orville Moody, two fellows who almost faded from view last year, opened up daylight on the field in the $205,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am today mostly because they putted well when everyone else didn't.

Casper, coming off his worst year since 1963 and a sore back that laid him up seven weeks, started play in the third round at Pebble Beach today after literally taking apart Cypress Point and Spyglass Hill. Billy shot an opening round 66 at Cypress and added a 67 at Spyglass Friday to bring his 36-hole scores to an imposing 11-under-par 133.

Moody, the former Army sergeant who came out of obscurity to win the 1969 U.S. Open title and then went into near eclipse last year in a fight with his sponsors, almost kept pace with Casper, opening with a 71 at Spyglass and adding on a 66 at Pebble Beach for a 36-hole score of seven-under 137.

Both dropped some exceptional putts, all the more glittering because they came over greens still wet from nearly a month of continuous rain. The sun beamed down Friday but it wasn't strong enough to dry out the three Crosby seaside courses.

"Sure, I'm surprised with my putting," said Casper, "but I'm not questioning what is happening. I only wish it continues at least for two more rounds."

"I started to play well last fall," said Moody, "but I guess no one noticed. I'm not all that surprised with my play here but like Billy, I'm not going to try to figure out what is happening. I'll take it with no questions asked."

Casper sank birdie putts of 30, 25, 18, 15, 14, 8 and 5 feet during Friday's round, which he started with an ache in his back.

"Once the putts started dropping," said Casper, "I forgot all about my back. When you are playing well its not at all difficult to keep your concentration."

Moody had birdy putts of 50, 15, 15, 10, and 4 feet, and six inches twice. The two 15 footers came on uphill putts.

"I didn't play much last year because I had too many personal problems (with his sponsors)," said Moody, "and when I have outside problems, I can't play well. Some fellows out here (on the tour) have a way of blocking things out. I can't, so I stayed around Texas last fall and played in some local events."

Moody didn't do badly, though, picking up more than $26,000 in those local tournaments compared to only $13,000 on the tour. Now all that is behind him and he is ready for a full year of play.

Jack Nicklaus, who never seems to have problems on or off the course, ran into a triple bogey on the 17th hole at Cypress in the second round Friday or otherwise he could have been up there with Casper and Moody. Jack finished with a 69 that left him in a tie with young Don Iverson of LaCrosse, Wis., at four-under 140, seven strokes off the pace.

Gibby Gilbert, Ray Floyd, Bobby Nichols and Don Massengale were at 141 while Tom Weiskopf, Doug Sanders, Ianny Wadkins, Maurice Verbugge and Dave Marr were at 142.

Arnold Palmer, who said he missed eight makeable birdie putts, shot a second round 73 and was at one over 145, while Lee Trevino who was second to Nicklaus in the money race last year, bagged a 70 and was at 144.

Portions of today's third round, after which the cut will be made, will be televised nationally as will two hours of Sunday's windup. Both days the action will be from Pebble Beach.

RIPS REDWOOD

Drake Takes League Lead

By LEW CODDINGTON

In a manner which was certainly convincing, if not astonishing, Drake High School took over first place in the Marin County Athletic League basketball standings last night by annihilating Redwood, 81-60, before 1,100 delighted fans in San Anselmo.

Don Asay scored 16 points, Eddie Joe Chavez 14 and Rick Herbert 13 for the Pirates, who improved their MCAL record to 5-2, a game better than Redwood, Novato, Marin Catholic and Terra Linda.

"I was totally satisfied," said Drake coach Pete Hayward. "The kids played the way they should. I think Redwood probably used up a lot of adrenal in against Novato (a 67-66 victory Tuesday), but we would have been tough against anybody tonight."

Drake held a 25-15 lead early in the second quarter, but Redwood cut the margin to 27-25 and it looked like a close game would ensue, as befits two teams tied for the league lead. No such thing happened. The Pirates went on a sustained surge to make the score 62-37 at the end of the third quarter, outscoring Redwood 35-12 over the stretch.

Drake went on to build the margin up to 27 points on two occasions before mass substitution occured. In the waning minutes, the Pirate fans let loose with their "80 cheer," reserved for when the team reaches the 80-point plateau, which it narrowly missed in several non-league games.

Drake made 13 of 21 shots from the floor in the pivotal third period, and held Redwood to five of 15. "They're notorious as a third-quarter team," said Giant coach Dick Hart. "They're a good team with a good bench and they deserved to win."

Asay, a 5-foot-11 senior forward, is an example of the "good bench," although he may not be sitting there again for quite a while. Tabbed by Hayward for his first start of the league season Tuesday against San Rafael, he responded with 16 points, starting again last night, he got 16 more.

The victory was the first for the Pirates over Redwood since the championship season of 1967, when Drake won, 52-47, on Feb. 24. The Giants won the intervening 10 games.

Mike Connor scored 23 points for Redwood to lead all scorers. The Giants were playing without forward John Troppmann, down with the flu.

There was a wide disparity in the teams' performances at the free throw line, though it did not account for the whole point spread. Drake made 15 of 26 free throws; Redwood just four of 11.

Terra Linda Turns Back Novato Cagers, 67-63

By TOM THOMPSON

Novato High School's basketball team may be forming some peculiar habits.

For the second time in as many games, the Hornets dropped far behind early, tied it up late, and finally fell to some near perfect free-throw shooting in the closing minutes to lose to Terra Linda 67-63, in a Marin County Athletic League contest on the winners' court.

The loss dropped Novato into a four-way tie for second place with Terra Linda, Marin Catholic and Redwood with 4-3 records, one full game behind first place Drake, and a half game ahead of idle San Marin.

Tuesday, Novato, again for the second consecutive game, lost it on the free throw line, sinking only three of nine, while Terra Linda was 13 of 19, eight of 10 in the crucial fourth quarter. Terra Linda committed only 11 fouls to the visitors' 15.

Last night it was Nick Mattos who did the Hornets in, sinking two free throws with 1:17 left to play, making the score 65-59, and putting the game away, as about 800 fans looked on.

Mattos, finishing with 11 points, got much assistance from teammate Mark Lowey, who had 27 points and leads the league in scoring. Trojan coach Bob Corley also lauded Brian Morey in his first start of the year at center. Morey scored 10 and Scott Logan 14.

Joe Powell scored 22 for the losers and Curtis Saine contributed 14.

Terra Linda jumped out to a 15-7 first-quarter lead and built it to 17 points with 2:41 left in the first half. The Hornets outscored the hosts 9-2 to cut the margin to 10 at halftime. Second half play saw both teams battling almost evenly until Novato began to rally with about four minutes left in the game.

Powell rattled off five straight baskets to tighten the score to 57-54 with 3:22 showing on the clock. Dan Del Rose then sank a free throw, stole the ball, and fed it to Willie Barnes, who tied the score at 57-57.

Ironically, the Hornets seemed to let down after that, as the Trojans scored six consecutive points to set up Mattos' winning free throws.

It was the sixth time in a row Novato's games have been decided by four points or less.

Marin 'Cats Defeat San Rafael

By ROB MILLER

Playing what coach Dave Gonsalves considered "our type of game — a slow game," Marin Catholic High School scored a 38-34 basketball victory over the San Rafael Bulldogs last night on the Wildcats' court.

The game, viewed by 500, was Marin Catholic's third straight win, giving them a 4-3 Marin County Athletic League mark. It was also San Rafael's fifth straight loss. The Bulldogs are now 2-5 in MCAL action.

Gonsalves explained, "By a slow game I mean we slowed it up enough to where we could keep up with the bigger San Rafael team.

"We went with our small team and we still did well on the boards due to Ben Partee and Mike and Dan Mahoney." Partee pulled down 16 rebounds giving him a total of 63 in seven games, and the Mahoneys each had seven.

The game was marred by a fight in the fourth quarter when Marin Catholic's Tom Cronin decked the Bulldogs' Guy Perry. Perry hit the floor hard, and was unconscious for several minutes. According to San Rafael coach Bret Tovani last night, Perry is suffering from "a probable broken nose and concussion." He was to see his private physician today.

Tovani said after the game, "If Marin Catholic can't beat you on the court, they'll do it any way they can. And if that's the way they want to play, then we don't want to win that badly."

The Bulldogs were never able to take the lead from the 'Cats after the third quarter. After Perry went down, both teams were fired up, but San Rafael's shooting was off. By the time Marin Catholic's Paul Bartolini sank a fielder with four seconds left, it was all over.

The Wildcats had the game scoring advantage, with 40 per cent from the floor, and 43 per cent from the line. San Rafael had a dismal 25 per cent and 53 per cent from the line.

High scorers for Marin Catholic were Mike Mahoney and Bill Reilly, each with 14 points. For San Rafael, high man was Byron Stewart with 13. Stewart led the Bulldogs in rebounding with 13.

San Rafael	10	5	9	10	— 34
Marin Catholic	9	10	7	12	— 38

San Rafael — Gallivan 2-0-4, Stewart 5-3-13, D'Ambra 1-0-2, Perry 2-0-4, E. Ellingson 2-1-5, Meyers 1-4-6. Totals: 13-8-34.

Marin Catholic — M. Mahoney 5-4-14, D. Mahoney 1-0-2, Partee 3-0-6, Reilly 6-2-14, Bartolini 1-0-2. Totals: 16-6-38.

EXAMINER GAMES

George Woods Is Top Performer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Bulky George Woods outpushed his U. S. Olympic teammates and a badly-beaten Olympic gold medalist Wladyslaw Komar of Poland Friday to highlight the Examiner All-American indoor track meet at the Cow Palace Friday night.

The 300-pound Woods, who won the shot in the 1968 Examiner games and finished second at Munich, tossed the 16-pound ball 68' 6 ½ on his third throw to beat defending champion Al Feuerbach by two inches. His efforts won Woods the award as the meet's top performer.

Feuerbach got off his throw of 68-4 ½ on his first try. Woods moved into the lead with a throw of 68-5 ¾ on his second throw and then improved on his next try.

Brian Oldfield was third at 64-10 ½ while Komar never got his rhythm and finished last at 62-2 ½.

One other Olympic medalist came through, however, when young Randy Williams of USC, the 1972 king, beat 1968 world record setter Bob Beaman in a 26-2 ¼ to 26-0¼ long jump.

The high jump also saw a classic matchup between an old champ and a new one. Olympic medalist Dwight Stones and world record holder Pat Matzdorf battled to a tie before Matzdorf won in a jumpoff at 7 feet 2.

In the 60 yard dash, Chuck Smith of the Southern California Striders breezed to a 6.1 clocking to nip Willie Deckard of the California track club at the tape.

Martin McGrady of California international made a shambles of the open 440 yard dash with an easy victory in 49.1 Former UCLA star John Smith, who has been ill with flu all week, ran fourth.

Marty Liquori, making a comeback after an injury, finished strong to beat Tracy Smith in the two mile. Liquori took the lead with a little less than two laps remaining and won by 15 yards in a time of 8:42.0.

Lance Babb of California International, a last minute entrant, whipped Jerry Wilson of the Southern California Striders in the 60 yard high hurdles with a time of 7.1.

Unheralded Mark Winzinreid scored the major upset by defeating Olympic champion Dave Wottle in the 880-yard dash.

Winzinreid, former University of Wisconsin star, led all the way to win in 1:51.3. Wottle made a strong bid on the final tap and was timed in 1:53.1.

The closest race of the night came in the final event when Kenya's Kip Keino surged through the final 50 yards to beat Duncan McDonald of West Valley Track Club by inches. Both runners were timed in 4:03.8.

McDonald had grabbed the lead with 2 ½ laps to go and built up the margin to 12 yards before Keino closed fast to win.

After the meet, Keino apologized for not going faster.

He said he had wanted to run under 4 minutes and lead all the way, but was surprised to see McDonald move out ahead.

A standing-room only crowd of 13,955 watched the action.

The flop of the night was the pole vault. Swedish aces Hans Lagerquist bowed out with an injury early in the competition and former world record holder Kjell Isakkson withdrew after the bar went to the 17-foot level.

The final two competitors in the vault, Vic Dias and Bob Stovar of the Bay Area Striders, couldn't clear 17 feet so the bar was lowered to 16-6 where they finished in a tie.

Volleyball Game Set

The medical staffs of Kaiser-Permanente Medical Center of Terra Linda and Marin General Hospital of Greenbrae will meet in a volleyball game dubbed the Bed Pan Bowl Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Redwood High School gym in Larkspur. Admission is free.

KLOPFER WINS IN A WALK

San Rafael High School's two race-walking teachers, Goetz Klopfer and Bill Ranney, recorded a 1-2 sweep of the two-mile walk last night in the San Francisco Examiner All-America track meet at the Cow Palace.

Klopfer, affiliated with the Stockton Racewalkers, won the event in 14:12.4, while Ranney, of Oakland's Athens Track Club, was second in 14:20.2.

Marin Cagers Host Tough West Valley

The first mate will be in charge of the Tars tonight when West Valley College of Campbell visits Kentfield for a vital Camino Norte Conference basketball game against College of Marin at 8 o'clock.

For the second straight game, Marin assistant Jim Webster will run the team. Head coach John Panagakis has caught the flu and yesterday morning said, "I may not even show up at the game if I don't feel any better than his."

There will be no more important junior college game played in the state tonight. Marin has a 17-2 record and is ranked No. 2 in California, while West Valley is 16-3 and rated No.3.

Marin leads the conference with a 4-0 record, but West Valley is 3-1 after an 80-77 loss to Skyline of San Bruno last Saturday night, so the game takes on a special urgency for the Vikings.

"We will have to counteract their (Marin's) quickness," said West Valley coach El Brown. "They are quicker than we are, and there's no weakness in their starting lineup."

"Three things make West Valley an outstanding team," said Webster. "Their balance, their press, and the fact that they play with intensity all the time.

"We've been working in practice against their press. We had a chance to work on it Tuesday (in a 77-54) victory over Cosumnes River Junior College of Sacramento, Webster's junior college head coaching debut.) We had trouble at first but later we began to do all right."

Marin forward Wil Garner is tied for the conference lead in scoring, according to statistics released by Junior College Athletic Bureau in San Mateo. He and Stan Foster of Solano each have per-game averages of 18.0. The only other Tar in the top 20 is guard Joe DeMaestri, 13th at 13.5.

Balanced West Valley has no scorers in the top 10 but four in the second 10, led by 11th-place Paul Boskovich, a 6-foot-5 center. Tim Walsh, a 6-8 forward, is averaging 13.3, while 5-11 guard Rick Hile checks in at 13.0 and 6-3 forward Bruce Batnich at 10.0.

All are sophomores. So is 5-11 Tim Tolbert, who alternates at guard with 6-1 Enver Apaydin.

Marin center Neil Traub is a doubtful starter for the game due to abdominal pains which first struck him earlier this week. He does not have appendicitis, as originally feared, Webster said.

Other minor aches plague the Tars, but Webster said "We've been practicing well this week and we'll be ready."

"Marin is as good a club as we've seen all year," said Brown. That's a strong statement, since West Valley has played 10th-ranked Santa Barbara, 14th-ranked Santa Monica, third-ranked small division power Cuesta of San Luis Obispo, and Brown has scouted fourth-ranked Long Beach and top-ranked Allan Hancock of Santa Maria.

Warriors, Lakers Rematch Tonight

OAKLAND (UPI) — If the Los Angeles Lakers are going to win it all without Happy Hairston, it's going to be defense that does it for them.

Playing a crucial game against their Pacific Division archrivals at home Friday night, the Lakers put the clamps on Rick Barry and came away with a 100-84 victory over the Golden State Warriors.

The teams play again tonight, this time at Oakland Coliseum Arena, starting at 8 o'clock.

Coach Bill Sharman called Friday night's game the Lakers' second best defensive outing of the season.

"We caught them on a cold night and we played a very good defensive game," Sharman said. "It probably was our best defensive game of the year except for our game against the New York Knicks (a 95-88 win) here last weekend.

"Tonight (Jim) McMillian did one heckuva job on Barry."

Giving three inches away in height, the 6-foot-5 McMillian held the Warriors' high-scoring forward to his lowest point total of the season, 13.

Barry connected on only 6 of 20 field goal attempts but didn't appear to be bothered by a sprained ankle which caused him to miss Tuesday night's All-Star game at Chicago.

"You just have to play a lot closer," explained McMillian, "and not give him a shot."

In addition, McMillian scored 10 of his 14 points in a pivotal third quarter that saw Los Angeles increase an 11-point halftime bulge into an 86-59 runaway.

Jerry West led the Lakers' attack with 22 points while Bill Bridges popped in 18 points.

New Coach, Another Loss

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Kevin Loughery can take only one solace from his debut as a National Basketball Association coach—he's still 46 losses better off than his predecessor.

The Philadelphia 76ers took the court for the first time under the new leadership of Loughery Friday night and walked off it just as they had done 47 times under former Coach Roy Rubin—as losers.

Loughery, though, displayed the wisdom of a veteran coach as he put the blame for the 105-100 setback at Cleveland squarely on himself.

"It was my fault that (Lenny) Wilkens had a good night," said the 32-year-old Loughery. "He made the difference. I just waited too long to make the adjustments on him."

Wilkens, a former coach himself at Seattle, led all scorers with 28 points, including 20 of them in the second half. Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch agreed that his backcourt man was the difference, explaining, "Wilkens reeled off 10 straight points that gave us a 90-82 lead and they couldn't catch us."

Philadelphia, which has won only four of its 52 games, actually outshot the Cavs from the field, 84-70, but made only 16 of 28 free throw attempts to 35 of 42 for Cleveland. the victory was the eighth in 11 games for the Cavs in January, the best month of their three-year history.

Fred Carter led the 76ers with 25 points, including 13 in the final period.

Another player who suffered some bad luck Friday night was Bill Bridges of Los Angeles, who needed 19 points to reach the 10,000-point plateau for his career. He popped in 18 points, only to have referee Mendy Rudolph disallow a basket at the final buzzer that would have put him over the top.

Nevertheless, the Lakers walloped Golden State, 100-84, to stretch their Pacific Division lead to 5 1-2 games over the Warriors.

The Boston Celtics, racing off to a 47-24 first quarter lead, stretched their Atlantic Division lead to 2 1-2 games over idle New York by beating the Houston Rockets, 139-126, and in other action Friday night the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Detroit Pistons, 117-105, the Chicago Bulls beat the Baltimore Bullets, 110-100, the Atlanta Hawks crushed the Buffalo Braves, 118-82, and the Phoenix Suns beat the Portland Trail Blazers, 120-116.

TIME MACHINE

Pale Little Finn Steals The Show

The golden horns sound their ancient summons as once again a flock of pigeons fly out of a grand stadium on a beautiful summer day. The Olympic Games of Paris, 1924, have begun.

The United States has sent a team of 300 athletes to these games. Their strongest competition figures to come from a small but proud team from Finland, which has only 60 members.

A young American swimmer, John Weissmuller, wins three gold medals, while his Yank teammates in the track and field competition sweep the shotput and win most of the short races. But the Finns stay right behind with an awesome display of distance running.

They purport to have superior training methods for the long races. As proof, Finnish distance star Willie Ritola sets two world records in winning the 3,000 meter steeplechase and the 10,000 meter run.

Another countryman does even more. He is a pale little Finn named Paavo Nurmi. Nurmi enters the 1500 and 5000 meter races. Both are to be run within an hour and fifteen minutes of each other. Nevertheless, Nurmi, running with a stopwatch in hand, wins them both.

At the start of the grueling 10,000 meter cross country run, 39 entrants trot out of the stadium on a very hot afternoon. The heat takes its toll, as many runners collapse on the Paris roads. A half hour later, a lone runner returns to the stadium. It's Paavo Nurmi, running easily and breezing to his third gold medal.

In the 3,000 meter relay the Finns, with Nurmi, win again. The Finns have lost the unofficial team medal competition to the United States, 255 to 166, but they have maintained their world dominance of distance running. Yet the most memorable feature of this Olympics will have to be the great running of Paavo Nurmi, who has astonishingly won four gold medals.

Seals Fight Back, Hold Blues To Tie

OAKLAND (UPI) — The California Golden Seals now lead the league in two departments —one so-so and the other disastrous.

They achieved their 12th tie Friday night when they held a St. Louis team that hasn't tasted defeat in its last six contests to a 1-1 standoff.

But they also had their third winger injured when Craig Patrick suffered a slash in his lower leg that is expected to sideline him for at least a week.

Scoring ace Joey Johnson has his jaw wired and won't be back in action until late next week and Gary Croteau has a knee injury that is expected to sideline him for some time.

More than 7,000 fans turned out to watch Stan Weir's goal in the first period almost stand up until Gary Unger hit in the final stanza to achieve the tie.

But the real stars of the show were goalies Gilles Meloche of the Seals and Wayne Stephenson of the Seals who each made some sensational stops.

Gabriel Wants To Be Traded

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Roman Gabriel wants to be traded from the Los Angeles Rams to the Washington Redskins and his former Ram coach, George Allen, a personal friend of his said Friday night.

Stu Nahan of KABC-TV said he learned that Garbiel had called new Rams' coach Chuck Knox to inform him of his wishes.

The Rams Wednesday announced the hiring of Knox, 40, and the firing of Tommy Prothro and Thursday obtained quarterback John Hadl from the San Diego Chargers in a trade for defensive end Coy Bacon and running back Bob Thomas.

High-Flying Vallejo Rips Petaluma

Petaluma High School was blown out of the gym in the first quarter last night, as the visiting Vallejo Apaches took a 21-point lead and rode it to a 70-55 North Bay League basketball victory.

The loss drops the Trojans' league record to 2-4.

"They just dominated the ball game," Petaluma coach Mark Resichling commented after the game. "They had a super first quarter and we were just cold. (Venson) Washington dominated the boards for them."

The Trojans were behind 38-16 at halftime, but won the second half with a big 26-point fourth quarter, 39-30. By that time, however, Vallejc was playing its second team.

The Apaches are the number one ranked school in the Redwood Empire, and Reischling agrees with the polls. "They have the potential to be the best team we've faced all year," he aid. "They are super quick and play well together."

Washington led all scorers with 24 points and Beavers added 14. Kirk Smartt paced Petaluma with 14 points.

St. Vincent In Cage Victory Over Tomales

Bob Vyenielo and Dan Tocchini scored 41 points between them last night to lead St. Vincent High School of Petaluma to a 70-59 North Central League II victory over the visiting Tomales Braves.

The victory upped the Mustangs' league mark to 3-0 so they remain tied with Point Arena, which upset Kelseyville, 66-51, last night. Tomales is 0-3 in league play.

Vyenielo put in 21 points and Tocchini added 20 for his season high. "Besides doing all the scoring, those two kids dominated the boards," Tomales coach Jim Clahan commented. Rob Loughran scored 14 points for the Mustangs.

Tomales was led by season long scoring leader Russ Sartori, 18 points, and playmaker Spirito Ballatore, 17.

Redwood J.V. Streak Ended

Drake High School's junior varsity basketball team handed Redwood its first Marin County Athletic League loss of the year last night, 45-41, in San Anselmo, to move into a tie for first place with the Giants at 6-1.

Pirate Steve Harnsberger hit two free throws with 29 seconds left in the game to make the score 44-41 and seal the win. Steve Parsons had 12 points for the hosts.

In other games last night, Novato held off a late rally by Terra Linda to win, 62-47, behind George DiRuchio's 22 points and Les Nicholini's 13, and San Rafael outscored Marin Catholic, 50-38.

Cardinal Newman Tops Rancho Cotate

By PAUL DWORIN

Budding art students could take a lesson in the use of contrast from Cardinal Newman High School basketball coach Jack Fitzgerald.

Last night Fitzgerald had his Cardinals running for the first three quarters to build up a seven-point lead, but when host Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park cut the gap to one point with five minutes to play, the Santa Rosa school went to the stall game to protect its lead and ended up with a 50-44 Sonoma County League victory.

The loss, which was the Cougars' third straight in SCL play, dropped Rancho Cotate's league mark to 2-3, three games behind the undefeated Cardinals. "I'm not conceding a damn thing yet," Cougar coach Mike Francis said.. "We could still catch them, with some help."

Cardinal Newman held a 43-38 lead one minute into the fourth quarter, but two baskets by Mike Sanchez and another by Marshall Brant cut the margin to 43-42. Fitzgerald then put on the stall, which succeeded in opening up the lane and allowing Joel Faller and Jerry Robinson to put in two uncontested lay-ups each.

"It was an effective stall," Francis commented. "It's tough playing a really quick team in the stall because you have to respect their quickness going to the basket and that lets them pass the ball around outside until someone gets open underneath."

Cardinal Newman outscored the Cougars 8-2 in the first three minutes of the game, as the Cardinals' full-court press and man-to-man defense caused repeated turnovers. The Cougars had 25 for the game.

Brant was high point man for the game with 23, making nine of 12 shots from the field.

Frosh Basketball

John Riccardi came off the bench to score two key baskets in the fourth quarter, including the game-winner on a driving layup with less than a minute left, as Marin Catholic High School's freshman basketball team rallied from an eight-point third-quarter deficit to defeat Redwood yesterday, 34-33. The important Marin County Athletic League victory left Marin Catholic unbeaten at 7-0 and dropped Redwood to 5-2.

Terra Linda Wrestlers Take Lead

Terra Linda High School added a few knots to the already tangled Marin County Ahletic League wrestling race yesterday by defeating Redwood, 34-21, to move into first place with a 4-1 record.

Previously unbeaten Redwood fell to second place at 3-1, followed at 2-1 by idle Tamalpais and by San Rafael, which beat San Marin yesterday, (score unavailable).

The tangle comes from the fact that Redwood beat Tam, Tam beat Terra Linda, and now Terra Linda has beaten Redwood.

Trojan heavyweight Jon Loberg pinned Redwood's Ted Adams to remain undefeated, and has allowed only one of his estimated 15-20 matches to go the distance.

"Of course, we always rely on Mark Egide (114 pounds) and Mike Weinstein (122)," said Terra Linda coach Bob Hetherington. "Reggie Grant (135) also came through. And those were big victories by Tim Bennett (156) and Mike Thornton (167), each winning 2-0."

Terra Linda 4-1, Redwood 3-1, San Rafael 2-1, Tamalpais 2-1, San Marin 2-2, Novato 0-3, Drake 0-4.

WITNESS TO HISTORY

Pilot Remembers The Red Baron

By FRANK FARRARA

Yellowed, worn films of World War I airplanes flickered on a small screen at Novato High School yesterday and the image of the legendary fighter pilot, Baron Manfred von Richtofen, the "Red Baron," flashed by.

Seated at the rear of the room watching impassively was a trim, silver-haired man "in his middle 70s," who was there when the Red Baron was shot down in a dogfight over France.

The onlooker was Capt. O. C. "Boots" LeBoutillier, last surviving aerial witness to the death of the Red Baron, who was flying with a Royal Air Force group that tangled with von Richtofen's "Flying Circus" April 21, 1918.

LeBoutillier, commander of Flight B, 209 Squadron, said, "There were 15 of us and four were knocked down so there were 11 of us and 28 of them."

Von Richtofen, flying a red triplane, was shot down by Capt. Roy Brown, LeBoutillier said. "Brown made a pass in front of me and I could see his tracers going in, and the triplane went down.

"We didn't know at the time that it was the Red Baron," he said.

Australian ground crews claimed they had shot von Richtofen down with ground fire, but the pilots were convinced that "Brown got him," LeBoutillier said.

The World War I ace with six kills to his credit was speaking to a class, part of an all-day teachers institute at Novato High School.

LeBoutillier, a native of Montclair, N.J., said he was a young pilot with "about five minutes' flying time," when he went to Canada, "lied about my age" and headed for the Royal Air Force.

"They told me we'd be in big flying boats over the North Sea observing and going after submarines, but that never materialized, so they put me in pursuit planes."

His first flight in England was a disaster when he was assigned to a plane he wasn't familiar with and crashed into a stone fence.

"They gave me a second chance," he said. With only 29 hours' of flying time, he was sent into combat.

At first, the planes had one machine gun on top of the wing that fired over the propeller, but in 1917, the machine gun was synchronized with the propeller, he recalled.

He praised the Sopwith Camel, called Camel because it had a hump in it, as "the finest airplane on either side... otherwise I wouldn't be here today.

The Sopwith Camel "was a kind of a wicked airplane to fly. Some guys got killed just flying it, but it saved my bacon plenty of times."

LeBoutillier said he went down "the first time over the lines when I cartwheeled into barbed wire and the French pulled me out. They never sent you to the medics. You just put your goggles back on and went up again."

The life expectancy of a fighter pilot in combat "averaged 20 hours or three weeks," he said. "I didn't know it then and I'm glad I didn't."

There weren't any safety devices and no parachutes," LeBoutillier said.

"We lost a lot by fire. Today the planes are sophisticated and have all the safety devices but 50 years from now these airplanes will look like nothing."

Except for heavy fog at Newfoundland, LeBoutillier might have been one of the early flyers to cross the Atlantic.

He said he was attempting to fly the Atlantic carrying the girl friend of a friend.

"I made 1,200 miles to Newfoundland, but it was fog, fog, fog, and she wanted to go back to New York so I flew back to New York."

After the war, he had a career in commercial aviation, "made pictures in Hollywood, about 18," worked for the Civil Aviation Administration, and then entered private business, he said. He lives in Las Vegas.

LeBoutillier was the speaker last night at the start of a three-day conference of aerospace education workshop directors at Hamilton Air Force Base, sponsored by the Pacific Region of the Civil Air Patrol.

$8,000 Damage In Apartment Blaze

A fire that swept from the heating room of a San Rafael apartment and burned through a door to the hallway at 8:40 p.m. yesterday caused $8,000 damage, firemen reported today.

The fire at the Odesso Kelly residence, 155 Nova Albion Way, was sparked by combustibles too near a furnace, firemen said.

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip will visit Canada from July 31 to Aug. 4 for the beginning of the Commonwealth prime minister's conference, Buckingham Palace announced today.

Wallace In Satisfactory Condition

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George C. Wallace rested in a hospital today, recuperating from prostate surgery, his sixth operation since being paralyzed from the waist down by an assailant's bullets last May.

"His condition is satisfactory," said Billy Joe Camp, Wallace's news secretary. "He is alert and in good spirits. The governor's temperature and vital signs are normal."

The surgery, performed Friday at the University of Alabama Medical Center, was to correct an enlarged prostate gland and improve urinary drainage.

The enlarged prostate did not result from the shooting, but the enlarged gland hampered the flow of urine from the bladder, over which Wallace has no control, doctors said.

"The surgery on Gov. Wallace was completed as planned and without any complications," said Dr. George H. Myers Jr., the surgeon.

Camp said he did not know when Wallace would be released from the hospital.

FIRST PLUNGE HARDEST

A Love Affair With Diving

By SUSAN LYONS MIDDAUGH
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BINGHAMPTON, N.Y. — Marion Clayton Link didn't want to take that first dive. She didn't have much confidence in her swimming ability, and she was not used to the oxygen tank strapped to her back. But her husband's enthusiasm for hunting buried treasure was contagious, so she took the plunge.

At first her feet refused to stay below her head, and the fish frightened her a bit. But gradually, she was charmed by the quiet beauty of the deep-sea world. Somewhere beneath the waves was the start of Marion Link's love affair with diving, an affair that has brought her honor, adventure, publishing contracts, and her husband's wholehearted approval.

Since that day 20 years ago, Marion and Edwin A. Link, the aviation pioneer and retired industrialist, have explored the sunken cities of Caesarea and Port Royal. They've gone on expeditions for the National Geographic Society and the Smithsonian Institution.

They've recovered ancient Roman cooking pots from the Sea of Galilee; Grecian pottery from the harbor at Syracuse, Sicily; jewelry, coins, and grape shot from shipwrecks in the Florida Keys and the Caribbean. They've challenged an accepted theory about Christopher Columbus's first landing in the New World, and introduced a new one of their own.

MORE RECENTLY, however, Mr. and Mrs. Link have shifted their attention from gold doubloons and pieces of eight to fish farming and oceanography. What sparked the change was Ed Link's realization that treasure hunting is more of an engineering problem than an adventurer's riddle.

From his own experience, he knew there was no way a diver could live and work at great depths for an extended period of time. Many of the Greek sponge divers who tried it were killed. Others suffered from exhaustion, cold, and hunger, after decompressing for hours in the water.

As he had earlier worked to solve aviators' problems, now Link set out to tackle those of divers. First he developed an underwater air supply of helium and oxygen. Next he designed a rubberized diving suit for keeping the diver's body warm at great depths. Then, working in the organ loft and basement of his home, he built a model for a unique aluminum and Plexiglas submarine and tested the motors for it in a Sears Roebuck swimming pool. Finally, he designed the Johnson-Sea-Link, a 23-foot, 9½-ton five-man submersible, costing $450,000. (Link and J. Seward Johnson, of the pharmaceutical firm, donated the sub to the Smithsonian Institution.)

THE SEA-LINK, which looks like a helicopter, can accommodate a pilot and observer in its plexiglas bubble and three divers in its aluminum hull. It can carry a team of divers to a depth of 1,000 feet and stay there 48 hours. Once Sea-Link is settled on the ocean floor, the divers are free to enter and reenter the sub to study fish habits, plant life, rock and coral formations, even search for sunken ships and ancient artifacts.

Such freedom comes from being able to adjust the pressure in the chamber to that outside. The pressure will remain at that level until the diving team is back on board ship, and in a separate decompression chamber. The chamber, located in the stern of a former Coast Guard vessel, Sea Diver, now used by Sea-Link for research, is equipped with eating and sleeping facilities, as well as a lockout area for medical examinations.

But there is more to this sea picture of shipwrecks and submarines. Someone has to plan the expeditions, order food and supplies, keep records, and care for the guests and crew aboard Sea Diver.

ENTER MARION Link, quartermaster, hostess and secretary of the 100-foot vessel. She has coped with situations the average housewife never has to face — like ordering 700 pounds of meat at one time, and having 12 adults for breakfast, lunch, and dinner for days or weeks at a time. On one occasion Mrs. Link had to teach their Greek cook how to use electrical appliances.

"When Johnnie started to work for us 11 years ago, he didn't know the difference between a refrigerator and a freezer," she said in an interview. "What's more, he couldn't speak English." Mrs. Link resolved the problem by coaching Johnnie in English, and posting a small vocabulary list in the ship's galley.

Marion Link also doubles as a sailor. She keeps the ship's log and takes her turn on watch with the other members of the crew.

But perhaps her greatest contribution is that of writer. A former newspaper reporter, she has written two books about their expeditions and her husband's experiments. The second book will be published next spring by the Smithsonian Institution Press.

Her first book, "Sea Diver," is a detailed account of the preparation, hard work and mishaps that often make treasure hunting more struggle than sport. "If we find the (Santa) Maria," she once said, "all we expect are the remnants. Perhaps some fittings, a few cannonballs, maybe a cannon or two."

THE LINKS never did find Columbus's flagship, but they did locate what they claim is an anchor from the Santa Maria.

Calculations and research aside, finding a sunken ship is usually "accidental," said Mrs. Link.

Mrs. Link, straightforward as her writing style, cherishes few illusions about treasure hunting and its rewards. She knows how rough weather can cause diving delays, and the boredom that comes from waiting for calm seas. She has seen the attitudes of governments toughen toward treasure seekers, and divers become discouraged by permits and high taxes.

TOUGH AREA

Women In Blue Patrol New York

By RICKY ROSENTHAL
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK — As the patrol car inches forward down the dark wintry street, Lucille Burras Cano and Kataline Salzano become more alert — and suddenly quiet.

The "beat" of the two New York City policewomen: Bedford-Stuyvesant, one of the poorest — and most crime-ridden — neighborhoods in the United States.

— neighborhoods in the United States.

The pair, part of a special experiment which puts policewomen on patrol duties previously handled almost exclusively by men, represent a trend among America's major policing agencies — recruitment of more women officers and upgrading their roles in police work. The mere presence of women, some analysts argue, is dramatically changing the shape of law enforcement in the United States.

Capt. Victoria Renzullo, who heads the police department women's section in Manhattan, attests to this. Her office, a coordinating point for New York City's women officers, reports that out of approximately 300 women on the force, 229 are policewomen, one is a deputy inspector, one a captain, five are lieutenants, 14 are sergeants, and 50 are detectives.

IN OTHER cities across the country — such as Chicago, Dallas, Oakland, Ann Arbor, Mich., and Hershey, Pa. — women are playing greater roles in police work.

However, of the 29,000 policemen in the five New York City boroughs, only about 1 per cent are women.

The "policewomen on patrol" experiment is sponsored by a grant from the Police Foundation in Washington, a privately funded organization. The New York program is seven months old, and Lt. Lucille Accera, who heads it, says it has liberated discontented policewomen who were chained to what they call "perpetual female assignments." These assignments (which still exist for the majority of women in the department) consist of matron work, guarding female prisoners and female material witnesses, and the care of youngsters.

The policewoman's needs, aspirations, and goals are changing; they "want to be out on the street," Mrs. Mary Kittel, a plainclothes woman who works with a male partner, is a good example. Mrs. Kittel, a mother of five, made four felony arrests this month.

This is "exceptionally good," according to Sgt. William Ambrose of the 77th Precinct — the Bedford-Stuyvesant area where five of the "experimental women" are working. The rest are posted in Queens and lower Manhattan.

Early resistance from policemen came because the men did not want to ride with a female partner, said Lieutenant Accera. Their attitude was: "It's just one more person to protect, instead of being protected." This attitude is changing, she says.

PRELIMINARY FINDINGS show that women use psychology rather than brute force, but the department wants to prove this.

Miss Burras Cano and Mrs. Salzano, both trim, petite, and pistol-packing, confirmed this aspect of their work on the 4 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. shift. They are on RMP, radio-motor-patrol, patrolling 10 blocks as part of the Neighborhood Police Team in the Bedford Stuyvesant area.

Three months of judo throws and karate experience at the Police Academy give them some security, but, says Mrs. Salzano: "The gun gives us a sense of security, but mostly we shoot with our mouths." The he-man approach is not popular with either to them; this they feel is "the traditional cop attitude." Miss Burras Cano is deeply aware "of the desperate daily struggle" of the people she has come to know and like.

When confronting troublemakers, says Miss Burras Cano, she thinks "How many times have they been abused?" She knows, as does her partner, that more than 50 per cent are on welfare and the area is 100 per cent black. Problems come with people's built-in inferiority complex.

In seven months they have encountered no attack. They have disarmed people and found "no real resistance."

"They react to our femininity," said Miss Burras Cano. They realize full well that critics say that once they get hurt the program will end. One police official in their precinct thinks danger lies ahead. There will come a time when someone or a group will want to provoke an incident.

The Young And Minorities Showing Tendency Toward Self-Destruction

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite the taboo of suicide, selfdestruction goes on with mankind and is going up with some groups—the young and the minorities.

Officially, for the last two decades, suicide has ranked around the 10th leading cause of death for all ages. But, say two authorities on the subject, these records are not absolutely reliable, for in many cases it is impossible to determine whether an "accidental" death really was that or whether it was intentional.

Also, because of persistent cultural and religious taboos and financial pressures, some families and communities refuse to admit a suicide has occurred in their midst.

For these reasons, psychotherapists and other suicide prevention workers believe that suicide may rank actually as fifth or sixth among causes of death.

COUNTING ONLY the recorded deaths even, the toll is twice that of homicides in the United States, or 24,000 a year. They cost the community about $4 billion in emergency facilities, brief hospitalization and loss of income. And incalculable is the "widening ring of tragedy a suicide leaves behind."

These are some points made in "Dealing with the Crisis of Suicide", a new Public Affairs Committee pamphlet written by Calvin J. Frederick and Louise Lague.

Dr. Frederick, now with the National Institute of Mental Health's Center for Studies of Crime and Delinquency, was assistant chief of the Center for Studies of Suicide Prevention at the institute when the booklet was written.

Miss Lague writes for the Evening Star and Washington Daily News.

The two say that most suicides occur in urban areas and there is an upward trend in suicide among minority groups who for the most part are urban dwellers.

Among American Indians, the rate in some tribes is at least five times higher than the national average...in some big cities, the rate among black males up to the age of 35 is much greater than that of white males of the same age...over the last 25 years, suicide has risen to the fourth leading cause of death among young people 10 to 24 years old.

"THEIR HALPLESSNESS, hopelessness, and loneliness are usually brought on by family problems, but all kinds of problems—the failure to make good grade, or to be accepted by school groups, an argument with a friend—are magnified in their small world," say the authors.

Why do people commit suicide? The authors list among the factors impulse ("heat of anger, frustration or disappointment"), the feeling that "life is not worth living anymore" (depression), serious illness, and communication — "often people who attempt suicide are trying to say something to those around them..."

Many times the person planning suicide sends out signals — sometimes subtle clues, other times outright statement. Still others don't talk about it, especially the young, the elderly and professional persons.

Who can help? You can, say Dr. Frederick and Miss Lague. So can the family doctor, dentist, close friends, hairdressers, co-workers, employes or employers, policemen and women.

Don't ignore the signals. Do take every threat seriously.

Don't dismiss a threat with "You're not the type." This can be a challenge to the suicidal. Don't try to shock the person with "Oh, go ahead."

DON'T TRY to analyze the person's behavior to him. This should be done by a professional. And do seek professional help as soon as possible.

Do be willing to listen. Promise that everything possible will be done to keep the person alive.

Simple, Not Plain Is Fashion Word

Simple, not plain. That's the shape of '73 fashions, according to Mildred Sullivan, director of the New York Couture Business Council. "And it's a well-known fashion axiom, the simpler or more classic the shape, the more important the fabric and color story.

Sugary pastels, sparkling white, fields of florals, soft luxurious fabrics or nubby naturals are the raw materials.

Any Young Girl Has The Chance To Wear Miss Teen-Ager Crown

DEAR RAP:

How does a girl go about entering a national pageant like the Miss American Teen-Ager Contest? Do you have to live in a city that has a local contest? Our town never does. — SHEILA

P.S. Am I silly to think I'd have a chance?

SHEILA:

I passed your question along to Sol Abrams, vice president of Miss American Teen-Ager Contest, Inc., and he answered, "Any young lady throughout the U.S. or its territories who would like to enter may do so by merely writing to:

Miss American Teen-Ager Contest, 1605 Lemoine Ave., Fort Lee, N.J., 07024.

"We will direct the applicant to the franchised contest nearest her home," he said. You don't need a local sponsor, but if your application is accepted, you will have to pay your own way to the preliminaries. And you must be between the ages of 13 through 17. No special "talent" is required.

Other teen contests include:

Miss National Teen-Ager Pageant, finals to be held in Atlanta, in late August. Applications are now available from the National Certification Office, 126 Bunn Drive, Rockton, Ill., 61072.

Miss Teen-Age America, Fort Worth.

America's Junior Miss, Mobile, Ala.

Write on, Sheila, and good luck! — SUE

DEAR SHEILA:

You ask, "Am I silly to think I'd have a chance?"

Carla Tevault, who was crowed Miss American Teen-Ager last August, asked herself this question too: With 250,000 hopefuls competing, how could a girl from the small farming and mining community of Petersburg, Ind. make it past first eliminations?

But she did!

When, as a state winner, she arrived in New York City for the national finals, she looked around and wondered, "What am I doing here?"

"Most of the girls," she recalls, "had on wigs or falls and lots of attractive makeup, and they were all so pretty. I thought then and there I wasn't what they were looking for."

But she was!

Carla, as wholesome and unaffected as a Hoosier hoedown, thinks of herself as just an ordinary American college girl. (She's a freshman this year at Mark Spitz' Alma Mater, Indiana University.) "Being Miss American Teen-Ager doesn't make me any different than I was before I was crowned," she says. "At school most of the kids don't even know. I seldom tell anybody. I would rather have people like me for myself."

Her favorite clothes are belled jeans, shrinks, blouses and blazers, and when she models her crown for photographers, she's apt to wear it like a beanie. But there are public appearances too: talk shows, luncheons, "openings," when she dresses — and looks — like a queen.

Freshly back from Hollywood where she guested on major network programs and acted as teenage "ambassador of good driving" for Dodge Motor cars, Carla will spend the rest of her reign being a week-day student and a week-end queen. Whenever college schedules permit, she accepts the modeling jobs and other honors which come to a national pageant winner.

Her ambition? To be a doctor of psychology. And she's determined that nothing will jeopardize her grades. Recently she gave up a tremendous modeling job in New York because it conflicted with final exams.

. . . All of which, I hope, Sheila, answers your question: You aren't silly to think you wouldn't have a chance. Consider the lovely things that can happen if you try. And even if you don't win top honors, it will be a great experience. — HELEN

Horsehair Braid On Organza Gowns

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE:

I am planning to make six bridesmaids' dresses for my daughter's wedding. The dresses will have an overskirt of organza. I've noticed that the readymade organza gowns have an invisible braid at the hem to make the skirt shape out. What kind of braid is this and how should it be applied?

Mrs. L.N.B.

DEAR MRS. L.N.B.:

This invisible braid you are referring to is called horsehair braid and is usually available in two widths, one-half-inch wide is the most common, then it is possible to find it about two-inches wide.

Carefully measure and mark the hemline of the overskirt and cut away the excess fabric, leaving about one-fourth inch. Your hair braid is stitched to the right side of the garment, flat edge of braid on your exact hemline. Be careful not to stretch edge, it would be very easy to do with a circular hem.

Fold your hem to the inside of garment and machine stitch through the braid and the fabric very close to the hemline edge — it won't show. In using this narrow braid, I don't feel it is necessary to catch the unstitched edge to the garment.

If you are using the wide braid, proceed with the first step and machine stitch to the garment. You will find a thread at the outer edge of the hair-braid, draw it up slightly until the unstitched edge of the braid fits the shape of the skirt, be sure not to pull this up too tight or the hem will buckle.

Because of the extra width of the braid, it will be necessary to invisibly tack it to the seams and possibly once or twice in between the seams, always remembering to keep your hand stitches nice and loose.

MRS. HOWARD D. Stiles, Wilbraham, Mass., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion.

"I (like everyone else) had a box full of buttons saved for reuse but most often it was too much trouble rummaging through to see what would be suitable. One day I sorted them all out and sewed all the matching buttons together. Now at a glance I can not only see the kind but how many I have."

(Great idea for those after-holiday days when you have some extra time.)

DEAR EUNICE:

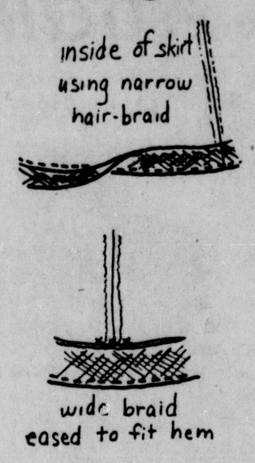
Can you give me some guidelines on what kind of patterns are suitable for diagonal fabrics, either a woven diagonal or a printed design. One pattern states that it is not suitable, but another with seemingly the same lines, says nothing. Frankly, I'm confused.

Mrs. Ann R.

DEAR ANN:

I think the pattern companies have put fear in every women who sews when it comes to diagonals. They are so attractive and make up so beautifully if you choose the right pattern. Basically, it must be a simple one.

This kind of fabric will not work well with any part of a pattern cut on the bias. You must also refrain from using a pattern with raglan sleeves and a shawl collar. Outside of these three instances, I see no reason to avoid this fabric.



I have suggested before that if you are in doubt as to how a garment will look when you are using fabric that is unusual, there is a fun way to do it. Take a piece of typing paper, if your fabric has diagonal lines or a diagonal weave, line off your paper in the same way to resemble a miniature piece of fabric. Now, cut out the little shapes of the pieces of your pattern which are given on your work sheet. Place them on your paper and draw an outline on them. Cut them out and pin together just like you would if you were constructing your garment.

It's so imple to see just what effect you will have and to decide whether it is what you want or not. You can actually come up with some very creative ideas by using your fabric as part of the design.

DEAR EUNICE:

I know you probably don't get many letters from men, but I thought I might be able to pass on a new idea for men's loungewear.

I've always found it most uncomfortable and unattractive to see bare, hairy legs hanging out beneath a lounging robe. Happiness is a full length one.

A friend just made one for me out of a velvety dark green material and it's "super." It's about time for a new trend, the men will really go for it. My friend said she just took a regular pattern and added the extra length. In fact, she said the robe was really easy to make — it sure scored with me.

Bob E.

DEAR BOB:

Good for you. I think a long robe for a man is really a "super" idea as you say. The newest men's fashions are also featuring full-length caftans for men. Why should the gals have all the fun? Now with a more relaxed look in menswear, I think more and more gals will be making casual garments for their men.

Eunice Farmer gives easy-to-follow instructions on how to make a caftan in her "Super Caftan." For your copy send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

The Jacket Plays Big Spring Role

The jacket is the constant element in any separate formula this spring. The silhouettes range from cardigans to wear over everything to the short blouson baseball jacket, a skirt jacket or a smoking jacket.

The blouson looks good with short puffed or roll-up sleeves, or a full gathered back. The jacket with the drawstring waist may be one of spring's most popular themes.

A Sculptor Of Gigantic Style, Size

By MARJORIE BRUCE-MILNE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

LONGON — The success of Henry Moore's recent exhibition in Italy has confirmed his stature as the outstanding sculptor of the day. His great monumental pieces laid out on the terraces at Forti di Belvedere in Florence seemed to become a part of the landscape.

There was nothing in their spirit to conflict with the work of the earlier and supreme Florentine masters: Donatello and Michelangelo. Like them he was seen to be concerned with humanity, even if in a more abstract manner. When Moore's name is mentioned one thinks instinctively of his monumental works. But a recent exhibition at London's Lefevre Gallery of 33 small bronzes and drawings from this 1939-1958 figurative period helped to make clear why he is regarded by many as the greatest living sculptor.

Though most of these bronzes are so small — the "Rocking Chair" measures only 5½ inches, the "Two Women Seated, and a Child" is only 6¾ inches high — they all have a remarkable presence. They combine tenderness with strength. Size is seen to be unimportant; what matters is their proportion and balance. Each is a work of art in its own right.

Recognition was slow in coming. Moore was 30 years old before he had his first one-man show in London. Though it only realized 90 pounds (then $450), it was counted an artistic success. Jacob Epstein, Augustus John, and Matthew Smith all bought drawings for which they paid one pound a piece, at that time worth $5.

Today a fine Moore drawing can command 1,000 pounds or over; a miniature sculpture can top the 15,000-pound mark (about $40,000), while, last year, a major sculpture — a reclining figure which Moore carved in 1945 in elmwood — realized a record figure of 104,000 pounds ($260,000)

It was during the period covered by the drawings and sculptires now at the Lefevre Gallery that the breakthrough began. In 1939 Moore was a comparatively poor and struggling sculptor, earning a meager income by teaching two days a week at an art school.

In the late '20's he worked mostly on stone carvings of reclining figures — one of these was the first to have a pierced hole as part of the composition. He carved half-lengths, mother and child groups, masks and heads which showed a Mexcian influence.

His first exhibition at the Leicester Galleries in 1931 brought violent opposition. There was a call for his resignation as instructor at the Royal College of Art. Although the principal of the school stood squarely behind him, as soon as his existing contract lapsed Moore chose to accept an offer, at a lower salary, to teach at the Chelsea School of Art. Here he continued until 1939, the opening year of the second world war.

Moore himself attributes the awakening appreciation of his work to his now-famous "Shelter Drawings" made during the 1940-41 blitz on London. People found something profoundly moving about these figures, some sitting in underground air-raid shelters, waiting wearily for the attack to stop others lying, row upon row, asleep, apparently defenseless.

The artist always waited to be well out of sight before he committed the vivid impression to paper. He was unwilling to infringe the dignity of anyone who might still be awake.

The draped figures seen in the shelters had an abiding influence on Moore's work, for they reappear constantly in his sculptures during the next few years.

In 1943 he had his first one-man show abroad, of drawings at the Buchholz Gallery, New York. He began to make sketch models for family groups of the type seen in the small bronzes, as well as abstract and naturalistic reclining figures — the sculpture which reached the record price last year belongs to that period.

In 1946 Moore visited the United States and in New York had the first of his 100 retrospective exhibitions abroad. At the recent show he is said to be working on something new. It will be interesting to see what emerges.

Locations For Mental Care Units

Four locations have been tentatively selected as home bases for the teams to bring on-the-spot services to Marin's scattered population under reorganization of county mental health services.

The staffs will work from San Rafael, Novato, Point Reyes Station and Tamalpais Junction, said Dr. Robert Taylor, mental health program chief, in a report on the changes to this week's meeting of the County Mental Health Advisory Board.

The Central Marin team will operate out of the child health unit on H Street, San Rafael; the west Marin team from Point Reyes Station; the North Marin team either from the Hunan Needs Center in Novato or close by; and the Southern Marin team from a rented facility at Tamalpais Junction.

Dr. Taylor told the Independent-Journal a typical team, such as Southern Marin's, will include a unit administrative chief, three full-time social workers, two full-time psychologists, two half-time psychiatrists and one full-time mental health worker.

The changes, aimed at decentralizing the $2.9 million department of some 180 employees, were approved by the board of supervisors on Dec. 12.

The Marin County Mental Health Advisory board also:

ELECTED — Reelected Jack D. Williams chairman, and elected Dr. Robert Marvin as vice chairman.

BYLAWS — Approved draft bylaws which limit members' terms of service to no more than two three-year appointments, or part of a three-year term; the board has never had bylaws, and the draft must be approved by the county counsel and by the board of supervisors.

PLANNING — Appointed an ad hoc committee to draft a planning process for the target committees of citizens who give advice and ideas to the program chief.

MEMBERS — Seated two new members, Dr. Catherine Cline Pike, and Supervisor Gary T. Giacomini.

ADVOCATE — Appointed Dr. Pike as "child advocate" to the state Citizens Advisory Council; the council advises the state department of mental hygiene.

TRANSITIONAL — Heard from Dr. Taylor that the county will apply for $75,000 state funds in "state hospital days" saved by not using the services to help pay for the transitional program; the project, also funded with $123,000 in state social rehabilitation service funds, will operate on a contract basis to provide training and residential care to mental patients once the acute phase of their illness is over.

Herring Fishing Halted By State In Tomales Bay

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — State Fish and Game Director Ray Arnett yesterday said he has halted commercial herring fishing in Tomales Bay under emergency legislation signed earlier this week by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Arnett said he ordered a halt to the fishing Thursday when it was learned that the total catch for this year had exceeded 500 tons. A total of 600 tons had been caught by the time the stop order had reached boats in the bay, he said.

Arnett said herring resources would be endangered if 750 tons were taken from the bay. Under legislation signed by the governor Tuesday, the director was authorized to halt herring fishing in both Tomales and San Francisco Bay.

The measure, which became effective immediately, expires March 25.

Character Actor Naish Dies At 76

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — J. Carroll Naish, who established himself as one of Hollywood's greatest ethnic character actors in a career spanning a half century, died Wednesday in La Jolla, his family disclosed Friday. He was 76.

Naish, bedridden two years with emphysema, died after a week in Scripps Memorial Hospital. He was to be buried today in private services.

The mustachioed, Irish-born actor, who mastered nearly 20 dialects during his film career, played Hindus, Mexicans, Japanese, Chinese, Arabs, Jews, Italians, Poles, English, American Indians and South Americans.

Naish played a succession of strutting villains and heavys. But it wasn't until near the end of his career that he played the title role in the radio and TV comedy, "Life With Luigi," and his talents in ethnic roles were recognized by the public.

One of the few nationalities he never played was his own. "When the part of an Irishman comes along, nobody ever thinks of me," Naish once reflected.

Critically acclaimed by fellow actors for his rare, dialectic and acting talents, Naish's name was usually midway down in the movie screen credits and was little known by the public.

Harmonica Player To Be Featured

The fourth in a series of live broadcasts over KTIM-FM from the Lion's Share in San Anselmo at 8 p.m. tomorrow will feature Chicago blues harmonica player Charles Musselwhite and his band.

This will be Musselwhite's first appearance since his recent recovery from an automobile accident.

Also appearing on the program will be Dave Alexander and his blues group.

Another Lane Of Bridge Due To Open Monday

A fourth southbound lane will be available for the first time Monday morning to commuters crossing the Richardson Bay bridge — if weather permits completion of work today and tomorrow.

Robert Halligan, spokesman for the state Division of Highways, said southbound lanes on the bridge were to be closed one at a time throughout today. Lanes will be restriped and cleanup work completed on the bridge widening. Wet weather however, would delay the work, he said.

The newly added fourth lane on the northbound side also should be ready for use within a week, Halligan said.

Moyers Released From Hospital

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bill Moyers, press secretary to the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, was released from Georgetown University Hospital Friday evening.

Moyers, 38, was admitted Wednesday complaining of chest pains. But doctors diagonosed them as "Tietze's Syndrome," a painful inflammation of the ribs and chest cartilage.

A Big Year Ahead For Traveling

"Already," says Marin's travel advisers, "we have had some very heavy 1973 bookings... Every indication is that this is going to be a whopper of a year for travel."

By DON KEOWN

With one busy, active travel year just behind them, Marin County's travel advisers are looking ahead to an even bigger 1973.

While it is still very, very early,travel agents agree that Marinites are already beginning to flock into their offices and to ring their telephones, to lay plans for extensive 1973 vacations.

"While it is difficult to generalize, January is usually a slow month for us," says one. "But that hasn't been true this year. We have had some very heavy 1973 bookings — for the spring, the summer, even looking ahead to autumn. Every indication is that this is going to be a whopper of a year for travel."

And some 1973 travel trends are already beginning to take shape.

FOR INSTANCE, say the agents, the cruise vacation, which has zoomed in popularity the last few years, is going to make further gains in 1973.

"There are more people interested in cruises than ever before," says one adviser. The Caribbean is a big gainer, with many Marinites taking advantage of the combination air-sea packages that permit them to fly one way, or to fly both ways to the eastern coast, and from there enjoy their cruises among the colorful Caribbean islands.

The several fine new cruise ships now based at or touching on West Coast ports has generated intense interest in sea travel, the agents say. So hundreds of Marinites will be transported by those comfortable, often luxurious, ships — to Mexico's Riviera, north to British Columbia and Alaska, to Hawaii, to the Caribbean, even around the world.

ONE DEFINITE trend spotted by Marin travel agents is a keener interest in the South Pacific.

"The South Pacific is going to be very, very big this year," says one."There has been a lot of advertising, and it is paying off in 1973."

The heavy volume of tourist traffic to Europe is certain to continue. England will remain a prime destination, although there is a tendency now to spend less time in crowded London and to enjoy the tranquil British countryside — in Cornwall, along the seaside, in the Cotswolds, the Scottish Highlands, etc.

The Continent will receive its fair share of the visitors from Marin, with some travel agents reporting a noticeable increase in interest in Greece and Yugoslavia.

THE CASTLE hotels of Europe are drawing special attention from Marinites as a staying place.

Hawaii, of course, still holds forth as a favorite and lovely destination of vacation-planning Marinites.

The certainty in the travel picture for Marin is that there will be an unprecedented number of its residents leaving their home county and abodes temporarily to taste new experiences and new sights, overseas, or at points on their own continent. The huge number of recreational vehicles now owned by Marinites in itself means that many, many of these will be traveling the highways of the USA, bound for the national parks and monuments, the lakes, the mountains, the seashores.

An uncertain factor in the overseas portion of the travel picture is the matter of fares.

TRAVEL ADVISERS are still awaiting a court decision on challenges to the new Travel Group Charters schedules to Europe. If these fares survive the court tests, then the scheduled airlines will find themselves offering bargains that will be entirely competitive with the affinity group charters that have been the bread and butter of the non-scheduled lines in past years. And travel agents will be handling the new business.

Involved are fares like from $280 to $350 (depending upon the season) between San Francisco and London.

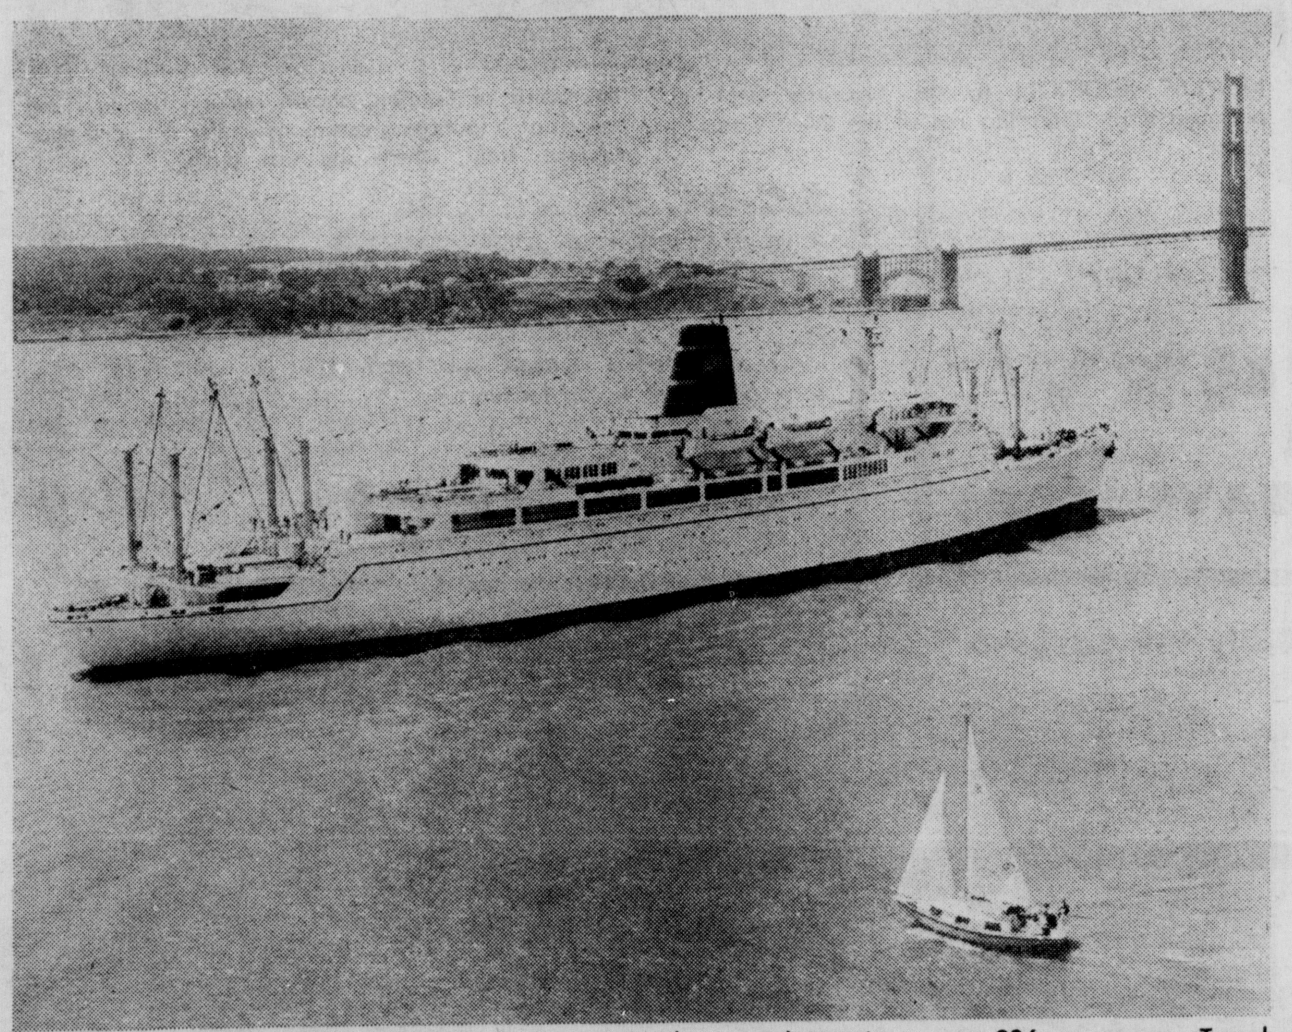
But one requirement would be that the initial payment by the traveler be made four months in advance of departure, so that, according to one agent, "if the question is not resolved in the next 30 days, time will be a critical factor as far as the 1973 travel season is concerned."

But even if the TGC fares are delayed or rejected, the traveler will very likely have an alternative in the so-called APEX (Advance Purchase Excursion) fares for which a number of airlines have filed for government approval.

FOR EXAMPLE, the British Overseas Corp. proposes a $308 fare for London for the summer month of August, and other airlines have worked out their own low APEX figures.

These are non-charter fares with no group requirement. But there are some special stipulations including full payment and ticketing three months in advance of travel.

Marin travel agents, buoyed by the prospect of the APEX and TGC fares that may spell the end to the old non-scheduled group affinity charter business from which they were largely excluded, also have an unusual and attractive assortment of special vacation packages with which to entice Marinites this year. But all indications are that Marinites require little enticement. They are ready and eager to go —to Ireland's thatched cottages, to England's castles, to Italy's museums, to Scandinavia's forests, to Australia's beaches, to Rio, to Anchorage, to Africa's big game plains, to teeming Tokyo, to sunny Greece, to Fiji, to Israel, to wherever their wanderlust, their desire to see and to learn, their wish for a change of pace and something different might take them.



THE SS MARIPOSA, of the Pacific Far East Line's ocean-going, passenger-carrying fleet, heads out of the Golden Gate for South Pacific waters. The popular 20,000-ton liner and her twin sister, the SS Monterey, are famous West Coast ships named after historic California counties, cruising at 20 knots and carrying up to 336 passengers. Travel agents in Marin predict that the Mariposa and the Monterey, as well as other cruise ships operating out of our West Coast ports, will be busier than ever in 1973, as the tremendous surge of interest in cruise vacations continues unabated.

THE COVER

EARLY each year the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine devotes an expanded issue to travel subjects, aimed at helping Marinites plan their upcoming vacations. This is that issue for 1973. In the pages that follow you will find ideas for vacation destinations, hints to make your traveling more pleasant, stories to whet your appetite for touring, and a complete, four-page directory of travel services and products prepared by I-J business writer Wat Takeshita. Advertisements, too, point out the importance of early planning for your trip. The cover art is by Ron Davis.

New Cruise Ships — Pleasure Palaces

Here they are — the new Pacific cruise stars.

Twenty-million-dollar nautical palaces, their freight is well-heeled passengers and the trappings to pamper them.

This new generation of pleasure liners is to its predecessors as a Ferrari to a DeSoto.

Watch the lofty snow-white ship cast off from its California moorings, listen to its carefree sailing song. Primed with champagne, voyagers line the rails and spin webs of serpentine, just like Cole Porter on Ile de France during the great trans-Atlantic crossings.

There comparisons end.

THIS SHIP happens to be Norwegian, the water is blue Pacific, and these sailings mark the western debut of the new Pacific cruiseliners, seagoing resorts to match the top hotels of Europe.

This particular debutante is Royal Viking Star, a nine-deck pousse-cafe of cabarets, artworks and cocktail bars. She was launched in Finland, took her inaugural runs to the North Cape last summer, her first dip in the Pacific last November. She and her two sisters, scheduled for West Coast appearances late in 1973, will cruise the world from Leningrad to Sydney.

Royal Viking Star has been joined this winter by two galactic rivals, Island Princess of Princess Cruises; and Spirit of London from P & O, the British cruise line which began it all back in 1837. Our star and her sisters-to-come (surnamed "Sea" and "Sky") weigh in at 21,500 tons, carry about 500 passengers, and set smashing standards.

Total investment in the three Royal Vikings and their two cruising cousins exceeds 100 million dollars.

A FEW EXAMPLES serve to highlight the generation gap between this built-for-cruising quintet and the phasing-out "transportation-type" ships:

Item: All but 26 of the "Royal Viking Star's" 289 stateroom have ocean views.

Item: On her ninth (topmost) deck perches the Stella Polaris lounge, 180 degrees of unobstructed vista 70 feet above waterline. On moonlit nights, in this lavender-and-silver aerie, you get a sensation of gliding silently in some Apollo spaceship.

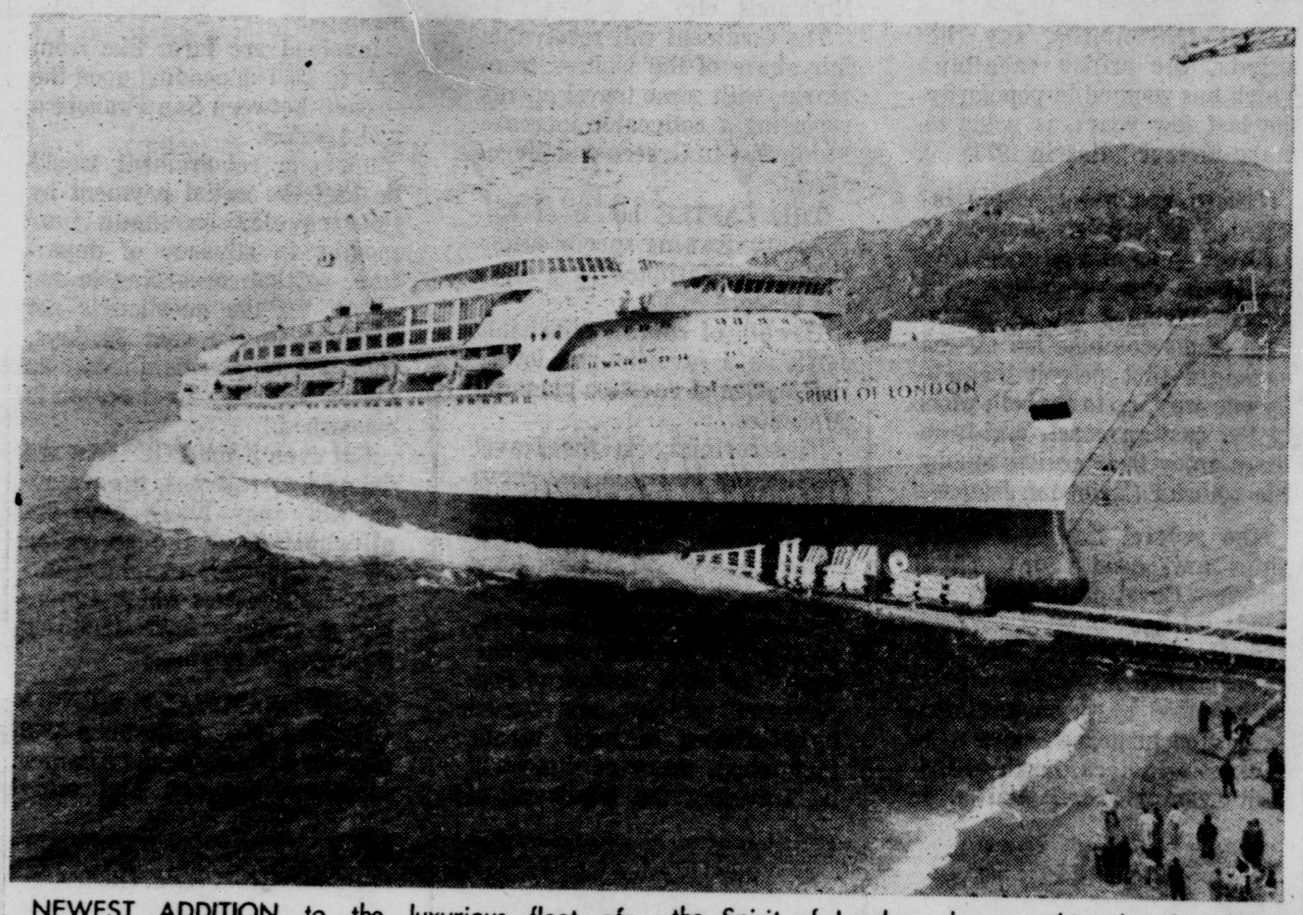
Item: Hundreds of dazzling modern paintings, prints, ceramics and sculptures adorn this Viking's public rooms and private cabins. Down part of the Promenade Deck runs an art gallery, its changing exhibits (all for sale) supervised by a museum chief.

Item: The side-to-side dining salon, six decks above water level, affords picture-window views utterly lacking on more conventional ships. All 500 passengers can be served at once.

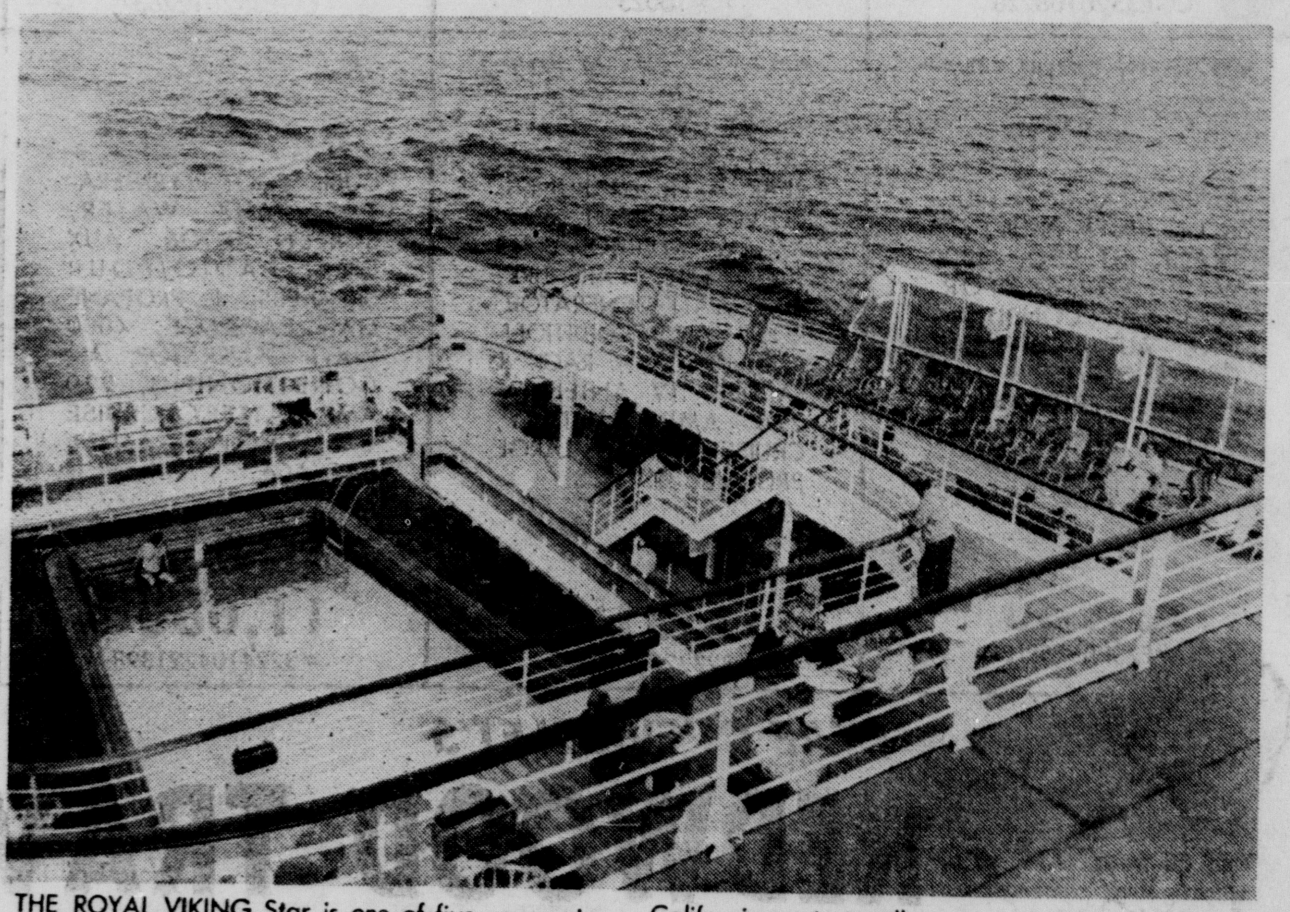
Items: Birch-paneled saunas. Spacious sheltered pool. A rainbow-lit waterfall to accent outdoor dancing. Heavy crystal ashtrays and pastel cobweblight bed-throws. Elevators to everywhere. A 156-seat, wide-screen theater. Stateroom lockboxes for valuables. Rich natural-wood or brushed-aluminum finishes, muted colors, accented sometimes by sea-blues or reds.

VIKING GUESTS pay well — a minimum of $71 per day, with the average around $100. But this includes all the amenities mentioned, plus all the escargots, ptarmigan, caviar and reindeer ragout you can eat. Almost nobody ever mentions money.

Altogether there's a new dimension to that mightiest of oceans, the Pacific, this year. Royal Viking Star, Spirit of London and Island Princess are bringing it to the cruising public.



NEWEST ADDITION to the luxurious fleet of pleasure ships operating out of the West Coast is the Spirit of London, shown making her first big splash at a launching ceremony in the shipyard near Genoa, Italy, where she was built.



THE ROYAL VIKING Star is one of five new cruise ships flying the flags of Trans-Pacific Passenger Conference Lines that will be sailing out of California ports to all corners of the world by the end of this year. The Royal Viking Line's ship offers 289 staterooms, all but 26 of which have ocean views.

France's Other Wine Region

Mention the French wine country and invariably one thinks first of Burgundy, then the region around Bordeaux, and perhaps, almost as an afterthought, the Valley of the Rhone.

All produce big, robust wines. Brilliant reds for the most part. From grapes grown on hillsides of what we have come to recognize as France's traditional wine country.

BUT THERE is another, entirely different wine country in France. Here the wines are white, crisp, fruity — almost sparkling on occasion. These wines are produced from grapes grown on the slopes of the Vosges foothills, which look across the Rhine.

The region is, of course, Alsace; it ranks after Bordeaux and Burgundy in terms of wine production.

Scenically the province turns out to be as pretty as any place one could hope to reach, offering the tourist a whole string of pleasant surprises. For one thing, there is the wine raod which wends its way for a hundred or so miles through vineyard country along the edge of the Vosges, passing into the out of charming villages set with 15th and 16th Century half-timbered houses.

RIQUEWIHR, for example, is considered second only to Saint-Emilion among the lovely wine towns of France, with Kayersberg not far behind. Stop at picturesque old inns. Taste flowery wines served in green-stemmed glasses. Or go into cellars to tap the product at the source. New wine is put into old barrles in Alsace. From fall to spring it rests in great casks stored underground, then is transferred into bottles.

Try a cool Riesling on a sunny day to find out how good these wines can be. Nor is Alsace lacking in gastronomic specialties, this being the home of renowned Pate de foie gras, choucroute a l'Alsacienne (sauerkraut garnished with sliced ham, boiled potatoes and various kinds of sausages), chicken dishes, river fish prepared in ingenious ways.

For anyone out to plot a different kind of wine tour, particularly during the fall season of the grape harvest, Alsace can make for a happy choice. Consider Alsace a discovery at any time of the year, with or without wine. Ruins of ancient castles crown green hilltops. One comes upon walls of fortified towns. Along with vineyards, forests fill out the hillsides. The view is across fertile plains where tobacco grows. Perhaps the most romantic part of all is the "Ried," a watery land of meadows laced with canals, studded with willows and poplars alongside the Rhine.

Harbor, Weather, Facilities All Offer A Warm Welcome To Visitor

By RALPH HUBLEY

SYDNEY, Australia — If I were to design the ideal gateway city, it would look something like Sydney.

It would have a magnificent harbor, mild weather, modern accommodations, excellent service, good transportation, cool parks, nearby beaches and recreation areas, an enthusiastic citizenry, a colorful historical background, restored areas and a promise of adventure just beyond the city limits.

However, from the traveler's standpoint, I think I could improve on Sydney's two-year-old airport and Australia's visa regulations.

APPROACHING THE city by airliner you will easily spot the large white "petals" of the long budding Opera House and the Sydney Harbor Bridge, unmistakable landmarks of Australia's oldest and largest city (population 2,780,310). Some million and a quarter other overseas passengers had a similar view when they landed here last year, for even at night the landmarks are brightly lighted for all to see.

From the sea, the city is hidden by high cliffs and wooded beaches until your ship swings through Port Jackson. Then the city stretches out across the entire western horizon.

This gateway to an ancient land of the kangaroo, koala and platypus bristles with building and new ideas — an appropriate entrance for the many thousands immigrating to this new land of opportunity. There is so much building going on that the photographer will find it difficult to get a skyline picture without a skeleton arm of a temporary crane poking into view.

WHEN YOU land at Kingsford Smith Airport, Sydney's international air terminal on Botany Bay six and a half miles south of the city, you will find the domestic terminal on the opposite side of the field. If you are one of the more than 29,000 transit passengers who go through here in a year, you will be transported to domestic flight connections on Trans Australia Airlines or Ansett.

However, if you are one of the 550,000 a year who wish to go into the city, it is another matter.

You will seldom find a taxi waiting, for they are usually at the domestic terminal. The hotels do not as yet furnish courtesy cars, and there are no public buses from the international terminal, But Qantas will take you to the airline headquarters in downtown Sydney.

IF YOU CAN'T get on the Qantas minibus you should phone for a taxi right away as it may take 20 minutes to arrive.

You may even become a bit overheated while waiting in summer, as there was no air conditioning buit into this new steel and glass enclosure. If it's raining, don't be alarmed if a few drops of water seep through the roof. Local residents will agree with your criticism of their airport and often point to the new airport at their rival city of Melbourne as what could have been done. Some say that Melbourne has gained considerably as a gateway because of the convenience of its new Tullamarine airport.

The open frankness in criticism of government and self is quite refreshing for the visitor. On Sundays it's fun to go to the Domain, a park between downtown Sydney and the Wooloomooloo district, to watch the sport of heckling soapbox orators.

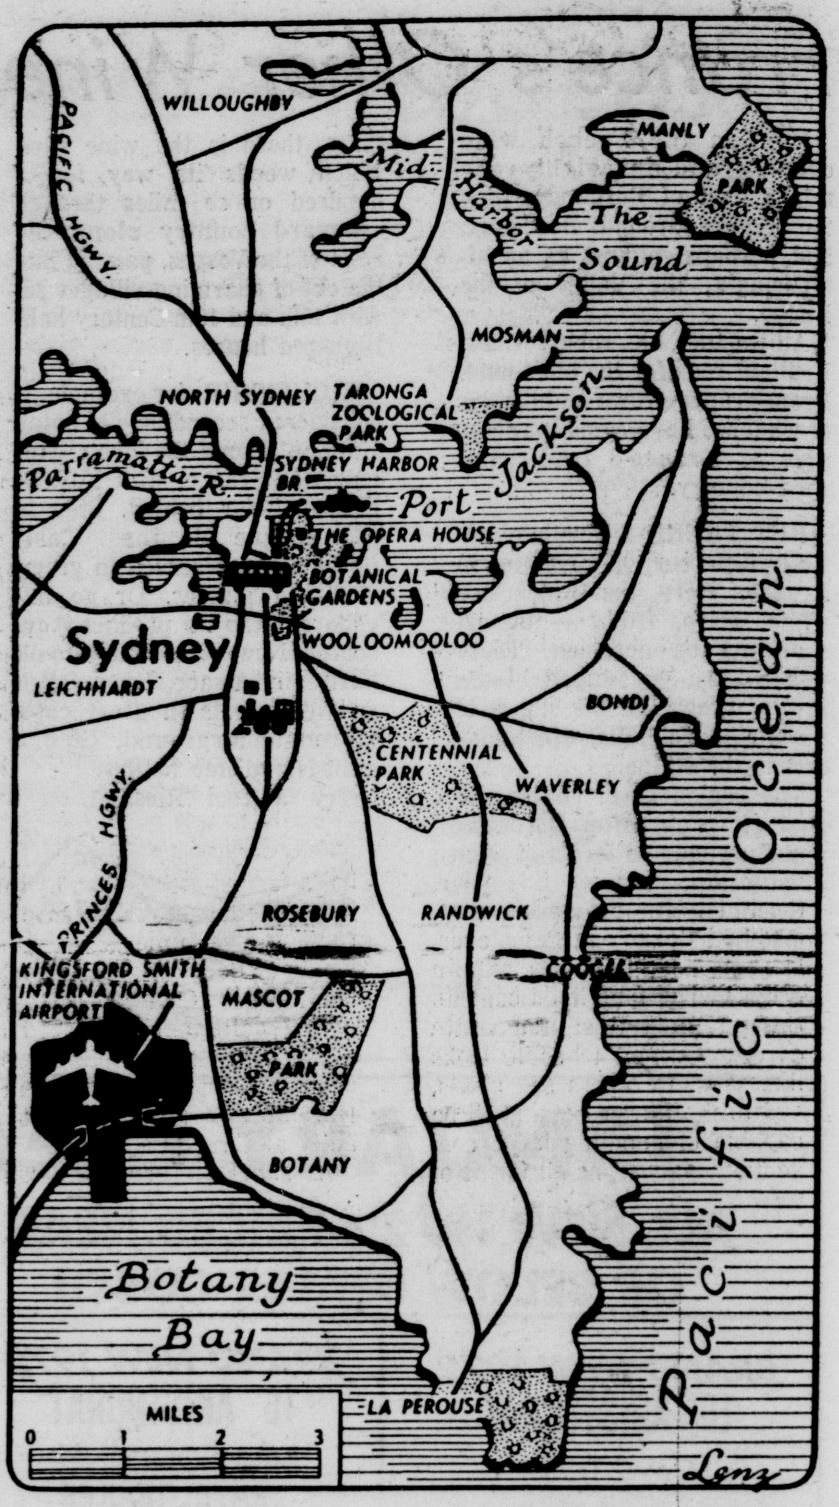
HOWEVER MUCH help Australians seem ready to offer the visitor, some of the place names in Sydney can be confusing. For instance:

Kingsford Smith Airport is also called Mascot Field.

The tallest building in Sydney is called Australian Square Tower — but it is round. You will want to be sure to see the view of the city from the observation platform at the top or from the Summit restaurant a floor below.

There are no farms near Farm Cove. But the Royal Botanical Gardens surrounding it are beautifully maintained.

Kings Cross is not as religious as the name might indicate, nor as sinful as its reputation.



SURF CARNIVALS are a unique summer attraction of Australia's 12,000-mile coastline and particularly of Sydney with its 30 first class surfing beaches all within the city limits. Unpaid, volunteer surf lifesavers, famed for their rescue of swimmers and boaters in trouble, race daringly in surf boats over pounding breakers. The programs also include swimming races, water rescue demonstrations and marching contests.

Port Jackson is also called Sydney Harbor.

Darling Harbor is nowhere near Darling Point.

The subway is called the railway.

ALTHOUGH YOU will find some helpful tourist information in folders in your hotel room, you should make sure to acquire the official Sydney tourist map. It is easy to read and full of suggestions about what to do and where to go. It is issued free at the New South Wales Government Tourist Bureau, 8 Martin Place (phone 2-0136).

On the lower ground floor of the same building you can obtain the "Directory to Government Bus Service to Sydney and Suburbs" from the Department of Government Transport. With these two guides, Sydney is yours. If you get stuck, hail a taxi. They always seem handy.

A subway circles under the city and connects with suburban trains, but I could see no advantage to the tourist as it is in New York, Paris or London. Stick to the buses where you can see more. Many are double-deckers.

AND WHERE will these buses take you? To the beach if you like. Sydney boasts of more "golden beaches" along the coast than any Pacific island. They are clean and protected.

Or you may like to visit the restored area known as Paddington. It is an inner-city suburb overlooking Port Jackson to the north and Botany Bay to the south. It is topped by Victoria Barracks. Millions have been spent by individuals renovating Victorian terraced houses in Paddington, now a fashionable place to live. You can see ironwork grilling and fences, art galleries, boutiques, restaurants along its winding lanes and its steep streets.

Most of the shops are closed on Mondays. Tuesday is probably the best day for a visit because you can see the colorful changing of the guard and tour Victoria Barracks.

KINGS CROSS, another well-known section called the Greenwich Village of Sydney, can be skipped over by the tourist with no loss. No longer as Bohemian and arty as it once was, it is trying to live up to its shady reputation and has become quite honky-tonk.

Not to be missed, however, are the Vaucluse House, the Mitchel Library, the Art Gallery of New South Wales, the Australian Museum and the Rocks area.

The Rocks marks the site of the first white settlement by Captain Phillip in 1788 and contains many of the Georgian and Victorian buildings exactly as they were in the boisterous days of Sydney.

An exciting new $500,000 redevelopment of East Rocks area is designed to blend the old with the new. Tower buildings are to scale down to the old structures being preserved. There will be a separation of pedestrian and vehicular traffic on different levels.

MY GOURMET friends tell me that this international city has only recently developed outstanding dining places. Chinese, Italian, and French restaurants are recommended.

In typically Australian restaurants stay with the seafood dishes. Rock oysters prawns (a type of shrimp), Sydney lobsters, Tasmanian scallops, red snapper, whiting, and John Dorry are all certain to please the discriminating diner. Also try the kangaroo tail soup.

For a look at the progress being made on Sydney's controversial Opera House, scheduled to be opened later this year, there is an observation platform on Bennelong Point overlooking the construction project. The four halls beneath the uniquely designed white cover — which to some looks like sails, to others sea shells, and to me flower petals will be capable of handling large conventions as well as all forms of musical and dramatic productions. It is easily reached by a short walk from Circular Quay at Sydney Cove.

BESIDES THE Opera House, probably the most photographed Sydney landmark is the Harbor Bridge, a single, 650-foot span that carries an eight-lane highway, two railway tracks, a foot-way and a bicycle way. The Pylon lookout on the city side of the bridge can be climbed for a good view of the harbor.

While at Sydney Cove you may like to take advantage of another form of transportation — the ferryboat. Sydney Harbor's ferries include two hydrofoils. The longest scenic trip — running seven miles, nearly the length of Port Jackson — would be to Manly Cove where there are excellent beaches. The ocean going ferry South Steyne departs Sundays at 1:30 p.m., November to May, from No. 3 Jetty at Circular Quay.

A shorter ferryboat ride would be to Taronga Zoological Park. When you get off the boat take a bus to the top entrance and walk back down through the zoo beautifully laid out on a wooded hillside with grand views of Sydney. If you are interested in seeing the platypus, it keeps short visiting hours — 11 a.m. to noon and 2 to 4 p.m.

Would that the entry requirements were as favorable as the weather. Even with your health card, two passport-size photos, proof of departure date in hand and a personal appearance at the consulate office, it takes 24 hours for the bureaucracy to process the papers. This requires returning your passport by mail or an individual pickup the next day.

A million-dollar taxi for peanuts.

Let's kill off the notion once and for all that a helicopter ride has to be expensive.
It doesn't.
In many cases, you can get a ride from Marin to San Francisco's airport for as little as $8.37.

In a few cases, it'll cost you exactly $7.29.
It all depends where you're going from San Francisco and with whom you're flying, so it's smart to check with your travel agency—or with us—before you make any plans.

SFO checks your luggage through to your destination, then zips you to the airport from Marin in just minutes.

No traffic jams. No parking problems.

On Seeing Mexico By Roller-Coaster

By RUTH ELLIOT

You don't have to go to Cuzco, Peru, for top railroad thrills, or to the Jungfrau in Switzerland. You can find just as much excitement on the "Chihuahua Choo-Choo" in northern Mexico.

That's not its real name; it's the Ferrocarril de Chihuahua al Pacifico (meaning "Railroad from Chihuahua to the Pacific"). It's a thrill-a-minute ride from its start in north-central Mexico to Los Mochis near the Pacific.

It's a railroad through the sky, a roller coaster of a train that climbs to 8,000 feet at Creel in the Sierra Madre Occidental and then winds dizzyingly down through the Barranca del Cobre (Copper Canyon) to sea level.

It's a 13-hour trip of 585 breathtaking miles through some of the most rugged and unexplored country in the Western Hemisphere, inhabited mostly by the primitive Tarahumara Indians pursuing a Stone Age existence in their hidden caves.

THE LITTLE TRAIN crosses the Continental Divide three times in a single day, scoots through two time zones, traverses four different climatic zones.

It dives into 73 tunnels totaling 21 miles in all, one of which, Descanso, is more than a mile long; it crosses 39 bridges, some of them strung on precarious-looking trestles hundreds of feet above the roaring waters. Highest is Chinipas Bridge, 335 feet above the Septentrion River; longest is over the Rio Fuerte.

A remarkable feat of engineering! Moreover, a fantastic travel bargain: Tickets are less than $12 for a trip everyone in the family will enjoy.

This incredible little railway was completed less than 12 years ago, 90 years after it was conceived in 1871 as a freighting shortcut from Presidio, Tex., to the Mexican port of Topolobampo on the Gulf of California.

PASSENGERS MAY go only as far as Los Mochis, however. Beyond it the old rails on the freight line are too worn for passenger trains to run the last 16 miles to Topolobampo.

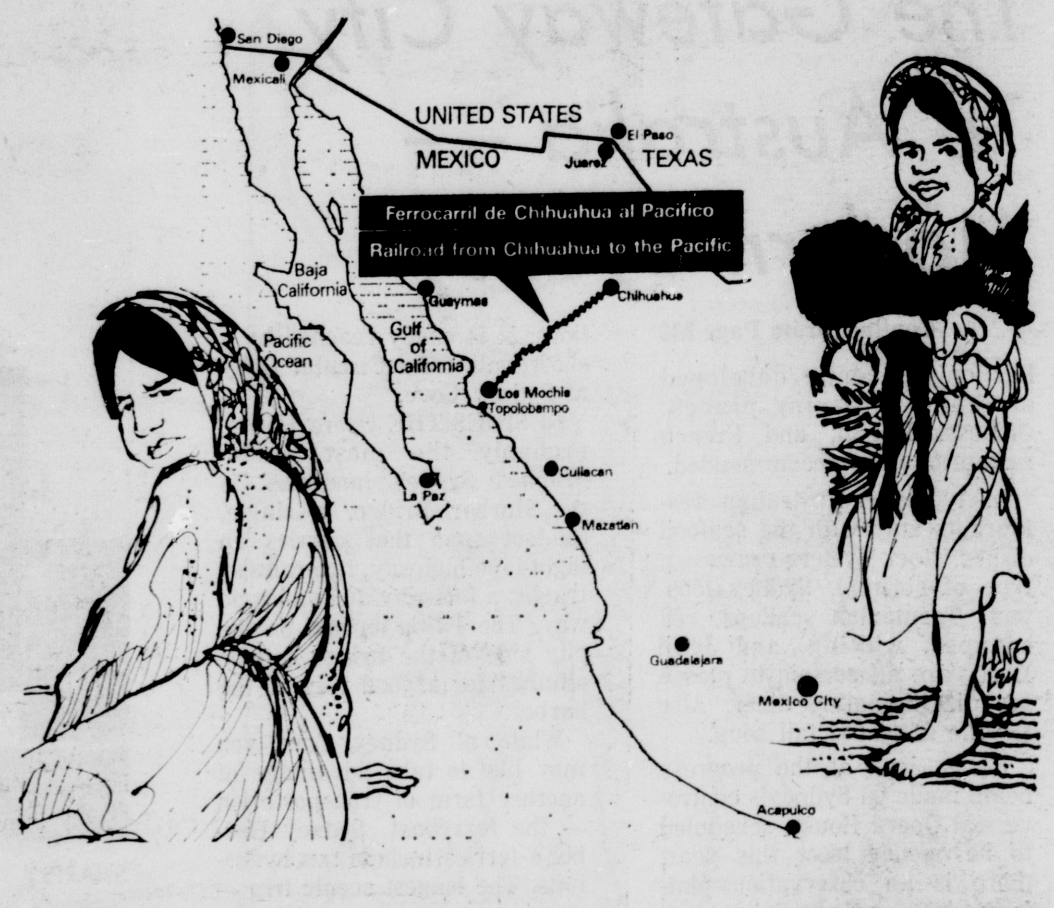
There's no clickety-clack on the C and P railroad; its steel tracks were built like the so-called "elastic rails" invented by the French, cushioned with rubber and electrically welded with no bolts and joints.

For most passengers, the climax of the trip is El Divisadero, where the train stops for 20 minutes and everyone rushes to the edge of the barranca to view the dramatic Urique Canyon, often mistaken for Copper Canyon. Actually, few travelers have ever seen the inaccessible Copper Canyon.

At Divisadero, Indians and visitors watch each other with equal fascination. Until the advent of the railroad, the Tarahumaras were isolated. Even now, little is known of these shy people whose ancestors lived in these same barrancas as long as 2,000 years ago.

THEIR NAME means "foot runner." It's been said that they can run as far as 100 miles a day. A race is a celebration: The runners kick a small ball of juniper wood the entire distance for as long as 72 hours, while others run alongside to light the course with torches.

The Tarahumaras would rather be nomads than live together in villages. There are an estimated 50,000 of them roaming the mountaintops in summer and seeking the warmth of barranca caves in the winter. They're a handsome race with straight noses, coppery skin and gleaming black hair. They are said to live mostly on parched corn, very finely ground and flavored with goat's milk.



Since the most exciting part of the railroad trip is unquestionably between Los Mochis and Creel, many travelers go that far, stay over and return to Los Mochis the following day; others stay over and continue on to Chihuahua. Or vice versa!

There are two different trains on the Chihuahua line these days.

MOST TOURISTS prefer the two-car, Italian-made Fiat, a sleek diesel-powered, air-conditioned train with broad windows for picture-taking. There is an efficient refreshment corner from which drinks and snacks are served on trays at your seat. Departures are at 8 a.m. daily from Chihuahua, except Sunday and Wednesday; from Los Mochis daily, except Monday and Thursday.

The other train is a Pullman, passenger and freight originating at Ojinaga. This longer combination train leaves the Chihuahua station at 10:15 p.m. on Tuesdays and Fridays and arrives in Los Mochis the next day at 3:20 p.m. Its counterpart leaves Los Mochis for Chihuahua on the same days at 8 a.m. after the Fiat has pulled out.

There's a gourmet dining car, lounge, and also a domeliner designated as "community property." Passengers excitedly roam the length of the train all day and when it stops, jump off to try new camera angles.

IT DOES STOP, often, to wait for workmen ahead or to honk a pig or goat off the tracks.

You never see trainmen in Mexico anxiously consulting their watches, though; their schedule is "mas o menos" (more or less). This relaxed attitude is part of the charm of the trip, in fact all of Mexico.

More information may be obtained by writing the Mexican National Tourist Council at 9445 Wilshire, Beverly Hills, Calif. Brochures aplenty will be sent to you. If you want detailed railroad schedules, write F. J. Saenz, traffic superintendent, Chihuahua al Pacifico, Box 46, Chihuahua, Mexico.

Berlin Is Well Worth A Visit By A Traveler

It's An Exciting City — And A Monetary Bargain

By ALBERT HUGHES

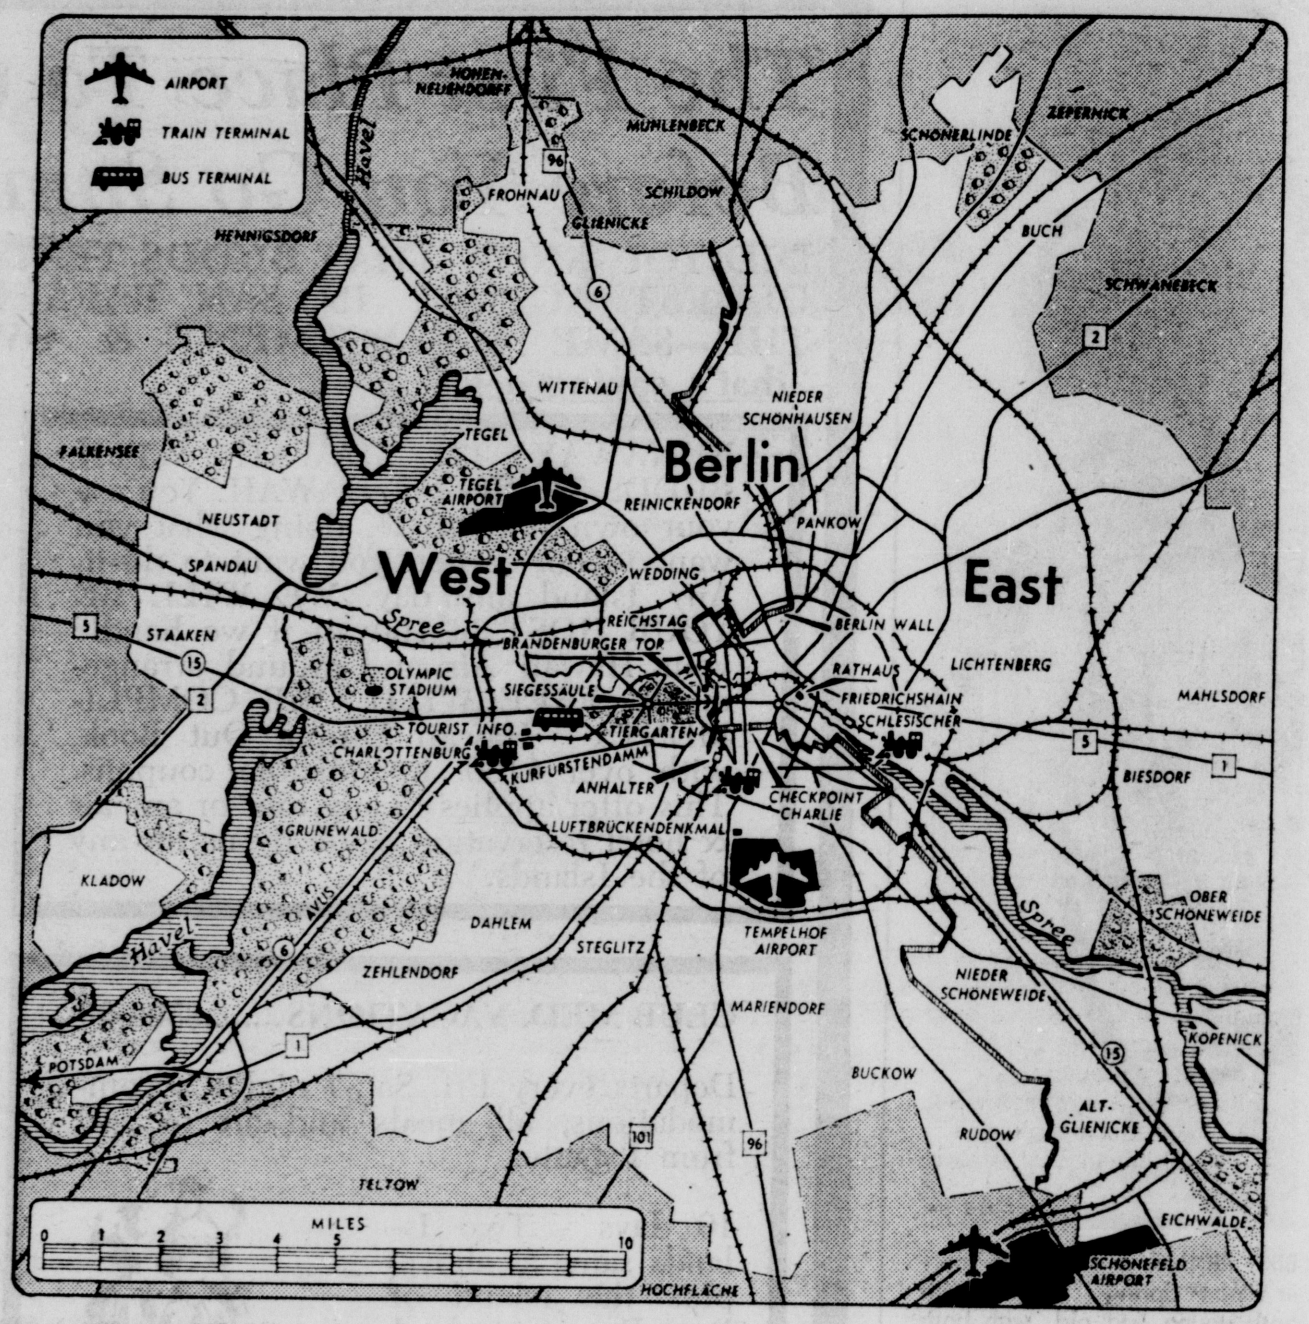
BERLIN, West Germany — For a quarter of a century now, the aerial route into the former German capital has been the most convenient way, and perhaps the only one for some, to cross the 110-mile East German zone between West Germany and the allied sectors of Berlin.

American airliners still come down past residential buildings on their approach to Tempelhof Airdrome.

Berlin has long rated with Boston as having an airport closest to the city. In Boston, the airfield's nearness to the city has led to controversy. It is doubtful that West Berlin residents living near the field would complain about aircraft noise.

TOO MANY OF them remember poignantly the days of the 1948 airlift when the city literally lived, and eventually survived, on supplies brought in by air across the Soviet blockade. Everything — food, clothing, emergency supplies, even coal for heat — was flown in by an air movement that amounted to thousands of flights daily.

Leaving the airport by taxi the visitor sees the airlift monument in the Tempelhof Plaza that commemorates the aerial bridge — and the airmen lost to keep it operating.



Other allied carriers, notably the British, come into Tegel Airdrome north of the city. Schoenefeld, the East German airport southeast of the city, is where the East German and Eastern Europe airlines land in Berlin.

THE TRAVELER can go by train, bus or his own car across the East German zone, but it generates such special problems that most tourists prefer to overfly the area.

For no other reason than the "war of nerves" conducted by the East Germans, there have been delays — trains and highway traffic have been halted, visitors sometimes searched, with no explanation. Americans and British who speak German fluently are regarded with suspicion. On some occasions they have been detained because of the East's suspicions of espionage.

Cross-zone travel continues, however, and regular train and highway tourists obtain a transit visa at the official border crossing points. It costs about $2.50 and is usually issued for the same return point, unless the visitor requests otherwise.

THERE ARE four designated rail crossings —two highway, and one ferry. These are the only crossings permitted to American and British tourists.

Tourists thinking about putting Berlin on their European itinerary should not hesitate to include it. It is an exciting city and a good travel bargain. An all-expense holiday of a couple of days, including a good room, meals, and sightseeing, is reasonably priced. The city has ample hotel space.

Berlin is a 24-hour city, so the visitor will always find "something doing" at any time. The Kurfurstendam is the central street of West Berlin from which the sightseeing tours and personal expeditions funnel out. The street has wide sidewalks, attractive shops and numerous sidewalk cafes, alwasy a delight to American visitors.

RESTAURANTS RUN the gamut of cuisines. There are French ones to equal any in Paris, Viennese to match Vienna, Scandinavian on par with anything in Copenhagen or Stockholm.

Sightseeing tours are the best way to see quickly most of the things visitors have come to see: the wall, the ruined Kaiser Wilhelm Stadium and the Funkturm, or television tower, with its revolving restaurant.

Lots To See, Do In West Berlin

Tourists with time should take the combined West and East Berlin tours, although these can be done separately. In this way, they will watch the solemn East German security role enacted at "Checkpoint Charlie," the allied crossing point between the west and east sectors.

THEY WILL observe a surprising amount of construction going on in the east, including housing, buildings and hotels — even international types. They will see the Air Ministry Building where Goring reigned, and the small hillock that is all that remains of the Hitler-Eva Braun bunker.

The East Germans obviously are showing only their best work to Western visitors, although alongside the wall one can see some of the shabby empty buildings remaining.

East German tours at latest reports were making only stops at a hotel for refreshments and souvenirs and the Russian war memorial. Almost every visitor is bound to heave a sigh of relief at getting back into West Berlin. The contrast between east and west is inescapable.

THE RUSSIAN war memorial inside West Berlin is far more interesting, since it provides an opportunity to watch Russian soldiers on guard duty. The memorial was built, incidentally, before the boundaries had been established between the west and east sectors.

Berliners say it demonstrated Russian fondness for celebrating victories as quickly as possible.

At several points along the wall platforms have been erected which visitors may mount to watch what is going on in the East German zone. At Potsdamerplatz, the visitor can see what has happened to what was one of the busiest spots in old Berlin before the wall cut it in two.

WEST BERLINERS were photographed on the go in front of the Kaiser Wilhelm Church, partially war ruins, partially rebuilt. It is one of the landmarks included in every tour of Berlin.

For the visitor with more time, a visit to the lakes is indicated. The city has one of the most pleasurable of water areas, and it is crowded on Sundays and holidays with pleasure craft, swimmers and excursion boats. One may cruise for all day if he wishes.

THIS IS A most delightful part of Berlin.

The Berlin Zoo is rated as one of the best in the world. It displays the animals as near as possible in their own habitats.

There are bears, magnificent specimens, including American grizzlies who stand on their hind legs begging for food. Lions, camels, and elephants also are in natural habitats. The zoo is so large that a visitor can easily spend a day seeing its creatures.

It is fun just to stroll the Kurfurstendam at night, visiting the Europa Center with its various restaurants, shops and cinemas.

Berlin seems to live for the moment, and that is undoubtedly part of its charms for visitors.

Lima: Jumping Off Point For Conquistadores And Tourists

By JAMES GOODSELL

LIMA, Peru — This capital city, with its surprising blend of colonial charm and modern bustle, was once the mecca for Spanish conquistadores seeking a fortune in the New World.

For thousands of those hardy explorers, Lima was the jumping-off point in their quests for rumored riches and possible fame. And the city became the place to which they longed to return.

Today's visitor is more fortunate than those early explorers. He can savor Peru's still largely untouched interior without all the hardships that faced the early explorer.

And Lima is a much more adequate town today than it was in colonial times.

LIMA MAY HAVE some rivals today as a jumping-off point for trips to the interior of South America, but no other capital city on the continent has so much of the past right at hand.

That's probably the reason why Lima's big, modern Jorge Chavez International Airport is one of the three busiest in South America. It is not uncommon to have jets bearing the names of three or four European airlines, a couple of South American lines and a United States carrier, along with half a dozen Peruvian planes, on the tarmac at the same time.

Peru, of course, is Indian country. The descendants of the Incas and other Andean people are today the largest element in Peru's racial mix. They are a proud group, loyal in many ways to their rich ancestral traditions, and this is one of the first things that a visitor must note on his arrival. As long as he is in Peru, he'll encounter this attitude at every turn.

LIMA ITSELF is cosmopolitan, blending the Indian and the white, the colonial and the modern. And it is surprisingly expensive. Hotels such as the Gran Bolivar and the Crillon charge prices comparable to New York rates. There are less expensive hotels, but the accomodations are more Spartan and sometimes less clean.

The tourist will find less expensive hotels, with considerably more charm, in outlying cities.

THE PERUVIAN CAPITAL city of Lima lays proud claim to South America's newest and most modern airport. Its Jorge Chavez International Airport is also one of the three busiest on that continent, with Lima serving as a gateway to the South American interior and to other metropolitan centers in all directions.

Restaurants in Lima are similarly expensive. A good meal for a couple at any of a dozen major restaurants within a five-block radius of the top two hotels will come to $15. But the service and atmosphere in these restaurants make the price worth it.

Getting around Lima, as in any Latin-American city, can be an adventure. One point: Stay away from the taxis lined up in front of your hotels. Their prices are normally three and four times the charge made by taxis you can hail in the street.

OF COURSE, HAILING a taxi is sometimes a hassle, for half a dozen Peruvians may have hailed the same taxi and you end up in an Alphonse-Gaston routine with several Peruvians. But that is part of the adventure.

Lima serves as the take-off point for trips to the Inca ruins of Machu Picchu and colonial cities like Cuzco and Arequipa. But before one heads for these spots, he ought to get a good look at Lima.

The fashionable shopping and residential Miraflores district is worth a few hours, as is the slum belt linking Lima with the seaport of Callao, in which hundreds of thousands of Peruvians live in squalor. The contrast tells much of the story of Peru and of South America.

There are good beach resorts to the north of Lima, but remember the seasons here are reversed: summer comes in December, January, and February.

IF YOU HAVE only a few days in Peru — not enough to get into the interior — there are Inca ruins within an hour's drive of Lima. And the ruins near Lima are worth a visit.

Shopping in Lima is worth the time, but often prices are higher than one figures he ought to pay. However, with patience, a little searching, and an adventurous attitude, the visitor ought to be able to locate bargains in almost everything from jewelry to items of silver to colonial-style furniture to vicuna and alpaca rugs and garments.

The rule of thumb might well be: Don't buy the first item you see; look around a little.

Most hotels, restaurants and service facilities add a service charge to the bill, but it is still wise to tip the waiter or the hotel housekeeper (more often than not in Lima, the housekeeper is a man). Perhaps 10 per cent of the bill for the waiter, 75 cents a day for the housekeeper.

ONE GOOD investment in Lima is a current copy of the Peruvian Times, an English-language weekly with a lot of local news and a host of interesting features on Peru and neighboring countries, plus many advertisements of Lima attractions.

If the tourist is going on elsewhere in South America, particularly to the south, Lima is an ideal jumping-off point.

There are six or seven daily flights south to Chile, three or four to landlocked Bolivia, and a similar number to Argentina and Paraguay. It is also possible to go right across South America from Lima to either Rio de Janeiro or Sao Paulo in Brazil.

That trip to Bolivia might well be worth trying overland, if there is time. After a stop at Machu Picchu and the towns of Cuzco and Arequipa, the train ride to Lake Titicaca, which forms part of the frontier between Peru and Bolivia, is an experience one will never forget. And the boat trip on Lake Titicaca is also worth the effort.

A Taste Of The Old West At Cowboy Hall Of Fame

By MURRAY J. BROWN

The old Wild West may have passed into history but memories of the uniquely American era are being preserved at a national shrine in Oklahoma City, officially designated as the National Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center.

The capital of the Sooner State also is the site of the National Finals Rodeo where the top American and Canadian performers compete for the title of All-Around Cowboy as well as big prize money.

The Hall of Fame, perched on a hilltop off U.S. 66 in the northeast section of the city, has been visited by more than two million persons since it was opened in 1965.

BUILT WITH funds contributed by individuals and organizations in 17 western states, the unique non-profit memorial was designated by an Act of Congress as a National Monument honoring the pioneers who won the West, the Indians who lost it and the cowboys who became its symbol.

As a national treasury of art and relics of the historic era, its halls are filled with collections of saddles, spurs, handguns, rifles and other old West gear. There is a lighted relief map that traces the old famous trails, and dioramas and other exhibits depicting Indian and pioneer life, rodeos and historic events, and paintings and sculptures by earlyday and contemporary artists.

One of the most prized exhibits is the 18-foot-high original plaster model of sculptor Charles Frazier's "End of the Trail." The statue, by the designer of the Indian head-buffalo nickel, portrays an Indian warrior with a dragging spear slumped over an exhausted war pony.

It has been called the most expressive of all art work depicting the final defeat of the American Indian.

THE COWBOY Hall of Fame is full of noted Westerners and not all were strictly riders of the range. Theodore Roosevelt is honored as is Mormon leader Brigham Young. Sacajawea, the Shoshone Indian girl who guided the Lewis and Clark Expedition, also is included.

Busts of Kit Carson, the old Indian scout; Jake McClure, a world champion roper, and Richard King, founder of the famous King Ranch in Texas, also are there, among hundreds of others.

Honored also is Charles M. Russell, the wrangler-artist whose western paintings are known around the world. The center has some of his outstanding works, including a number of bronzes and a rifle decorated with his carved illustrations. On display in the Center's art gallery also are many paintings by Frederick Remington, also a noted artist of the Western scene, and wood sculptures by Willard Stone, a contemporary Indian artist.

FOR CHILDREN, there is a spacious "see and do" section in the basement of the modern main structure where they can pan for gold or romp in an authentic replica of an Indian camping ground.

There's a display of pioneer transportation, an appropriately-furnished sod house and a full scale turn-of-the-century Western town.

Children as well as adult visitors to the Hall of Fame and Heritage Center are encouraged to make nominations of famous Westerners for future election or suggestions for new exhibits.

The National Finals Rodeo takes place in Fair Park in early December. Competitors include the 15 top cowboys — based on earnings during the year — in saddle bronc riding, bareback riding, calf roping, bull riding, steer wrestling and team roping.

For additional information on the Hall of Fame, rodeo and other attractions and special events write to Chamber of Commerce, 200 Skirvin Tower, Oklahoma City, Okla., 73102.

Paddling Down The Russian River

". . .excess items can be lost out of your canoe," warns the brochure. "The river bottom is lined with purses, glasses, cameras, shoes. . ."

Maybe so, but fun-seekers are willing to pay the price.

Starting this March hundreds of them each week will be paddling, scrambling, sunburning, spluttering — and diving for glasses and cameras — on a 70-mile stretch of the Russian River centered in the pretty farm town of Healdsburg, a short drive north of Marin.

The Russian, named by home-sick Muscovite fur poachers about 1812, is a usually placid warmish stream that twists through oat fields and around redwooded knolls and resorts. Occasionally it swings through narrow channels or under overhanging willows — close enough to tip the careless canoeist. That's when the lunch goes overboard.

UNTIL RECENTLY, only a few weekend outdoorsmen canoed the Russian.

Promotion did its part, and now 500 metal double-enders are rentable at Healdsburg, or its satellites. The price is right (about $10 a day) three can ride, and the water glitters with flashing paddles. Scoutmasters, their charges, young lovers, Mom and Dad all love it.

The drill goes something like this: reservations are made (by phone, usually), and canoeists (who should bring two cars) meet the rental operators at the pre-ordained spot. For example, if it's to be a short "upstream" run, that means Healdsburg Municipal Beach, just off the 101 Freeway.

Parking one car, the canoeists drive the second upstream to, say, the Alexander Valley Bridge, where their craft awaits. Then follows a few warning words: don't steer too close to metal levee barriers here, better portage there, wear your lifejacket, don't throw litter on the banks or use the paddles for baseball. . .

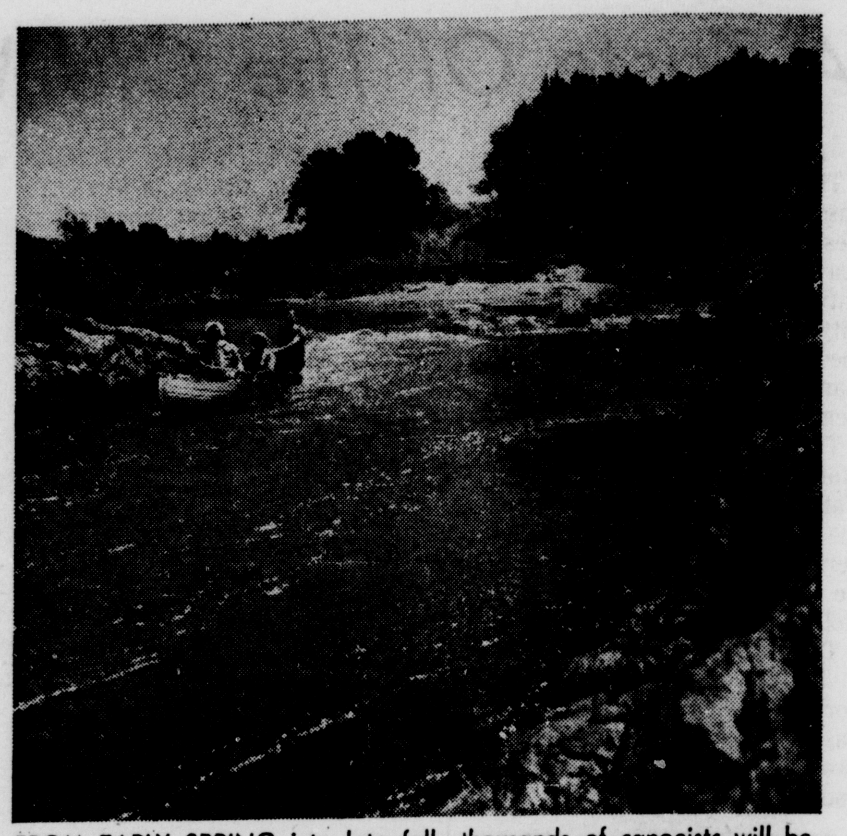
BUT AS ONE operator used to tell it: "Nobody listens until I say it'll cost them $200 if they wreck a canoe."

A 15-mile paddle (downstream all the way) is not beyond the capabilities of week day office workers. Especially when it's punctuated with lunch stops, swim breaks and an occasional beer.

For the young, or those with time, there are two-and-three-day voyages which start up near Asti. There the Italian Swiss Winery provides a rosy send-off. Five-day safaris (week days only) for the experienced camper ($20 and up) start at Cloverdale and may end at the ocean near Jenner.

Upstream runs end at Healdsburg. The last three miles, from Del Rio Woods, are flat water and harder paddling than on the current-assisted upper stretches. At Healdsburg, the first car is retrieved and the canoeists drive back to pick up the second.

Downstream trips begin at Healdsburg, going to Hilton or Mirabel Park in one day, Guerneville or Monte Rio in two. There's a one-day jaunt from Mirabel to Guerneville, and a short hop from Guerneville to Monte Rio.



FROM EARLY SPRING into late fall, thousands of canoeists will be paddling down the twisting, tree-lined Russian River in Sonoma County this year. Over 500 canoes are available for rent at Healdsburg and nearby points for the from one to five-day adventures on the glittering Russian.

OPERATOR Bob Trowbridge will tailor variations or combinations to suit. He's been doing it for 25 years.

Canoeing the Russian, there's plenty of opportunity for picture-taking, but cameras and other valuables, as noted, are best transported in watertight plastic bags. Canoes in tyro hands tend to capsize.

River-running weather continues excellent into fall, and it's then — when leaves turn and temperatures get nippy — that some connoisseurs prefer to ride the Russian River. Certainly it's less crowded, though you may miss the chance to watch someone else get dunked.

A New State Park Offers Skindiving And Rich Ecology

Salt Point is California's newest and most challenging state park — especially if you are a skindiver, shell-picker or biology teacher.

That's because this 3,174-acre preserve, an easy drive north of Marin, has everything from tide-pools to midget trees, brown pelicans and Indian mounds.

MOST OF the time, thick brooding fogs that dominate the redwood coast hand over Salt Point. Some mornings sunshine accentuates the menacing rocks, rocking kelp beds, and sea-slanted meadows with a sparkling magic. Whatever the weather, families clamber up and down the Pacific-washed boulders and peer in wonder at tidepools full of waving anemones, scuttling crabs, and an occasional creepy slug.

Skindivers particularly like Salt Point for its varied launching places and underwater botanical gardens. Sandstone cliffs plunge sharply into the Pacific, and the oily sweels make subsurface adventuring resemble Cousteau's happy TV hunting grounds.

"Look, but don't touch," asks the State Park Service, stressing that the ecology is fragile, and souvenir-hunting verboten. Fact is that Salt Point was bought and preserved to provide space where school kids can study California tideland life.

SALT POINT is reached by driving north from Marin on Highway 101 to the Fulton turnoff (US116) north of Santa Rosa, thence west to seaside Jenner, and north on the Coast Highway 23 miles to the signed park.

Salt Point adjoins the lovely Kruse Rhododendron Reserve where great peacock shrubs bloom in spring-time.

Nassau By Surrey

One of the popular ways to explore the byways of colorful Nassau, Bahamas, is via horse-drawn surreys with fringe on top. Nassau-Paradise Island visitors find the leisurely rides relaxing and romantic. Additional horsepower for sightseeing is supplied by available scooters, motorized bicycles, rental cars and cabs.

POLAR BEARS can be friendly — when they are young. But no one in his right mind would try this with an adult polar bear. At any age, however, the powerful beasts make fascinating bear-watching. And this year there will be special "Polar Bear Photo Safaris" to Spitsbergen, where this picture was taken, off the Norwegian coast and beyond. Five departure dates from New York for the 17-day expeditions, between June 8 and Aug. 3, have been announced. Two specially-built Norwegian ships will be used. Details are available from the Scandinavian National Tourist Office, 3600 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, 90010.

A Different Kind Of National Park

By BRADLEY SMITH

The bear-watcher — that most famous of National Park visitors — would be lost and unhappy in one of the nation's newer reserves.

Canyonlands National Park, designated in 1964, is no place for the drive-in tourist, but holds majestic sights and untold mysteries for the adventuresome.

In this age of crowded national parks, with bumper-to-bumper campers waiting to look into Grand Canyon or see Old Faithful, a traffic jam in Canyonlands consists of two four-wheel drive vehicles facing each other on the sheer cliffs.

CANYONLANDS, a 257,640-acre web of canyons where the Green and Colorado rivers have their confluence, is set in the southeastern Utah desert. It lies over a great salt bed larger than the state of Vermont, a remnant of what was once a huge landlocked sea.

The impression the traveler gets is that this is not a park for the harried tourist. The modes of transportation are four-wheel drive, horse, boat and foot.

At first glance — from Dead Horse Point State Park on the north — the canyons look like a vast wasteland through which the meandering Green and Colorado have carved a leisurely path.

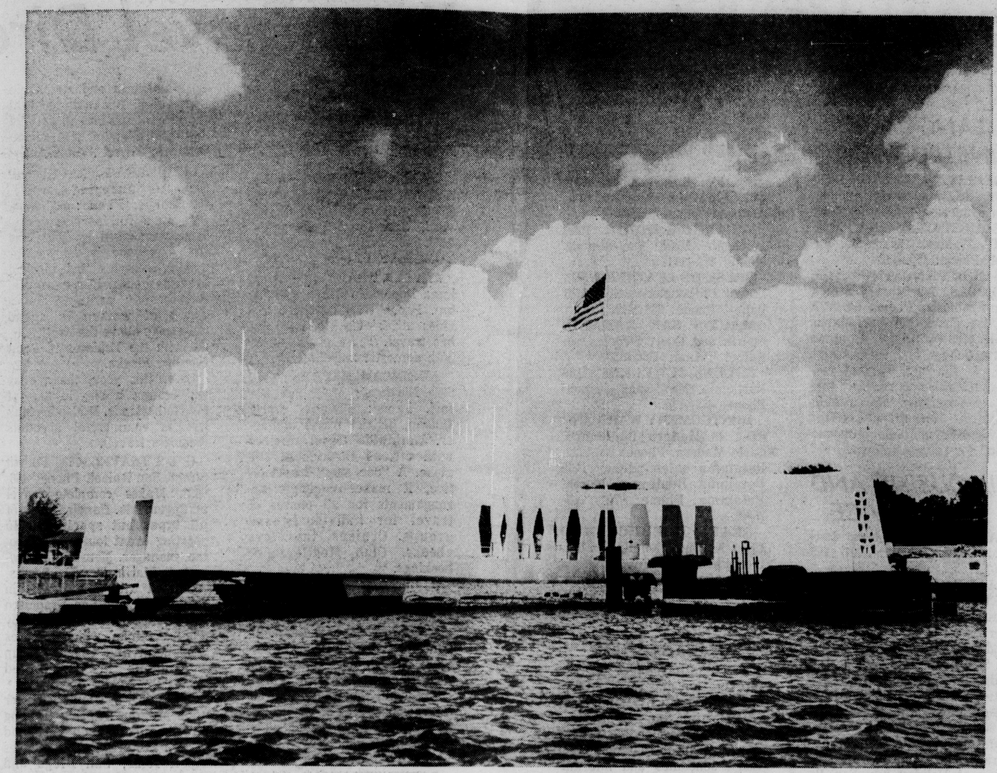
A PASSENGER car can drive along rutted roads on the northern rim overlooking the canyons and to Upheaval Dome, a huge crater formed by salt pushing up through the sandstone and making what some geologists first thought was a meteor crater one-mile wide.

From the north rim, a jeep road drops off the sheer cliff into the canyons.

From the jeep road can be seen Bighorn Sheep on the White Rim of the canyon or one can look down another thousand feet along the banks of the Colorado for mule deer or beaver. The White Rim Trail, an all-day trip by four-wheel drive vehicle, provides a spectacular view of the canyons.

ON THE SOUTH, a paved road enters the park to Squaw Flat where one of two improved campgrounds lies. From that point horses or four-wheel drive vehicles are required to see the rock spires around Chesler Park or the Druid Arch formation.

From Moab, a once-booming uranium town, paddle boats take tourists into the upper reaches of the canyons during the day and at night.



A TRIP TO THE SS Arizona Memorial at Pearl Harbor is a must for every history-minded, patriotic visitor to Honolulu. The U.S. Navy operates a free launch service to the water-surrounded memorial, but reservations should be made in advance. (Hawaii Visitors Bureau photo)

'TO INSURE PROMPTNESS'

Tipping Got Its Start In London Coffee Houses

There are many names for it: tip, pourboire, hand-out, silver, baksheesh. Whatever it's called, though, it is supposed to open doors, transform frowns into smiles and generally pave the way for travelers almost everywhere.

"The whole idea of tipping goes back more than 200 years to the coffee houses in London," according to the travel experts. "These were popular places for 17th Century males to meet and drink coffee and chocolate while discussing politics, philosophy and literature. Since the h'penny or so they paid for hours of sitting around failed to cover the wages of the hired help, the customers were expected to drop coins into a brass-bound box on which were inscribed the words 'To Insure Promptness.' The initials — TIP — thus became the origin of the modern meaning of tipping."

Today, the smart traveler plans his tips as an integral part of any vacation budget. There are a few places — most of them fading fast — where tipping isn't really expected. The Soviet Union is one of them. Iceland is another. And in Tokyo, taxi drivers won't exactly snarl at you if you fail to give them something extra.

Then, of course, you never tip airline stewardesses, flight crews, ticket clerks or any other service personnel, except the porter who carries your bags, when flying.

"If you want to show your appreciation for extra services," advises Continental Airlines, "write a letter to the airline's headquarters."

A lot of people wish that the airline's insistence on "no tipping" would be universal, but that's just wishful thinking.

Some Guidelines On Costs Of Recreational Vehicles

The Recreational Vehicle Institute has issued some guidelines for campers who wish to rent units for their vacation trips. Rental rates vary according to geographical location, season, unit size and type of equipment. But some average costs:

Motor homes: 22-foot model — $225 per week, plus 10 cent a mile.

Truck campers: eight-footers, plus pickup truck — $85 per week, plus 10 cents a mile; nine and a half footers and pickup — $100 a week and 10 cents a mile.

Camping Trailers: 14-foot unit — $65 per week, 16-foot unit — $90 a week.

Travel trailers: 16-foot unit — $110 per week.

In addition, there are deposits for each unit and a rental fee for bumper-type and axle-type hitches for trailers.

Safari Camps of America reports the growing fall and winter space requirements of hunters and skiers has induced the company to establish a tollfree reservation service for recreational vehicle owners. Jim Estes, president of the franchise camp system, said the service will be in effect yearround.

Safari operates camp grounds in 30 states. The service will enable a camper to book reservations at any franchised site for a given date by phoning headquarters in Columbia, Mo.

Why Not Stay In A Castle?

Lodging in authentic medieval castles, ancient monasteries or convents, baronial mansions, stately chateaux or even royal palaces, is now readily available to the American traveler in Europe.

Today there are over 500 such places which have been adapted as hotels or guest-houses throughout western Europe, and they offer a very wide range of accommodations and rates. Usually they will cost no more than a motel in the U.S. And, what's more, you can enjoy all the modern amenities and comforts far beyond the dreams of the knights and ladies, kings and queens who once resided there.

"Castle Hotels of Europe," a guidebook to Europe's most unusual accommodations, has just been published in a fourth edition (164 pages, $3.95, Robert P. Long Publisher, 634 Bellmore Ave., East Meadow, N.Y., 11554) and it details over 500 of these hotels and guest houses, complete with historic notes and rate ranges. More than 350 are pictured, and all are located on maps of each of 16 countries.

Some of the castles are over 1,000 years old, and most offer centuries of fascinating history and tradition.

West Germany leads with 98 castle hotels, with France close behind with 80 and Austria with 53. Other countries covered are Belgium, Denmark, Great Britain, Greece, Holland, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Portugal, Scotland, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland.

THE TENNIS capital of the world is just one of the claims made by recreation-minded Palm Springs, Calif. It offers numerous courts, both public and private club, and it offers bright sunshine in which the currently "in" game can be played.

TOURIST TRAFFIC REACHES A NEW HIGH

More than three million American and European tourists crossed the Atlantic during the first half of 1972, on their way to a new annual record for travel in both directions.

"During the first six months of the year more than 1,700,000 Americans traveled to Europe, an increase of 24 per cent over the nearly 1,400,000 who made trips during the same period in 1971," said R. Newell Lusby, board chairman and president of Diners Club. "At the same time, more than 565,000 Europeans came to our shores, an increase of 21 per cent over the 465,000 who came here during the first six months of last year."

Figures for the second half of 1972 have not yet been compiled, but expectations are that they will show a continuation of the trend noted for the previous six months.

Lusby said preliminary figures and reports from government and travel industry sources, including 118 airlines around the world with which Diners Club has credit card agreements, point to new travel records between the U.S. and the Continent. About 98 per cent of Americans traveling to Europe go by air.

"In addition, reports from government agencies, hotels and other establishments in 143 countries and territories where the Diners Club card is used indicate a record year for American tourism all over the globe.

"The American traveler is on the move and it is certain that last year's record of 5,700,000 U.S. tourists to overseas countries has been broken by a large margin," he said. "So has the record number of 2,500,000 foreign visitors who came here last year."

The most popular first stop for Americans visiting Europe remains England, as it was last year, he said. Among the most popular countries on the Continent for U.S. visitors are the Netherlands, France, West Germany and Italy.

"Japan, England and Germany sent the most tourists here during the six-month period, with Japan leading the field with more than 185,000. In 1971 some 300,000 Japanese came to the U.S. and it seems they topped that figure in 1972."

Lusby said the increase in travel by Americans reflects the improved economy, and that travel to this country reflects more favorable currency exchange rates.

"America is obviously a better travel bargain for foreigners than ever before, due to currency adjustments. And lower air fares have helped increase travel in both directions," he said.

Tourism Is Growing In Alaska

Alaska has ended its most successful tourist year in history, and travel officials who say tourism here is still in its infancy predict the sky is the limit as to how big the stripling industry will grow.

State Travel Division officials said 140,000 tourists visited Alaska this year, 90 per cent in the five-month period from May through September. The figure is up from about 115,000 a year ago, they said.

By far the greatest tourist attraction is Mount McKinley National Park, where visitors increased from 45,000 a year ago to 270,000 this year, primarily because of the opening last fall of the new Anchorage-to-Fairbanks Highway, which cuts through a corner of the park.

Visitors to Arctic points of Nome, Kotzebue, and Barrow numbered 15,000 last year, and Wein Consolidated Airlines, which recently was awarded exclusive operating rights in the area by the Civil Aeronautics Board, said the number increased substantially this year.

Alaska Airlines, which received exclusive operating rights in southeastern Alaska, has begun a strong promotion effort to lure tourists to the state capital of Juneau and the fishing and recreation areas around Sitka and Ketchikan.

State travel officials say Alaska could become one of the greatest tourist attractions in the world and point out the state's vast and sparsely popluated territory, natural scenery, abundant wildlife and unspoiled environment as reasons for optimism.

THE HARBOR and the skyline of Dakar, Senegal's capital city, show it to be a developing, modern metropolis. But for the visitor, Dakar still retains the imprint of its French colonial days, plus colorful African markets that deal vociferously in a number of local crafts. (Christian Science Monitor photo)

Dakar Is Africa's Modern, Colorful, Growing Gateway

Senegal's Capital City Draws Tourists With Hotels, History

By JOY GERVILLE-REACHE

DAKAR, SENEGAL — Dakar, the capital of Senegal, is the natural gateway to West and Central Africa.

Located in the middle of the African bulge, it is the nearest point on the African continent to both North and South America.

Pan American Airways and Air Afrique, the airline owned by a dozen French-speaking African states, both operate a direct service to Dakar from New York, only seven to eight hours' flying time.

Dakar also is only a few hours by air from the main cities of Western Europe, and many Europeans going south in search of the sun make it their starting point for an African tour.

AIR AFRIQUE now has a network of routes radiating out from Dakar — north to Mauritania and Morocco and south and west to Mali, the Ivory Coast, the Upper Volta, Chad and other French-speaking states. It also covers the English-speaking countries of Liberia, Nigeria, Ghana and Sierra Leone.

All this part of Africa is rich in tourist potential. New hotels are going up to cope with the rising tourist flow, but there still are not enough of them.

Dakar airport — known as Yoff Airport — is modern and efficient but small by American and European standards. It is located on the northern side of the Cap Vert Peninsula, where the Senegalese capital lies on the southern side.

Most of the hotels have their own limousines to run you the nine miles into town. The taxi fare is about $6.

THERE IS A very pleasant hotel located near the airport at N'Gor beach, which has its own tennis courts, golf course and riding facilities. Part of the hotel's accommodations consists of bungalows built among the trees near the shore. These are comfortable if not luxurious, and are equipped with showers and electricity.

The view from the hotel's terrace of the Atlantic Ocean and breakers is a magnificent one. N'Gor Island, just off the coast and reachable by rowing boat, has a good bathing beach.

Like Yoff Airport, the N'Gor Hotel is some way out of town, and you need a taxi to get into Dakar. The taxi drivers are friendly and helpful. If you know any French at all, use it. They'll like it.

IF YOU ARE stopping in downtown Dakar for a day or two don't miss a visit to Goree Island, once the main staging point on the West African coast for the slave trade. The island, where Portuguese seamen first landed in 1444, now is preserved as an historic site. The old slave house is still there and can be visited.

There is a frequent ferry service between Dakar and Goree, and it is worth spending several hours on the island exploring its old forts. Goree also has a good restaurant with an open-air terrace.

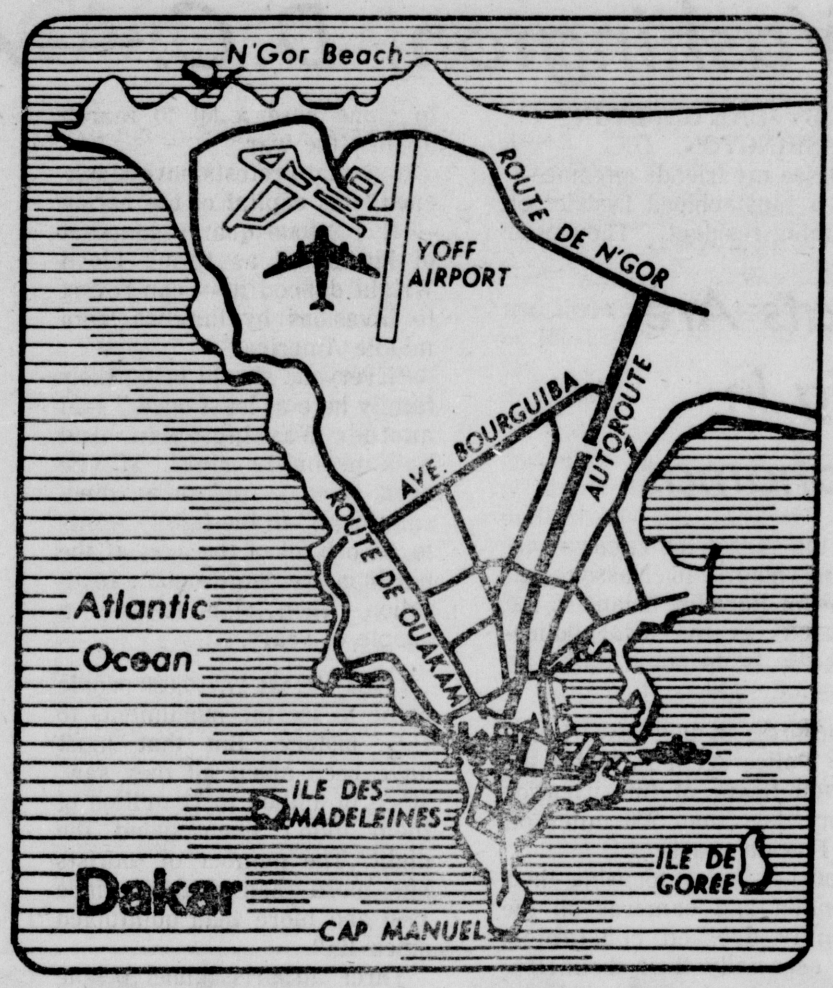
Dakar itself is a developing modern city with, inevitably, strong reminders of the French colonial period.

IT HAS A new luxury hotel, the Teranga, with many of the rooms looking out over Dakar Bay and Goree Island. Of the older hotels in town, the best known is the Hotel de la Croix du Sud. Hilton International is planning to build a 360-room hotel, with its own private beach, on the city's residential fringe.

There are several colorful African markets in Dakar with a wide variety of local products to choose from, ranging from gold and silver jewelry to wooden carvings and gay printed cottons.

The work of the gold and silver craftsmen is sold by weight at government-fixed prices. For all other products be prepared to bargain.



AT YOFF THERE is an airport shop specializing in the products of local craftsmen. Of course it is modest compared with the duty-free stores you find in Paris, London, or Frankfurt. But some of the local souvenirs are excellent buys.

Dakar has the advantage of an excellent climate from December through May, with brilliant sunshine tempered by cool Atlantic breezes and virtually no rainfall.

Electric Carts Help Tourists

By CYRIL GUERRERA

NEW ORLEANS — One of the chronic problems in the quaint Vieux Carre French Quarter is, frankly, aching feet.

Middle-aged matrons from Memphis, schoolteachers from Stillwater, farmers from Fresno — they walk up and down the streets, shopping, seeing the old courtyards, poking around.

They get awfully tired. But this year, they're walking less and seeing more.

NEW TYPES of vehicles are zipping around the French Quarter, giving sightseers an alternative to blisters and fallen arches.

Battery-powered carts decorated to look like fanciful carnival floats and three-wheeled pedicabs have joined taxis, horse carriages and buses in giving tourists some respite from those blocks and blocks of hard pavement.

Advocates of the electric carts and leg-powered pedicabs say they fit in with the Old World atmosphere and don't pollute the environment.

"They are quiet, odorless and completely without any cause to disturb people," Max Hill says of the carts he rents.

"THEY CUT down on pollution and help preserve the old buildings being shaken up by buses," Thomas Baumler Jr., says of his pedicabs.

Vehicles are entirely barred from Jackson Square and its environs. Bourbon Street is open to pedestrians only between 7 p.m. and 3 a.m.

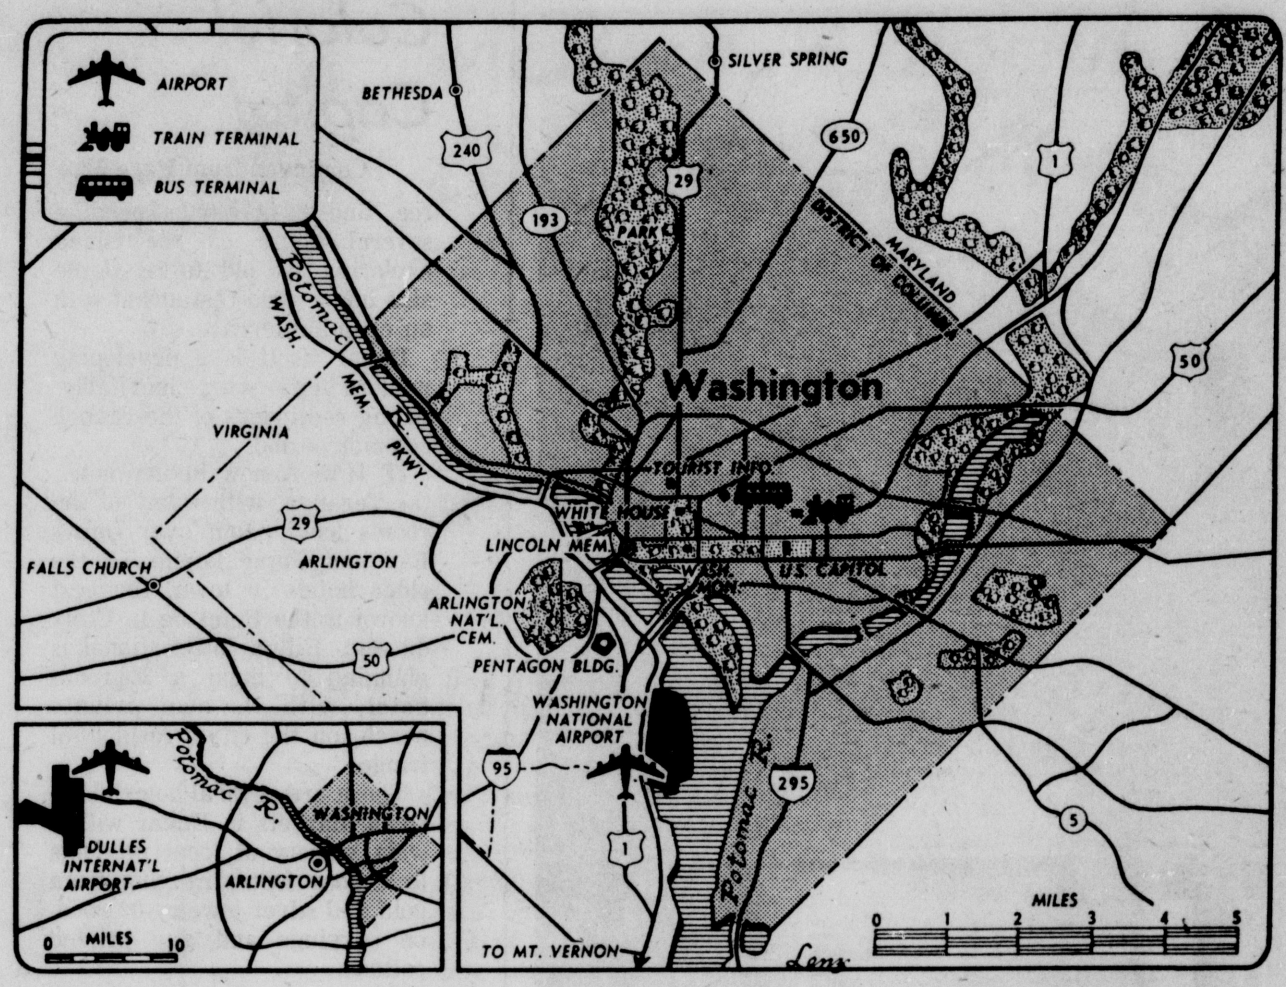
Washington, D.C.—A City Of Marble And Museums

By JUNE GOODWIN

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "I don't see my friends anymore," said a mustachioed District of Columbia resident. "They used to come here a lot to march against the war."

Now that protests have slackened, this capital of the nation — this "stone quarry gone out of business," as Frank Lloyd Wright dubbed it — can revert to invasions by families from middle America.

"Everyone should bring their family here at least once," said another Washingtonian. And he's probably right. Maybe even twice — unless a "dinosaur fiend" in the family wants to absorb all of the ages of the earth in the Smithsonian Institution. Then plan to stay a couple of years.



Hats Are Big In Bahamas

A top target for camera-carrying visitors to Nassau and adjacent Paradise Island in the Bahamas is the local policeman. He is, to put it aptly, an arresting sight.

Uniforms of the Royal Bahamas Police seem to typify the foreign flavor of this vacation resort, less than 200 miles off the Florida coast.

Tourists enjoy focusing their attention and cameras on the smartly dressed constables, and especially their distinctive hats . . . tropical pith helmets for walking the beat, flat-topped caps for directing traffic, and spiked helmets for parades and ceremonial duty.

Hats, as a matter of fact, play a big part in the fascination of Nassau and Paradise Island.

In and around Rawson Square, for instance, reasonably-priced hats of varying size, shape and description are offered for sale seven days a week in a mammoth straw market. Industrious workers enjoy chatting with tourists and welcome the chance to give their persuasive sales talks. It's hard to turn down a bargain, and after all, no matter how many boxes and bags occupy hands and arms, a hat is easy to carry when perched on the head.

Even Nassau's surrey horses wear attractive straw bonnets. Rawson Square is the best place to see them — and to arrange for a clip-clopping ride along flower-lined streets.

LAST YEAR 17,700,000 people came to see the monuments to U.S. history. But that must have been about all they saw, since 10 million to 11 million of them didn't even spend the night. The number of tourists has more than doubled since 1960 and more than quintupled since 1950.

Three airports funnel people into the District of Columbia and the surrounding states of Maryland and Virginia. Friendship Airport, although 28 miles from town, is considered by the natives (if there is such a thing in this politically polyglot city) to be the airport for Baltimore.

National Airport, just 10 minutes from the Washington Monument, has had its activites curtailed by environmentalists and local residents. But congressmen won't give up the convenience of a quick trip to their constituents. Flights are limited to about a 500-mile radius — with Chicago a 700-mile exception.

NO JETS ARE allowed after 10 p.m. and planes must land and take off angled up or down the Potomac River.

Dulles International Airport, 30 miles out into Virginia, takes the long-distance flights.

Designed by the late Eero Saarinen, the Dulles terminal's roof has that aerodynamic curve that is shared by bananas and airplane bellies. The control tower, a stolid concrete atlas, peers over mobile lounges, enormous $80,000 moving rooms that scuttle passengers from planes to a terminal that has no telescoping boarding ramps.

Dulles Airport is one more magnificent Washington monument — even if it is 40 minutes (buses ply the route) into the Virginia countryside.

IF MONUMENTS and magnificent buildings don't move you, chances are Washington won't. Fortunately for this city, they move a lot of people.

One friend of mine raved so much about the Lincoln Monument lighted up at night that I made a special trip to see it. He was right. It's an awesome, columned temple to equality and freedom. It literally and figuratively raises all heads.

While there, go across the street and down the steps to the edge of the reflecting pool. You can then see the whole watery Washington Monument, including the pyramid tip with its blinking red warning light.

When the magnificence of marble and granite cools for you and an office building becomes a stack of tinted aquariums, don't bolt the city. There are some humanizing activities.

FOR EXAMPLE, you can eat at the Museum of History and Technology's cafeteria and watch the waves of school children who allow no artificial awe to settle, even in a monumental city.

Also, the Federal Bureau of Investigation runs a popular tour. "They shoot real machine guns," said one grown-up boy.

At the Bureau of Engraving and Printing you can witness the production of stacks upon stacks of very clean "filthy lucre." Or go to Capitol Hill and sit in on a congressional committee hearing. They are usually more lively than activity on the House and Senate floors.

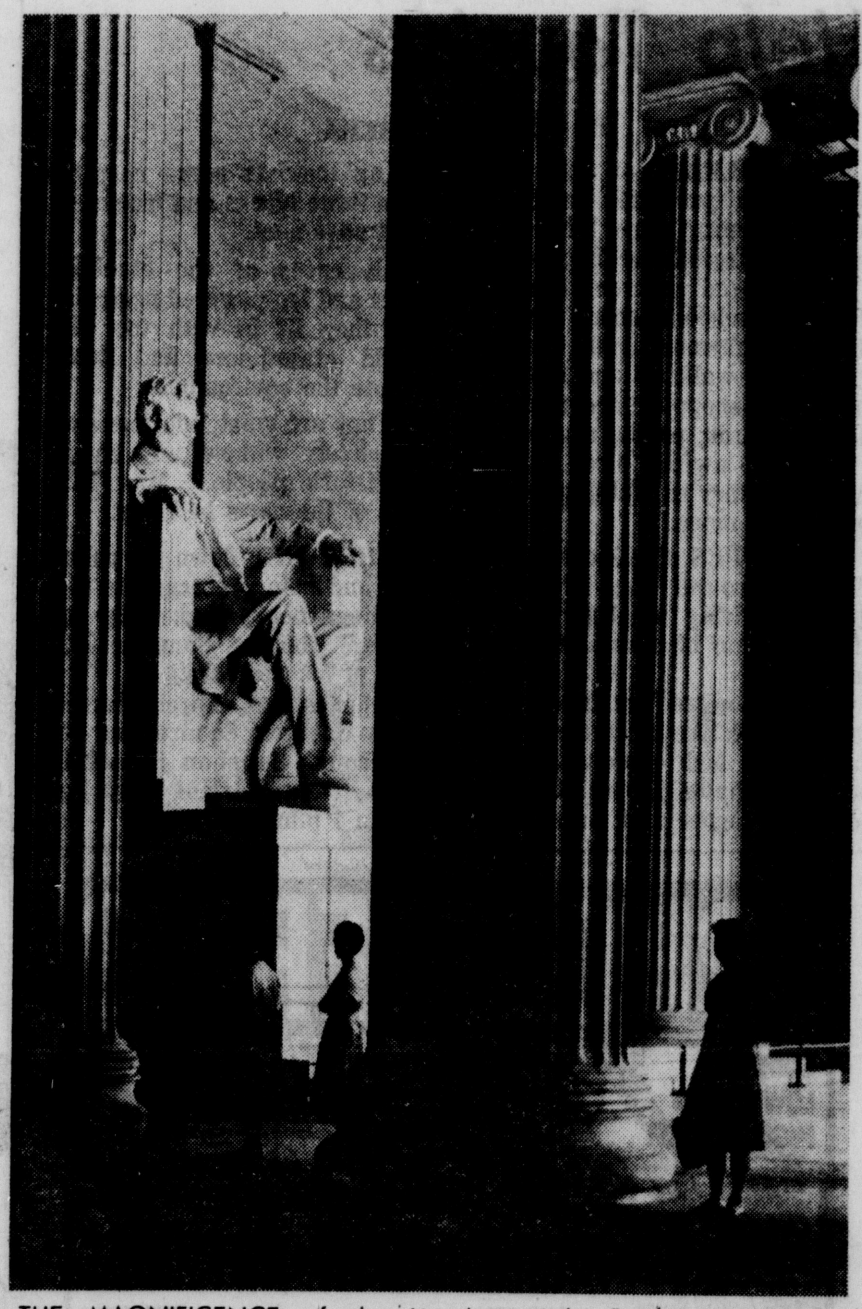
Cherry blossoms may not be by definition "humanizing," but there's no doubt that humanity turns out in force each spring on their account. Cherry blossom week varies each year to avoid conflict with Easter.

"EASTER WEEKEND is when everybody turns up in D.C.," says one cabdriver. "They all have the same idea — to beat the cherry blossom crush."

It's hard to predict the blossoms, but they usually burst out the first two weeks of April. About 10 per cent of the bloms are pink the rest white. At night, lights sweep the Tidal Basin, which wears a necklace of the trees, given to the capital by the mayor of Tokyo in 1912.

One bit of advice for the week-long festival: Walk if you can. Because to drive is to "creep."

©1973 The Christian Science Publishing Society



THE MAGNIFICENCE of the Lincoln Monument has not been overrated, visitors to Washington, D.C., discover for themselves. And the monument is particularly memorable when seen lighted at night.

Fabulous Taiwan Collection Of Chinese Art Treasures

By PEGGY DURDIN

TAIPEI, Taiwan — For the many Americans experiencing an increased or new interest in things Chinese, a visit to the National Palace Museum here during a trip through the Far East is a must. It can easily be the high point of the whole tour.

Under the curves of the museum's green-tiled roof, outlined against mountains which, through centuries, meant far more to the Middle Kingdom's painters than just fine scenery, is the greatest single collection of Chinese art today outside Mao Tse-tung's People's Republic.

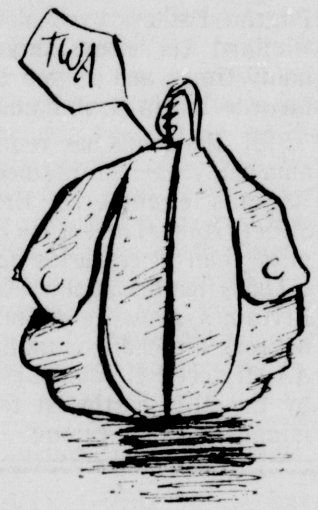
Indeed, in this treasure house there is literally something to intrigue every kind of visitor, including those not particularly addicted to art or Asia.

ITS QUARTER of a million objects range in form and time from animal bones on which were scratched, more than 4,000 years ago, the precursors of the most artistic writing now extant, the Chinese ideograph or "character," to the ornate European clocks and watches with which the famous — and infamous — Empress Dowager surrounded and amused herself in the early part of our own century.

Each visitor will of course find delight in and remember best the particular objects or object striking his taste or fancy.

Since intellectual voyages in to the very distant past are so enjoyably mind-stretching, and China's ancient bronzes have yet to be surpassed, it may be a great cooking pot which someone decorated 3,000 years ago with a complicated, bold design artfully escaping ornateness.

IT MAY BE an imperial concubine's gold hairpin, from which extend, on delicate golden wires, butterflies with carved coral wings, jade heads and bodies, pearl eyes and pearl-tipped antennae which once quivered with every little movement of a beauty's silk-clad figure in a royal garden.



It may be objects carved from jade, the hard, many-colored stone Chinese associated with virtue, purity, good luck: a cicada placed two thousand years ago in the mouth of a dead warrior, a royal scepter dotted with flowers of gold and precious stones, or a tiger-shaped talley in two parts, one held by the emperor, the other by one of his field commanders.

These and myriad other artifacts can catch the eye or the imagination. There is calligraphy, long considered their highest art form by a people who so honored the written word that constructing "characters" with balance, carefully contrived imbalance, movement, grace, and strength used to be a prerequisite for official position and was considered a sure revelation of moral integrity or the lack of it.

ONE CAN SPEND hours in front of the museum's great — or simply amusing — paintings: a landscape, its lake and great mountains towering into infinity merely suggested, but done with such skill, feeling, and understanding that it passes the Chinese test of illustrating the artist's view of the universe.

Finally, the best of Chinese porcelain has no peers; anyone attracted by line, color, and texture will pull himself away very reluctantly from the lively imagination of Ming or the refined serenity of Sung. In fact, one of the museum's excellent special exhibitions, a showing of over a thousand pieces of breathtakingly beautiful Sung porcelain, has possibly never been equaled at any time anywhere.

For 600 years the best way to reach Edinburgh from London has been the Great North Road.

It is almost solidly paved in history. The Emperor Constantine was proclaimed at York along the route, most of the Pilgrim Fathers lived along it, Richard III came this way many times and stayed at his favorite inn in Grantham.

Still, the route has remained amazingly standard since the Romans engineered Ermine Street from London to York more than 18 centuries ago.

Today the brand new roads of Britain's growing motorway network are challenging the old A.1. If speed is your object, go by the M.1. northwest to Birmingham, north through industrial Lancashire and through the lovely Lake District to the Roman town of Carlisle, and then northeast to Edinburgh.

IF NATURAL Britain is your quest, by all means take the old road.

Hatfield, just outside London, is the great home of the famous Cecil family. Lord Burghley, famous courtier of Queen Elizabeth I, was one of them. The modern (that is, built around 1620) house is one hundred feet or so from the ancient palace where Princess Elizabeth learned that she had become Queen Elizabeth I.

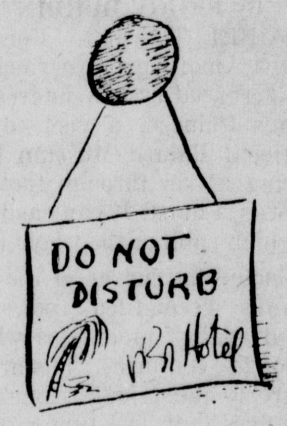
Cambridge lies only 22 miles east of the A.1. Stop off and see the glories of the King's College Chapel, the Backs, and sufficient beauties and glories to take up a week of your time. The medieval cities of Lincoln and York also lie just off the road, although closer.

BY BAWTRY and Doncaster, near Scrooby, are the houses of the Pilgrim Fathers. A bit to the west is Sherwood Forest, with memories of Robin Hood.

Farther north, just off the road, east and west are York and Harrogate, each a mine of beauty and history. York has the greatest cathedral in northern Europe. At Richmond is one of the finest castles in Britain — perfect, because it was built in a useless place, for military purposes.

Along the way, see Durham with its superb cathedral, one of the few truly Norman structures in Britain, high above a bend in the River Wear, also picturesque Alnwick with its mighty castle. It belonged to the Percys, whose long feud with the Scottish Douglases made border history. It was from Alnwick Castle Hotspur rode forth in Shakespeare's Henry IV to his final battle with Prince Hal.

Then proceed to the extraordinary walled town of Berwick-



on-Tweed — which lies on the Scottish side of the river, gives its name to a Scottish county, and yet is in England.

OR ONE CAN follow the unbelievably lovely roads to Jedburgh across the wild Durham and Northumberland moors from Darlington or Newcastle, or cross England from Newcastle to Carlisle along the line of Hadrian's Roman Wall.

If you like, you may take the excursion to Northumberland's castle-studded coast and the mystic isle of Lindisfarne.

After a period in Edinburgh, long or short according to your needs and desires, try returning to London, if you go by car, on the other coast. Divert at Penrith for a tour of the Lake District via Keswick, Grasmere, Ambleside and Kendal. Then hurry south on the M.6.

If you turn off the motorway to visit the enchanting town of Chester with its still flourishing medieval shopping center, why not continue west to the North Wales mountains? Or turn south along the Welsh border to Ludlow, then to London via Worcester, the rolling Cotswold Hills, Shakespeare's home-town of Stratford-upon-Avon and Oxford.

The possibilities are endless, each more beautiful than the other. If you give yourself time, driving from London to Edinburgh can be a memory worth cherishing for life.

JEEP COMMANDO WAGON

Wanderlust . . . there's a bit of it in all of us. The urge to travel — to explore — to see places we've never been to before.

And there's a vehicle that can help you answer that call to adventure. It's at our showroom now. The '73 Jeep Commando Wagon.

To roam over those back country trails and paths, a vehicle has to be tough. Tough enough to take on torture tracks like the Baja Peninsula — like the Jeep Commando has done time and time again for years.

And to help make that kind of adventure the pleasure it should be, a vehicle should be comfortable. Again, the '73 Commando fills the bill. Front bucket and optional rear bench seats give back-easing support, complementing the Commando's smooth highway ride. And, if you choose, you can top the whole package with air conditioning and automatic transmission.

The 4-wheel drive Jeep Commando. Tough enough to take you on your kind of adventure. Comfortable enough to smooth out the bumps along the way. See the Commando at our showroom today.

It's Still The Frontier

Anchorage Isn't Yet The Cosmopolitan City That It Would Like To Be

By LANSING and KATHARINE SHEPARD

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The interesting thing about Anchorage is that everything isn't at all what it first seems.

Driving in from the city's brand new international airport makes one feel as though he has landed in any average, modern American city. The city's outskirts are lined with clusters of recently built, prefabricated, development-type houses, interspersed with plastic-looking franchise establishments and shopping centers, as are common along the outskirts of many American cities.

Clothing stores both in and around Anchorage display the latest in men's and women's fashions. Modern street lights arch over the city's wide, multi-laned, one-way thoroughfares.

The four square blocks of downtown Anchorage really resemble those of any other city.

HERE AND THERE, from the wood and cinder-block underbrush of an older Anchorage sprout modern office buildings and hotels 15 stories and more, with colors maroon, pink, yellow, white and brown. Buzzing, flickering neon signs flash below.

But an approach by land along the Alaskan Highway gives one another feeling about Anchorage.

Coming in from the east by car one sees no hint of civilization for hundreds of miles at a stretch — just miles of scraggly spruce and tamarack, and magnificent mountains. Occasionally a moose or bear can be spotted crossing the road . . . or even a wolf bolting into the underbrush.

Except for the dirt or macadam road (dirt becomes hardtop at the Alaskan-Canadian border) dipping, hunching and snaking ahead, one could easily imagine himself to be the sole human in a vast, primitive wilderness.

ANCHORAGE LIES ensconced on a tip of land at the confluence of the Knik and Turnagain Arms of Cook Inlet, almost as far west as Honolulu and farther north than Helsinki. It is a community of 50,000 people — somewhat between the big frontier town that it is and the cosmopolitan city it would like to be.

To walk the Anchorage streets is to sense this quickly. There is a rugged looseness about the place that is the trademark of a frontier town. In marked contrast to the business-suit set with whom they share the city, oilmen, Indians, Eskimos and hunters saunter down the wide sidewalks, lending an air of the bush to the metropolis.

Fur is big business here. Eskimos and Indians coming in from the bush sport beautifully made fox and sealskin parkas that would spark the envy of many a wealthy city-dweller from the "lower 48," as Alaskans refer to the rest of the United States.

ORIGINALLY THE construction headquarters for the Alaska Railroad in 1914, the city really didn't begin to come into its own until World War II when it became an armed forces support community and an off-duty retreat for servicemen from the military bases that sprang up in the 1940s. Anchorage is bordered by Elmendorf Air Force Base, and the Army's Ft. Richardon, which, until oil was discovered nearby in 1954, supplied Anchorage with the main reason for its existence.

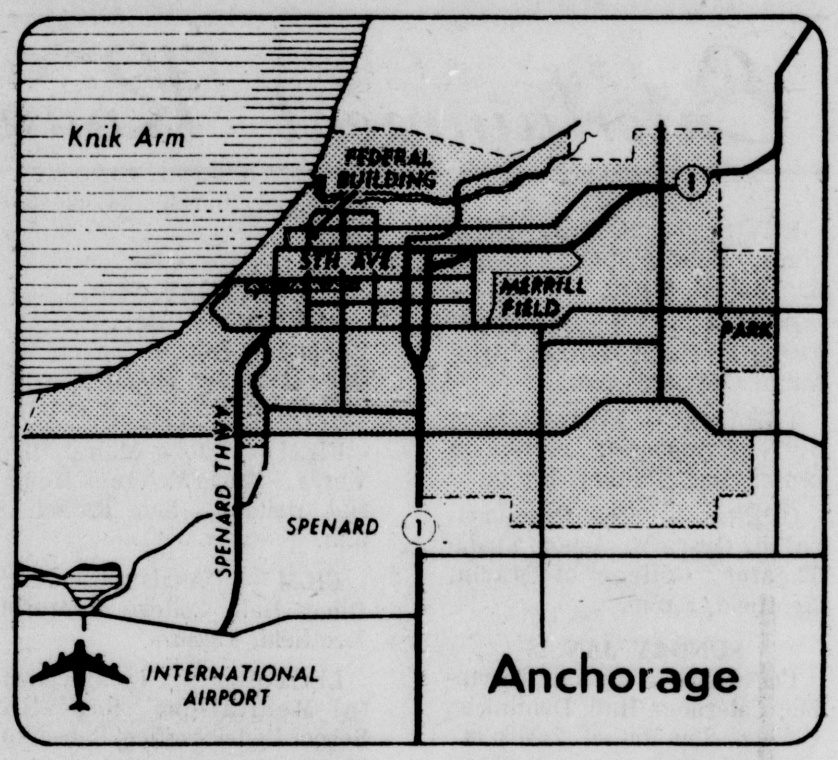
Today, the city is the largest in Alaska. Boosted by the discovery of oil in the Kenai Peninsula and Cook Inlet — and, most recently, in the vast fields of the Alaskan North Slope — Anchorage has become the transportation and commercial heart of its corner of the world.

Since big-game hunting is a major attraction here, it is also the major outfitting center for the western part of the state.

MANY GOOD hotels have sprouted with the city's rapid growth. (Despite inflation, Anchorage has experienced an incredible building boom.) The Anchorage Westward, the Captain Cook, and the Holiday Inn are three of the largest hotels.

The city also boasts several motels, including the Red Ram Motor Lodge whose dining room is one of the city's most popular restaurants.

The cost of living is high because of the city's great distance from markets in the continental United States. We spent $7.25 for breakfast that included two orders of hot cakes, a side of bacon and one of ham, and three orange juices.



Anchorage is bordered closely on two sides by the Alaska Range to the northwest and the Chugach Range to the southeast, by Cook Inlet on the southwest. To the north, on a clear day, you can see faraway Mount McKinley. (We first saw it at about 10 o'clock one October morning, snow-covered and pink-looking in the sunrise.)

IT IS THIS incredible setting which makes Anchorage such a pleasant memory for us.

On the road to Seward along the Turnagain Arm to the south of Anchorage we passed Portage Glacier, so close that we could see the startling deep blue of its glacial fissures. Glacial lakes are turquoise, and we filled our thermos from little streams that rushed down the mountains around us.

Two Critics Of Medicine's Mainstream

By DON KEOWN

THE PEOPLE'S HANDBOOK OF MEDICAL CARE by Dr. Arthur Frank and Dr. Stuart Frank; Random House, 494 pages, $8.95.

"Younger doctors are a new breed. The salvation of the medical profession probably lies in the new physicians. Many have rejected the traditional conservative approach of their older colleagues. This is particularly true in many of the large cities." Drs. Arthur and Stuart Frank in "The People's Handbook of Medical Care."

The "gadfly" has had a traditional and useful role in American society, especially beneficial in those fields where there is a tendency toward complacency and even arrogance — politics, the law, medicine, journalism, the military, education, etc.

Medicine, however, has been until recently a field in which there has been less criticism from within than most. Partially through the efforts and the power of the American Medical Assn., doctors generally have presented a fairly united front to the public.

Only rarely has a member of the profession had the audacity to suggest openly that all is not what it might be among the practitioners of the healing arts. And when that has occurred, the critics sometimes have found themselves ostracized and on the defensive.

But in recent years that has been changing. A new body of physicians, most of them young activists involved in social welfare causes, has become more and more outspoken in evaluating and criticizing American health care. Any and all professions, journalism not excepted, are certain to benefit from this kind of movement, no matter how disturbing the dust stirred up might be to a smug, prosperous establishment.

Two such outside-the-mainstream doctors who have zoomed to prominence with the publication of their "The People's Handbook of Medical Care" are the young brothers Drs. Arthur and Stuart Frank. Their book is largely devoted to an updated, wide-ranging compendium of the ailments and the emergencies that confront modern Americans and to suggestions as to what to do aboutthem. But the two also incorporate into the book some sharp criticism of their profession as it has functioned in America.

"Medicine is a business as well as a science and an art," they begin. "Anyone who regards it simply as a sacred calling beyond the greed and avarice of 20th Century America is putting himself at a substantial disadvantage in negotiating for the purchase of the very specialized services that doctors and hospitals are selling."

It is a point the Franks make repeatedly — that "the medical care business thrives on the passivity of the patient and reinforces the mysticism of medicine." That "the average person regards the medical profession with awe and fear. He avoids it as long as possible, but when he is forced to deal with it, he usually regresses to the behavior of an anxious 9-year-old and allows himself to be led passively through a maze of out-patient and in-patient care, referrals, consultations, X-rays, operations, enemas and sleeping pills. The mindless cooperation is seldom resented by the patient and is particularly agreeable to the health professionals."

This mystique, built upon shiny equipment, public relations, incomprehensible jargon and a tyrannical or patronizing manner, has the two brothers say, "created the illusion of working tolerably well — at least — for middle America." But, they charge, "it obviously collapses under the weight of such problems as the care of 30 million American poor, the elderly, the family that doesn't speak English, the radical, or the individual with unusual appearance or life style."

They continue: "In America there are three categories of medical care: 1. an unreasonably expensive system for the rich; 2. an increasingly deteriorating system for the middle class; and 3. an unconscionably bad system for the poor." And they add: "Although the medical industry and the AMA will loudly deny it, the quality of medical care often depends on one's ability to pay . . ."

The Franks discuss in detail the various kinds of treatment available, "how to identify good sources of medical care" and the boundaries of patient rights and physician responsibilities. Repeatedly, in their book and in television appearances publicizing it, they return to their thesis that the patient should insist upon his role as an adult consumer in his relationships with the physician, the clinic, the hospital, and reject efforts to treat hin as a child. "Ask your doctor questions," they advise, "and let him know you want an honest answer."

The bulk of their book is given over, after some preliminary discussion of how to recognize disease, to the best courses to follow in the event of medical emergencies (head injuries, rib fractures, stab and bullet wounds, fractures, sprains, bruises, cuts, burns, cardiac arrest, etc.); common ailments (the cold, flu, hepatitis, infections, hemorrhoids, diarrhea, constipation, nosebleed, hiccups, toothache, acne, insect bites, dogbites, motion sickness, etc.); and the health-related "social-political" problems of our age (drugs, draft counseling, tear gas, venereal disease, birth control, abortion, depression, suicide, alcoholism, obesity, nutrition, exercise, sexual problems, etc.).

There's a chapter on medical supplies. And the appendices include a free clinic directory, a listing of the chapters of the Medical Committee for Human Rights with their addresses, and a statement of the military's medical fitness standards.

The credentials of the two Franks are impressive, lending strength to their advice and criticisms.

Arthur specializes in internal medicine and public health in Washington D.C. He received his Bachelor of Science degree from Massachusetts Institute of Techology, a Master's from the University of Pennsylvania and his medical degree from New York University, with postgraduate work at Stanford Medical Center and the National Heart Institute. He has taught at Georgetown University and has been deputy director of the Comprehensive Health Services Program of the Office of Employment Opportunities, chairman of the Washington D.C. Chapter of the Medical Committee for Human Rights, and a coordinator for demonstrations in the national capital.

Stuart holds a B.S. Degree from MIT and a medical degree from New York University with postgraduate work at Yale-New Haven Hospital, the Institute of Cardiology in London and the National Heart Institute. He practices medicine and cardiology in San Francisco, and is a clinical assistant professor of medicine at the Univeristy of California. He has been involved with the Haight-Ashbury Medical Clinic and helped to organize the San Francisco Chapter of Medical Committee for Human Rights.

Such formidable backgrounds lend authority and sting to the criticisms the two doctors aim at their fellow professionals and the system in which they function. It adds, too, to the confidence of the reader in what seems to be sensible, reasonable advice on home care and on how to obtain the best available professional care when such is indicated. And despite the "now" generation connections of the two doctors, their counsel seems to be applicable to people of all economic, social and cultural sectors.

THE 1941 BOOK, "Win at Backgammon" by Millard Hopper," has been reprinted as a $1.50 paperback by Dover Publications, to capitalize upon the renewed interest in that old game.

SWEDENBORG Foundation has reprinted Helen Keller's "My Religion," with introduction by Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, as a $1 paperback.

Sleuths & Suspense

STORMTIDE by Bill Knox: Doubleday, 157 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This is another of those solid, masculine yarns by Glasgow newspaperman Bill Knox about the Scottish Fisheries Protective Service and its battles with evil-doers.

This time Chief Officer Webb Carrick and his mates are summoned to an island in the Hebrides off Scotland's western coast. There a storm is brewing, both weather-wise and man-wise. A feud has split the island population. A young girl is dead. And soon there are other deaths.

Knox gives you a lot of action, along with a likeable hero in Garrick and some strong "supporting players." And he gives you a good dash of Scottish local color plus some salty nautical flavor as well. It's a good one.

A DIFFERENT TWIST TO STORY OF BOUNTY

CAPTAIN BLIGH AND MR. CHRISTIAN: The men and the Mutiny, by Richard Hough; Dutton, 305 pages, $10. Reviewed by John D. Yates.

Lt. William Bligh was to become a vice-admiral and to live to 63, his naval and political career a patchwork of mutiny and gallantry, hated and feared by some but admired by many more, and earnestly and loyally loved by one woman.

"He was loved, too, for several years — the most eventful and fateful years of his life — by one man, as emotional, passionate and mercurial as himself, with whom his name will always be linked — Fletcher Christian."

This overt reference to a homosexual relationship between these famous protagonists is perhaps the most dramatic and earth-shattering statement ever made about the tragedy of the Bounty's famous voyage. Yet the withering confrontation between the two men, which affected the lives and fortunes of all on board, could be explained as a love-hate relationship — often a phenomenon with most destructive consequences. The author advances his theory with intelligence by giving us a new look at the backgrounds and natures of Bligh and Christian.

Bligh was sailing master on Capt. James Cook's ship HMS Resolution on the last famous voyage of discovery. Then 24, he was known on the lower deck as a man of exceptionally strong will and of uncertain temperament: "He is an uneasy man to have on board... never know what his mood will be... he is a nagger, has a sharp temper, hates indolence and inefficiency, and admires incisiveness but never gives praise for anything..."

On the fateful 14th day of February, 1779, when Cook was killed by the natives of Hawaii, Bligh's actions may have caused his chief's death. It seems that the second ship of the expedition, HMS Discovery, had lost her cutter to some light-handed natives. Cook with several men went ashore to try and get the boat back. Bligh was in command of the Resolution's cutter and stayed offshore to cover the party on the beach and to "prevent any canoe going away." He ordered his men to fire prematurely at a small departing canoe. The shots frightened the natives on shore who were thronging about Cook and prompted them to attack, resulting in the Captain's death.

Bligh never thought twice about the possible result of his action, but others blamed him for Cook's death.

In 1785 he accepted the command of a merchant ship, Britannia, owned by one Duncan Campbell. A friend of Bligh's wife Elizabeth recommended Fletcher Christian to the new commander.

"Wages are no object," wrote Christian, "I will readily enter your ship as a foremaster until there is a vacancy among the officers." Christian sailed on two voyages to the West Indies with the Britannia, first as a gunner, and on the second boyage as second mate. He was 21 and Bligh 10 years older, and a strange close relationship developed between the two. Bligh had Christian to dine every-other day, treated him like a brother, and "was blind to his faults," although Christian was an indifferent seaman.

And so they came together again for the voyage of the Bounty. There was little tension before Tahiti, and Bligh's cruelty and unreasonableness have been exaggerated. After Tahiti things were very different. During their stay in "The Paradise of the World" the men were allowed to decline into a state of dissolution and incompetence. The situation brought Bligh quickly to the end of his tether — his temper became uneven, he became relentless in demands for perfection, and he took to publicly humiliating his officers. The Bounty needed an iron hand; but the pressure should have been applied evenly — with justice, not with abuse and histrionics.

For a man of Christian's sensitivity and mercurial temperament, the return to the rigors and responsibilities of shipboard life and of the renewal of close and intimate relations with Bligh in the confined quarters of the Bounty was especially hard to bear. His own agonized summary of his state of mind at that time — and later — was that he was in hell. Soon the other officers suffered severely from the stresses affecting Bligh and Christian; stresses that were brought about by Bligh's sexual jealousy. The young man, who he had indulged and instructed, had been sharing his bed with a particularly beautiful Tahitian girl, and now became the target for Bligh's vengeance.

Author Richard Hough does not devote his whole narrative to the strange relationships; he tells the whole story of the two men, the navigational feats of the one and the decline of the other on Pitcairn.

Hough has written a number of other stories of the sea, all with a special twist and new interpretation — "The Potemkin Mutiny," "Admirals in Collision," "The Blind Horn's Fate." This latest book about the enduring story of the Bounty — also with a new twist — is a most intriguing addition to his list.

An Historic Romance Made Dull

CARO: THE FATAL PASSION: The Life of Lady Caroline Lamb, by Henry Blyth; 260 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

The affair between Lady Caroline Lamb and Lord Byron is one of literary history's most melodramatic romances.

Yet, in spite of having had access to new material about this stormy incident, author Henry Blyth has produced a trite, boring book.

He uses the critical style — we always know what he, the judge and biographer, thinks — to tell his readers that Caroline and Byron lived dramatically. But he never shows them doing it.

CAROLINE LAMB
Lord Byron's love

The text is sprinkled with "There is no doubt that..."; "by no stretch of the imagination could he have realized"; or "she must have known." Blyth's style consists primarily of simple sentences laced with homilies.

The bright spots are direct quotations from letters or diaries. Byron once wrote of Caroline, "It is provoking to see her throwing away her own happiness by the handfuls..." And she to him, "You have told me how foreign women revenge: I will show you how an Englishwoman can."

These were exciting people. Henry Blyth doesn't give them a chance.

A Novice In Jungles Of Brazil

TAGGING ALONG by Marika Hanbury Tenison; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 335 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Karen Hunter.

The dense tropical jungles of Brazil are hardly the place one would expect to find a frail wife and mother accustomed to the comforts of a Cornwall country house, but Marika Hanbury Tenison is a delightful exception. She is determined to tag along with her explorer husband on his expedition into the primitive jungles of Brazil to see first-hand the living conditions of the Amerindians.

Her book is a record of the three months they spent in the remote jungles learning about, living with and trying to help and understand these forgotten people whose life style is being threatened by progress.

IN THE UNCHARTED jungles of Brazil, young Marika Hanbury Tenison was photographed with the Amerindian friend she called "Laughing Boy."

It is not really a documentary but rather a very warm personal story of the Amerindian people and of the problems Marika herself encounters trying to cope with intense heat, biting insects, dangerous animals, primitive living conditions and the never ending red-tape that seems to crop up everywhere.

Whereas her husband Robin wrote a very factual book on the serious problems of the Amerindians, Marika's book is quite different. It is a more lighthearted journal, full of the warmth and excitement that can only be seen through the eyes of an intelligent novice in the field of exploring.

The Best Of The Gilliam Columns

FOR BETTER OR FOR WORSE — The Ecology of an Urban Area, by Harold Gilliam; Chronicle Books, 183 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Jean Rauzy.

The author of "San Francisco Bay" and the beautiful "Island in Time," about Point Reyes Peninsula, offers a selection of articles from his regular feature "This Land" from the Sunday Chronicle "This World" section.

The composite effect is a strong treatise on the progress made in the preservation of nature's bounty in the Bay Region and an eloquent plea for further moves toward this end. He effectively links all these efforts — and he takes pride in the Bay Area accomplishments — to human survival in general.

Marinite Gilliam is a practical soul, who tries to view fairly all the complexities of problem-solving creating other problems. His chapter on the salvation of the sea otter and its effect on the abalone industry has some fairly workable suggestions for a possible solution.

The section on the Tamalpais Creek struggle will be particularly interesting to Marinities as it represents a calm, after-the-fact analysis of an event which generated so much heat at the time.

The final chapters of the book "To Enjoy the Environment" illustrate what seems to be Gilliam's personal philosophy: "The natural environment can also be a means to survival, at least a means of achieving health and sanity." The descriptions of the coastline and the personally conducted tours through the wonders of the Bay Region are sheer poetry.

AN AWARD FOR BOOK

Mary Lois Dunn's "The Man in the Box" has been voted a Sequoyah Children's Book Award by the Oklahoma Library Assn. The anti-war book was published in 1970 by McGraw-Hill Book Co.

Some New Books For The Juniors —

The church mouse is an established favorite character in children's literature.

But never before has there been one quite like Arthur, the title character in Graham Oakley's "The Church Mouse" (Atheneum, $5.95). And rarely before has a church cat, this one named Sampson, figured in the tale.

Although Sampson is friendly he is also often sleepy, so that Arthur suffers from loneliness. His solution: To invite all the other mice in town to also live in the church.

Needless to say, this creates problems —for the parson, the congregation, Sampson and even for Arthur. But when the situation nears a crisis, the mice population has an opportunity to restore itself to good graces by thwarting a burglar with evil intent upon the church candlesticks. Sampson, too, gets into the act.

Oakley, a scenery designer for British television, has in the past concentrated upon illustrations for children's books. But this time he proves he can also tell a witty, amusing story — one that parents will enjoy along with their offspring. And the art is first-rate — colorful, detailed, tingling with life and humor. One of those special books that number only a few during any one publishing season.

OTHER NEW books for juniors:

For the young joke and riddle buff: "The Electric Radish and Other Jokes" (Doubleday, $3.95) by Susan Thorndike with funny illustrations by Ray Cruz. "Gems" like: "What goes 999 thump, 999 thump, 999 thump?" The answer: "A centipede with a wooden leg." And: "What is the best way to catch a squirrel?" Answer: "Sit in a tree and act like a nut." Corny? Chestnuts? Sure, and that's the way kids like them. They'll break up over the same old jokes time after time. Here the question is on a front page, the answer on its back page. It should provide lots of fun. And may drive dad and mother nuts and up that tree where the squirrel awaits.

"Across the Meadow" (Doubleday, $4.50) is a simple little tale, story and pictures by Ben Shecter, of how Alfred the cat decides to take a vacation. His itinerary takes him across the meadow and brings him into contact with many old and new animal friends. But there's an underlying meaning behind Alfred's journey. For his is a trip from which he will not return. And the message is that life's end, like Alfred's arrival at his destination, can be a gentle, restful thing. This secondary meaning, however, will escape the smaller child, which might be just as well. Shecter once again demonstrates he is a truly gifted graphic artist, producing some marvelous illustrations.

"Moon-Uncle, Moon-Uncle" (Doubleday, $4.95) is a book of rhymes from India, translated by Sylvia Cassedy and Parvathi Thampi, with illustrations by Susanne Suba. The translators have managed to give their English versions of these traditionals borrowed from another land and culture a kind of nursery rhyme lilt that should please young ears.

The Right Way With The Paint Roller

Handyman's Pages

By ANDY LANG

Selecting the proper paint roller for the job at hand may sometimes appear a bit confusing because of the wide variety of roller covers offered by manufacturers.

There is, however, a rule-of-thumb developed from years of experience: the smoother the surface to be painted, the shorter the nap of the roller; therefore, the rougher the surface, the longer the nap.

Short nap covers are best on plaster and dry walls; medium on light stucco and smooth concrete; long nap on rough masonry, brick, block, heavy stucco and wire fences.

While manufacturers neglected for years to advise consumers which rollers were intended for which jobs, the tendency is now to tell on the packaging some facts about the rollers. Some hardware and building supply dealers have displays to assist in making the correct choice.

THE PAINT TRAY should be filled to where the shoreline of paint reaches halfway up the slanted surface. The roller is loaded by dipping it in the tray, then rolling over the higher and drier surface to remove paint. On vertical surfaces, the first stroke should be upward, then downward, then crosswise.

Always start rolling in a dry section and toward the one just painted. Don't press down. Let the roller do the work. Roll slowly and carefully into trimmed edges.

The edging should be done first with a trim brush or edging tool.

IF YOU ROLL too fast, the roller will spin at the end of a stroke, causing splattering. Don't make the common mistake of keeping the roller going after it has begun to run dry.

Prompt cleaning of the roller immediately after it has been used will assure longer life and continued good results. Squeeze excess paint from a removable cover with a roller cleaning tool or roll repeatedly on old newspapers.

For oil paints, immerse the cover in any good roller cleaner, turpentine or mineral spirits. Or place the roller cover in a large glass jar partially filled with a cleaner, then agitate and repeat several times. If you have used latex or water paints, clean the roller with mild soap and lukewarm water. Wipe the roller dry.

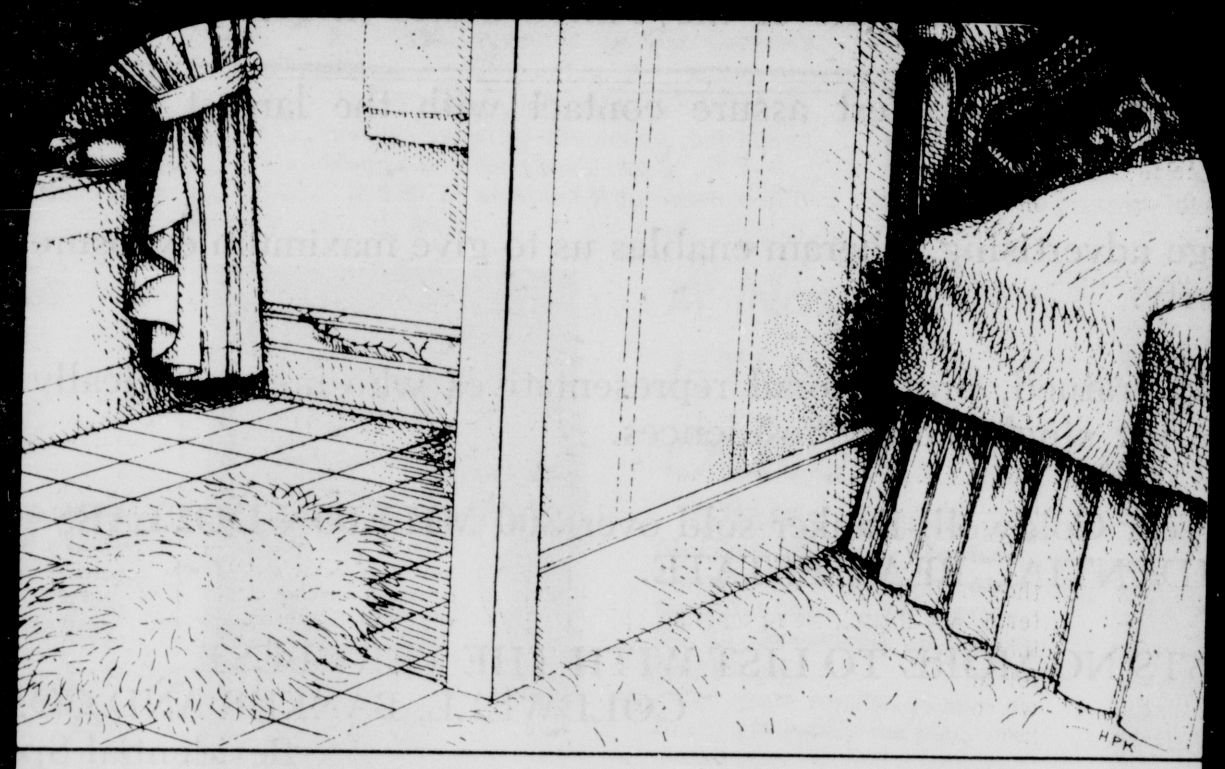
STORING THE ROLLER in a plastic bag will keep it fresh and clean.

Close relatives of paint rollers are flat applicators and paint mits.

The applicator, a kind of pad, usually of lambskin or mohair, is akin to brushing, since it strokes the finish right onto and into the surface.

The mitt, which fits over the hand, is especially useful for painting things like pipes, gutters, downspouts, wrought iron railings, flagpoles, etc.

Marin Homeowner's Notebook



CHECK FOR DRAINAGE PROBLEMS NOW.

Every homeowner in Marin should get in touch with his walls immediately. Your walls can warn you about hidden water leaks or drainage problems.

Some water problems are obvious. Puddles around the house or in the garage can be easily seen (and should be corrected). But water trapped under your house, seepage under your concrete-slab floor, or hidden plumbing leaks might not be noticed. Unless your walls warn you.

Inspect the base of your inside walls on the lowest level of the house. Look for darkened circles in the paint or wallpaper. Feel along for wet or slimy areas. Sniff for musty odors in all the rooms. Be sure to move large pieces of furniture and look for mildew on the wall behind. Also look behind boxes in the closets.

These are signs that water is standing under your house instead of draining away. The water is soaking upward, spreading dampness through the walls and floors.

In time, the dampness will warp floors and damage wall and floor coverings. But far more dangerous, the dampness makes your home's understructure vulnerable to all of Marin's most destructive pests—termites, boring beetles, and dry rot. All are attracted by dampness.

So if you read the writing on the wall, call Hinkley & Gordon. We're a licensed structural pest control company. We're licensed general contractors. And with two generations of experience in Marin, we're experts at correcting drainage problems.

Age Of Plastics Still In Infancy

By CAROLYN MURRAY

The idea of molded plastic furniture may turn off some traditionalists. They still carry the "plastic" idea of the late 1940s when the industry was just beginning to develop, and manufacturers were merely imitating other materials and forms.

Now the nature of the raw material is better understood and color control specialists have achieved new heights. Yet we are still in the infancy of the age of plastics, so we seem afraid to break away from recognizable forms in home furnishings.

EXAMPLES OF the new concepts in plastic furniture are the table and chairs shown here. Made by Syroco of durable ABS plastic, they represent recent technology in the use of a mold to create an integral piece of furniture. But the finished product looks and serves the traditional role established by the classic idea of a table.

The chairs have moved a little away from older seating concepts, but even they are "chairs" in the most traditional sense, with three legs instead of four, but legs even so.

These are great and good buys. The table is about $60, the armchairs retail for about $20 each. They are light in weight, strong on color (available in white, black and yellow). They're perfect for 20th Century gypsies, mobile home owners, high-rise dwellers. And certainly they are most acceptable as a trial run with plastics.

THEY MIGHT be a good way for a young family to explore moded plastics as future home furnishings material. They are visually "safe"; not too way out and practical to boot.

But one of these days the consumer audience may want to see molded plastic furnishings that speak more directly for the nature of the raw material. If the word molded means anything at all, it means formed and shaped to a rounded countour. The hard-edge object doesn't seem "molded," does it?

When we consumers are ready to accept the molded concept, manufacturers are capable of creating new forms for seating, eating, sleeping and living.

YOUR WHOLE house might well be a molded shell, with plastic plumbing pipes, tubular circuitry and precast, plastic bathroom equipment, cook centers and storage units. There's nothing revolutionary about any of these ideas, each has already been developed and marketed, but in individual industries.

The Sears' catalog, for example, sells molded plastic sinks in delightful colors, molded toilet seat covers, PVC pipe for every purpose, precast shower bases, laundry tubs, plastic tile and wall panels, plastic brick and stone wall coverings, awnings. You name it, it's probably been delineated in plastic.

My point?

This is the age of plastics, yet many of us still reject the word and the concept. Now that major manufacturers are seeking ways to make their products more nearly biodegradable (although that's not exactly the term they'll use), we're moving into a new wave of creativity for the design world. Why don't we encourage the best they have to offer, instead of pretending that plastics don't exist?

THIS DINING GROUP might be a nice and easy way to introduce molded plastics into the decor of your home. Certainly there is nothing radical or extreme about the design. Made by Syroco, a division of Dar Industries, the bistro chair sells for about $20, the table for less than $60.

About CARPETS

By Doug Emerson

THE SHAGGY CARPET STORY is only just beginning, it seems. This most popular of today's carpets is not through adapting and changing its ways to take its place in today's casual surroundings.

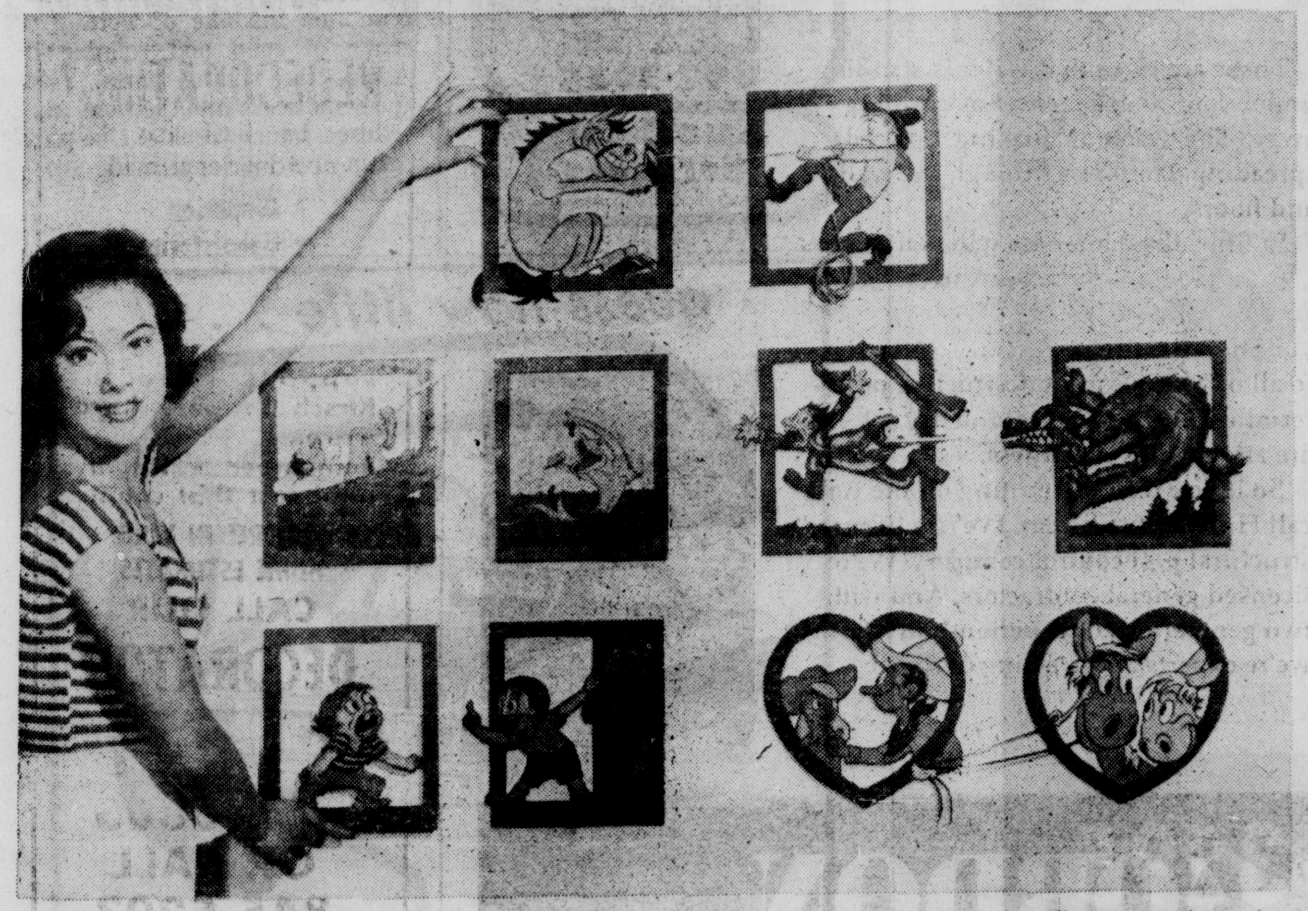
You can have shags, for instance, that are multi-level, combining very long and short fibers to create new textured beauty that is ever changing. And patterened shags are beginning to make their appearance on the floor fashion scene.

Brighter colors and brighter fibers are seen in all the new carpets, including shags. And the delicious new combinations of colors give you almost unlimited decorating versatility. You'll find these blends in bold colors and patterns, and also in very subtle combinations of two, three or more colors.

Shaggy carpets look and feel luxurious, the long, long pile taking much of the credit. And now the carpet designers have discovered there is great variety possible in textures and patterns working with these longer length yarns.

Discover the shaggy story for yourself and your home by visiting our extensive carpet displays, featuring the collections of America's foremost carpet designers and manufacturers. The long story is a great value story, too!

RIB-TICKLERS FOR THE WALL



THERE IS NOTHING like a bit of humor on the wall to brighten up a room — and the faces of the occupants. Steve Ellingson has come up with this set of do-it-yourself wall pictures that smacks of the slapstick comedy of the Mack Sennett era. They are perfect for the recreation room, the den, the children's room —even the office. There are 10 in all of these pictures, and they come in sets of two. Ellingson calls them his "double talk" pictures. To obtain the complete set of patterns for all 10 pictures, just send $2 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Group C-2. Patterns are full-size, so that you can trace them onto wood. Then cut them out with a coping saw, and paint as directed. Scrap plywood will do fine for the wood. And it is such a simple job that the kids can get into the act, too. Their reward? Well, perhaps the Pecos Kid tugging away at a stubborn bronc.

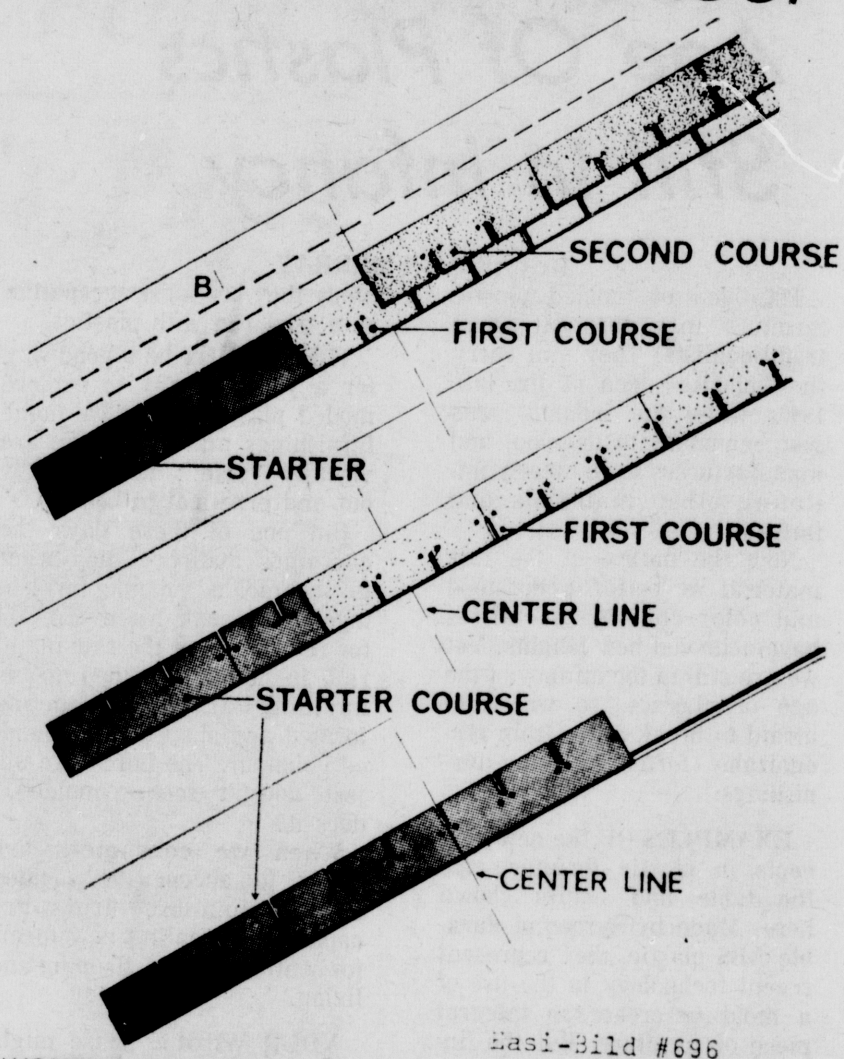
WORKING ON THE ROOF



Easi-Bild #696

WORKING ON THE roof is a job many home handymen consider out of bounds for them. But, claims Donald R. Brann of the Easi-Bild Pattern Co., it isn't difficult or dangerous, once the proper precautions have been taken. And providing the handyman knows what he is doing. A check for $1.50 made out to Easi-Bild and sent to Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, with a request for "Roofing Simplified Book" 696 will get you off to that good start. Directions and illustrations cover new roofing, re-roofing, repairs, gutter and skylight installation. The instructions are applicable to all kinds of roofing — asphalt, wood, metal, slate, etc. The handyman is advised to use a scaffold. And, in case he can't rent one, there are directions on how to build one. There is also guidance for the making of a safety harness. Include your zip code number to speed delivery of the book.

Some Groundcovers For California Yards

Garden Page

In the micro-environment that used to be called his yard, the home gardener faces no problem when it comes to covering ground.

In days gone by, Ivy was the traditional cover. Today, gardeners in California have, in greater number and variety, more plants to select from as groundcovers than gardeners in any other state.

Ivy — in its many interesting forms and textures — is still a popular choice with Californians. Yet, if one's micro-environment was covered up to here with Ivy, it would be an uninteresting world.

INTEREST: Perhaps that's what contemporary gardeners look upon their ground covers to provide.

Focal interest and beauty is provided by a cover of Bougainvillea. The dwarf types produce mounds of luxuriant green foliage and blankets of red flowers for many months of the year.

If frost is a threat, Sasanqua Camellias may add just the touch of interest needed in a part of the landscape. Junipers tolerate cold weather and in this big family are many top performers when it comes to providing beautiful cover.

TALKING ABOUT popularity: The Trailing African Daisy is near the top of the list. It's fast-growing and will fill in quickly when planted two feet apart. Besides white, there are pinkish and lavender flowers — good size, and in great profusion.

More carpet-like in appearance is Potentilla, which features tiny crisp green leaves and small bright yellow blooms. The effect is something else. The foliage and texture add a dimension to the sunny areas of the garden.

Potentilla would be a possibility for shadier locations, too, as would Ajuga (Carpet Bugle). The latter boasts blue spikes of quaint color; green or bronze foliage provides a refreshing accent to the setting.

FREEWAY-TOUGH, Baccharis, Ornamental Strawberries and even some native Ceanothus varieties are also California choices for groundcovers.

It's not feasible to mention them all — or even list them. In making selections, visit your nursery. It will have a host of covers from which to choose — and the nurseryman can play a role in assuring that you glean the utility, beauty and enjoyment from the plants; in your micro-environment.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓Select your new roses now at the nursery while bareroot stocks are still plentiful.

✓During the winter months, lawns should be kept mowed and fed. But delay those chores while the soil is wet and mushy. Constant treading on wet lawns tend to compact the soil and create problems for later in the year.

✓Now is a good time to shop for azaleas in bloom. Most prefer shade or part-shade, although Sun Azaleas will tolerate a fair amount of sunshine.

✓Plant gladiolus bulbs now, and follow up with sucessive plantings every two weeks until spring, for a long succession of garden color.

✓For immediate winter and early spring color in your garden, set out transplants of pansies, violas, calendulas and fairy primroses.

✓Remember those two prime winter-time garden chores — pruning, and dormant spraying — if you haven't already taken care of them in your own yard.

FLOWER OF THE YEAR

WHEN LEADING seedmen, meeting at Pennsylvania State University, were asked to select a "flower of the year," they voted overwhelmingly for the Giant Cactus-Flowered Zinnia, basing their choice upon its popularity with their customers and its performance in their trial gardens. It's a popular flower with Marin gardeners, too. It comes in a wide range of colors, from snow white, through shades of yellow, orange, pink and red, to purple. The huge flowers sometimes measure five inches across. And the quilled petals give it the name "cactus-flowered." They withstand heat, drouth and humidity well, thriving in a sunny location.

FRANCISCO BLVD. FLOOD SALE

On the mornings of January 16th and 18th, Francisco Boulevard was completely under-water. Many businesses suffered tremendous flooding and water damage to all types of merchandise including stereo equipment, carpeting and even brand new automobiles. Bellach's Furniture Parking Lot was completely submerged by the extensive flooding as well as our receiving warehouse. Fortunately we experienced very little damage to merchandise, however we suffered tremendous loss of SALES. Because of rising waters the entire Francisco Boulevard area was not accessible. Our January Floor Sample Clearance Sale was affected tremendously because of the flooding. We were not able to make enough room for our 1973 incoming new merchandise. Therefore we have to further sacrifice in price much of our remaining floor samples. The following is just a small listing of many of our special floor sample prices:

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Mary Martin will be seen again in the musical version of "Peter Pan" on the NBC network from 8 to 10 p.m. March 2. This is a repeat of the color tape production first aired in 1960 and repeated in 1963 and 1966. Previously, the star had appeared in two live colorcasts of the notable James Barrie play in 1955 and 1956.

ABC plans a two-hour sports special for the afternoon of Feb. 25 in which 10 of the world's outstanding athletes will compete in a series of events other than their specialties. They may choose seven of 10 events in which to participate. The athletes are Joe Frazier, Johnny Bench, Johnny Unitas, Gary Player, Rod Laver, Jean-Claude Killy, Stan Mikita, Elvin Hayes, Jim Stefanich and Peter Revson.

A weekly series of 90-minute contemporary musical specials will be introduced on NBC Feb. 3. Titled "Midnight Special," the shows will begin at 1 a.m., immediately following conclusion of "The Tonight Show starring Johnny Carson." About 10 musical acts will appear each week, with a major recording artist or group acting as host.

A musical salute to Broadway composer Harold Arlen is the theme of "Jack Lemmon-Get Happy," a one-hour special on NBC at 9:30 p.m. Feb. 25. Arlen himself is among those who will help present his songs as actor Jack Lemmon plays host. Diahann Carroll, Cass Elliot, Johnny Mathis and Doc Severinsen will appear.

Ed Sullivan is host for a pair of CBS specials coming up in February and March. The first is "TV Comedy Years," a salute to past and present television comedians and their programs. "Ed Sullivan's Broadway" will be devoted to a resume of New York stage entertainment, with highlights from Broadway musicals, as well as from vaudeville and burlesque.

Ethel Merman Can Still Belt Out A Song 40 Years After Her Career Began

By WILLIAM LAFFLER

More than 40 years ago Ethel Merman stepped into the world of show business as a young singer bubbling over with vitality.

There had been no singer like her. There has been none since. Imitators come and go but nobody has ever been able to offer a reasonable facsimile of her voice.

When composers wrote songs which needed a vibrant voice they kept Merman in mind. Among them were Cole Porter, Irving Berlin and George Gershwin. On stage or on screen, Ethel Merman made their songs unforgettable.

Time has had no effect on her ability to belt a song. Today her voice is just as clear and youthful as it was when she delighted audiences in the 1930s.

If you don't believe this, just listen to "Merman Sings Merman" (London XPS-901). The album contains such Porter classics as "I Get a Kick Out of You," "Blow Gabriel Blow," "It's D'Lovely" and "You're the Top."

Even though the lyrics of "You're the Top" are dated, Merman sings them in such a lively manner that they invoke visions of nostalgia.

The Merm leans heavily on Berlin tunes — "You're Just In Love," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "I Got Lost in His Arms," "They Say It's Wonderful" and "There's No Business Like Show Business."

Stanley Black and the London Festival Orchestra and Chorus offer a backdrop of music reminiscent of the 1930s for Miss Merman's marvelous performance.

COLE PORTER also was an ideal composer for Ella Fitzgerald, another great singer who defies the ravages of time.

"Ella Loves Cole" (Atlantic SD 1631) contains new Fitzgerald interpretations of 13 Porter showtunes, including "I Get a Kick Out of You," one of the numbers in the Merman album.

While it is senseless to compare the voices of Merman and Fitzgerald, it might be interesting to hear their interpretations of "I Get a Kick Out of You" side by side. Merman goes after the lyrics in a wild, carefree manner, while Fitzgerald caresses each word.

ETHEL MERMAN
No reasonable facsimile

Among the songs in the Fitzgerald album are "I've Got You Under My Skin," "All of You," "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," "Just One of Those Things," "C'est Magnifique," "Love for Sale" and "Anything Goes."

Nelson Riddle devised the orchestral arrangements and his band is augmented by Miss Fitzgerald's own rhythm section consisting of Ed Thigpen on drums, Tommy Flanagan on piano and Keter Betts on base.

TAPE DECK — While the Dolby system of noise reduction has changed the future of the tape cassette, putting it on the same sound category with the stereo disc, its greatest application is made to the open-reel tape because it unreels at a faster speed. A good model open-reeler is "Annunzio Paolo Montovani" (London LON 1 47193) because Montovani's music covers a wide spectrum of sound.

A Teac noise reduction box can be plugged into any good tape recorder and pre-amp and improve the sound noticeably.

FELLOW COMMISSIONERS

Juvenile Panel Member Holds An Investigation

By ERIK INGRAM

A former Marin County Grand Jury member and current chairman of the county's Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission has surreptitiously investigated fellow commissioners using confidential police files and other records.

Exactly how Richard J. Oesterman went about probing backgrounds, he wouldn't say, though he admitted he has "a make" on the entire 11-member commission.

"I've served two terms on the grand jury and can find out anything I want to know," he proudly told the Independent-Journal. "It's important to know who you are working with."

Reaction to the disclosure from commissioners reached by the I-J varied from disgust and indignation to acceptance and passive approval.

Oesterman, a British intelligence agent in Nazi-occupied France during World War II, served on the 1967 and 1969 county grand juries. He later contemplated running for county supervisor, but did not do so.

The first hint of his latest activities came Tuesday when he told the county Board of Supervisors it should make police checks through the state Department of Justice on every appointment to county boards and commissions.

"I think it would be a good idea to put a word through C I and I (Criminal Investigation and Identification) to find out how these people check out," Oesterman told the board. "I do."

"When I took over as chairman of the Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission, I got a "make" on everybody that came in to see what they were like . . . I have a rundown on everybody on the commission."

When Chairman Arnold M. Baptiste questioned whether he had done so under the authority of the County of Marin, Oesterman replied he hadn't but rather "as a private citizen, I can find out what I want."

A check with the justice department in Sacramento revealed, however, that C I and I records are not available to "private citizens" but are issued in strict confidence to law enforcement agencies.

When the discrepancy in his statement to the board was pointed out to him the following day, Oesterman responded he had never claimed to have made C I and I checks.

"I just recommended to the supervisors that they make the checks; I didn't say I had," Oesterman said, even after his earlier statement was reread to him. "Maybe I was too forceful, but you have to be to get your point home, 'ya' know."

Then, contradicting himself once again, Oesterman repeated his claim of the day before that he had checked commissioners' backgrounds "but I'm not going to tell you how."

He added, however, that it

Viet Peace Agreement Signed In Paris Today

Rogers Initials Cease-Fire Pact

PARIS (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers and foreign ministers of the other three parties in the Vietnam war signed a peace agreement today, ending America's longest armed conflict.

"We have every hope that the cease-fire will extend to all Indochina. Then there will be no major fighting in any part of the world," Rogers said afterward. He then was driven to Orly airport to return to Washington.

Under terms of the agreement, the cease-fire was to begin at 4 p.m. (PST). All U.S. forces in the country are to be withdrawn and all American prisoners of war are to be released within 60 days.

After the ceremony, Rogers and the foreign ministers of South Vietnam, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government toasted their agreement in champagne at a reception given by the French government.

Meanwhile in Washington the U.S. today proposed a Feb. 26 meeting of foreign ministers to guarantee and maintain the Vietnam peace agreement.

The American proposals for an international conference derived from article 19 of the agreement which Secretary of State William P. Rogers and the other foreign ministers signed in Paris.

The State Department announced that U. Alexis Johnson, Undersecretary of State for political affairs, called in the ambassadors of the Soviet Union, Great Britain, Poland, Hungary, Indonesia, and Canada to make the proposal.

A North Vietnamese delegation spokesman said Foreign Ministers Tran Van Lam of South Vietnam and Madame Nguyen Thi Binh of the Viet Cong also raised their glasses to each other and afterward talked at length.

The reception marked the first time the warring sides had mixed socially since the war began a quarter century ago.

"It was relaxed and friendly. The four sides mingled," said an official of the International Conference Center where the agreements were signed. The two signing ceremonies themselves were formal, swift and cool.

The morning session involved all four parties and lasted one hour. The afternoon ceremony in which only Rogers and North Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh participated, lasted 30 minutes.

The four ministers signed at 11.08 a.m. (5:08 a.m. EST), one generation after the war began more than 25 years ago.

The second session was more relaxed than the morning ceremony. Rogers was accompanied by his wife, wearing a gray, red and black coat, and they posed for photographers outside the hall.

Trinh, signing faster than the American, finished several minutes before him and sat with folded hands until Rogers was through.

At the end, the two stood up and faced each other across the round table 26 feet in diameter. Rogers hesitated and seemed about to speak, then raised his hand in salute to Trinh. Grinning, the North Vietnamese waved back. Two minutes later the hall was empty.

In a silence broken only by whispers from the delegations, the four ministers in the morning ceremony steadily penned signatures for 19 minutes. By the end of the day 208 signatures had gone into the green, red, olive and brown folders holding the treaty. Seventy-two of them were made by Rogers.

Some 1,200 Communist-led demonstrators booed and hissed Rogers and Lam as they arrived and left the conference hall, formerly the Majestic Hotel, once the Nazi Gestapo headquarters in Paris. Mrs. Binh got a rousing reception from the demonstrators, who waved Viet Cong and North Vietnamese flags.

After a protest from the South Vietnamese delegation, police cleared the street of spectators and there were no flags when the afternoon session started.

Before leaving for Washington aboard his special plane, Rogers said that he was "particularly pleased about how smoothly the signing ceremony went today.

"When I arrive in Washington, the cease-fire will be in effect," he said. The delegations announced tonight that representatives of the four-party joint military missions that will carry out cease-fire supervisory work on the ground in Vietnam held their first meeting today. They met in the same conference center the peace was signed.

A statement said "subsequent meetings of this commission will be held in Vietnam."

Mrs. Binh was the first to sign the agreements during the morning session involving all four parties.

Following that ceremony and a lunch Rogers gave for his South Vietnamese counterpart, the American and North Vietnamese returned to the conference table where four years of peace negotiations had been held to sign another set of the same agreements plus an additional accord providing for an end to the U.S. naval blockade of North Vietnamese harbors.

Ferry Manager Is Upset By Commuter Complaints

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

The Golden Gate Bridge District's ferry transit manager reacted with hurt pride, surprise and denials yesterday to complaints about the Sausalito ferry service. (See another bridge district story, page 1.)

Stanley M. Kowleski said more than 1 million passengers were carried last year on the ferry, "but I have had practically no complaints — including from the Golden Gate Commuters Club."

The complaints, alleging filth, inefficiency, indifference, inconvenience and discomfort, were reported yesterday by the Independent-Journal. The gripes had been aired at a club meeting Thursday night.

As for the charge by a club member that the district treated riders "as nothing but a herd of cattle," Kowleski said that although the riders were "a vocal group, we have not had a single complaint on service, vessel condition, cleanliness or personal attitude of the crew."

The only complaint he could recall was one about his decision to apply a sticky substance to the tops of the float dolphins at the San Francisco landing to keep seagulls from dirtying them.

An environmentalist objected the substance could annoy the birds, he said.

Kowleski, a resident of San Rafael and a longtime shipping executive, observed that most of the complaints at the meeting of seven persons came from the club's president, designer David Elliott Stovel of Mill Valley.

"Mr. Stovel is a well-meaning but inexperienced young man who considers himself an expert in transportation," he said, "but to my knowledge he never has had any affiliation with or experience in the transportation field."

Stovel's descriptions of the ferry as filthy, he added, made it sound as if the boat had just returned from a long voyage through the South Pacific.

Kowleski stressed that he always welcomed complaints and suggestions from any ferry rider.

As for the drop in patronage aboard the ferry, he said, last May's fare hike and this winter's extremely bad weather were the causes — not any cut in service or conditions. Business will rise again with better weather, he predicted.

"We give the maximum service we can with one vessel," Kowleski said, noting the ferry runs virtually from dawn through evening seven days a week. Most maintenance has to be done during the night, he added.

Replying to Stovel's suggestion that better cleaning would

Saigon Troops Lose, Then Regain Provincial Capital

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnamese troops lost the provincial capital of Tay Ninh city to Communist forces but then recaptured it a few hours later today on the final day of the war.

Col. Le Van Thien, chief of Tay Ninh province, said Communist troops gained control of the provincial capital about midday but were unable to hold it after a counterattack by South Vietnamese forces and an uprising by its residents about sundown.

The city of 26,500, located 50 miles northwest of Saigon near the Cambodian border, is a major center of the Cao Dai Buddhist base. Had the Communists been able to hold it until the cease-fire becomes effective at 8 a.m. Sunday (7 p.m. EST Saturday), the city could have provided a possible capital for the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government.

"Yes, we lost control of the provincial capital at midday and the Communists were in control," said Thien in a telephone interview. "But we have won it back, mostly due to the uprising of the local people who are religious Cao Dai Buddhists."

South Vietnamese military sources said the district capital of Cai Lay, 46 miles southwest of Saigon, also was lost to the Communists today and there was no indication that it has been recaptured.

There was no immediate report of casualties or damage in the heavy fighting for Tay Ninh, potentially the last major battle of the Vietnam war. The fighting was underway as representatives of the United States, South Vietnam, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong were signing the cease-fire and peace agreements in Paris.

The only provincial capital ever lost to the Communists was Quang Tri City, 400 miles north of Saigon. It was taken by North Vietnamese in May 1972 but recaptured by the South Vietnamese four months later.

Nixon Unveils 'Common Sense' Budget; No Tax Hike Pledge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon today unveiled a $268.7 billion "common sense" budget that included a sharp cutback in the federal deficit and a pledge of no tax increases for two years if Congress follows his spending mandates.

The budget for the 1974 fiscal year beginning July 1 cut deeply into "New Frontier" and "Great Society" programs of the past two Democratic administrations, and abolished the Office of Economic Opportunity, spearhead of the government's antipoverty effort.

There also were major cutbacks for farm programs and housing, a modest increase for defense and the first increase in space flight spending in seven years.

In addition, the President urged a legislative spending ceiling at $268.7 billion, and said if Congress violated his budget guidelines, it could cause renewed inflation, higher taxes — or both. Congress refused to impose a similar spending curb last year.

Nixon estimated that the government would spend $12.7 billion more than it collects in the coming fiscal year. This is about half the projected $24.8 billion deficit for fiscal 1973 which Nixon defended a year ago as "strong but necessary medicine" to stimulate a sluggish economy.

But the economy is booming now, and the President's problem is to avoid a new round of higher prices kicked off by a heavy dose of federal spending.

With a finger pointed squarely at Capitol Hill, Nixon said: "I will do everything in my power to avert the need for a tax increase, but I cannot do it alone. The cooperation of the Congress in controlling spending is absolutely essential."

"I do not believe the American people want higher taxes any more than they want inflation," Nixon said. "I am proposing to avoid both higher taxes and inflation by holding spending in 1974 and 1975 to no more than revenues would be at full employment."

The President unveiled no major new programs and indicated that spending requests outside the budget would win approval only at the expense of an existing progam of equal value.

As an example of his approach, Nixon pared 2,654 workers from the White House payroll. Of these, 1,935 were employes of OEO, flagship of Lyndon Baines Johnson's "Great Society."

Johnson's war on poverty was not the only program in the area of human resources to feel the President's knife of austerity. Other casualties included:

Nixon's own program for a $2,400 assistance stipend for families below the poverty level.

The "Depressed Areas" programs begun in the first days of the Kennedy administration.

Funds for public libraries.

Baptiste Will Seek Novato Flood Bonds

Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste said yesterday he will seek to place a $4.5 million bond issue before Novato voters in April to finance flood control work on Novato Creek.

Baptiste, who said his proposal was prompted in part by last week's flooding in portions of the community, will ask for concurrence at a meeting at 8 p.m. Monday of the Novato Flood Control zone advisory board. (The meeting will be at the Novato Community House.)

If successful there, he will ask the county Board of Supervisors Tuesday to set a special bond election for April 17 for the flood district.

Baptiste told the Independent-Journal yesterday the zone's timetable had called for setting an election in November but the damage of last week's flooding "means we have to start moving now."

"I think the people of Novato will go for it," he said, adding it would add about 25 cents to the flood district's current tax rate of 14.5 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Successful passage, which requires a two-thirds favorable vote, would provide for 25-year

Laird Announces An End To Draft

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird today announced an immediate end to the draft rather than waiting for the June 30 cutoff provided in the law.

In a message to top Defense officials, released at the Pentagon this morning, Laird said:

"With the signing of the peace agreement in Paris today, and after receiving a report from the Secretary of the Army that he foresees no need for further inductions, I wish to inform you that the Armed Forces henceforth will depend exclusively on volunteer soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines. Use of the draft has ended."

The draft was extended in 1971 to run until June 30 of this year. Laird announced a few weeks ago that about 5,000 people would be drafted in March through June.

Laird's single qualification on ending the draft applied to conscription of physicians and dentists.

The Pentagon has been pressing for large pay boosts for military doctors —including pay supplements of up to $16,000 per year per doctor —in order to attract and keep enough volunteers.

"I am particularly hopeful

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Flu Epidemic

ATLANTA (UPI) — The National Center for Disease Control (CDC) declared yesterday that the nation is officially in the midst of a London flu epidemic, with 908 deaths attributable to pneumonia and influenza through Jan. 20.

The CDC made the declaration after the deaths due to flu passed the "epidemic threshold."

The Pacific Coast is still the hardest hit area of the country, the CDC said, with the most deaths reported in California, Oregon and Washington state.

Sniper Victim

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The general manager of the downtown Howard Johnson's motel died of gunshot wounds last night — the eighth victim of the sniper incident earlier this month.

W. Sherwood Collins, 56, died at Charity Hospital. Seven other persons — including policemen and sniper Mark (Jimmy) Essex, 23, Emporia, Kan. — were killed during the two-day siege of the motel, which began Jan. 7 when firemen were called in to fight a series of fires.

Eight Fire Deaths

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — An early-morning house fire today killed eight persons.

Firemen said they found bodies in "all four corners" of the eight-room, one-story structure.

At first it was believed the blaze had claimed seven lives, but an eighth body was discovered later in a bathroom. No cause was immediately determined.

Consumer Savings

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Department of Consumer Affairs reports it saved California consumers more than $1 million during the last six months of 1972.

Department director John T. Kehoe said yesterday a record 38,168 complaints — most of them in auto repair and home construction fields — were received by the department's regulator agencies during the six-month period.

To Host Luncheon

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — President Luis Echeverria will host a luncheon tomorrow in the border city of Ciudad Juarez for the governors of Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico.

The official agenda — if any — was not listed in yesterday's announcement.

Estuary Opens

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Oakland Estuary was opened to all shipping traffic last night, more than a week after thousands of gallons of oil seeped into the water from nearby storage tanks.

Coast Guard Capt. H. J. Lunch said the job of mopping up the last traces of the gooey mess would continue for another week.

Sinatra Honor

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan will help honor Frank Sinatra next week as the March of Dimes "Man of the Year" at a dinner in Los Angeles.

The governor's office announced yesterday that Reagan will make brief remarks at the affair for Sinatra Tuesday night at the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

Edward G. Robinson, 79, 'The Little Caesar', Dies

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) - Edward G. Robinson, the movies' "Little Caesar," whose snarling, cigar-chomping manner endeared him to millions as motion pictures' original tough guy, died of cancer last night at the age of 79.

A spokesman at Mt. Sinai Hospital said Robinson died at 7:00 p.m. Beside him was his wife, Jane, who had maintained a daily vigil at the hospital since he was admitted nearly three weeks ago.

Robinson had a history of heart trouble, suffering a heart attack while making a picture in Africa in 1962 and had been involved in a near-fatal traffic accident in 1966. He succumbed to cancer of the liver.

Robinson, who perhaps gained his greatest fame for his role in the gangster film, "Little Caesar," worked almost up until the end.

He recently completed a character role as a professor with Charlton Heston in the yet-to-be released movie, "Soylent Green" at MGM.

Robinson never won an Oscar for any of his 101 films dating back to 1931. He was to have received an honorary Academy Award at the Oscar presentations March 27 in recognition of his contributions to the film art.

EDWARD G. ROBINSON
Art collector, too

In private life, the short, stocky actor, who took to wearing a silver-grey beard in later years, was one of Hollywood's quietest. His main interests outside of acting were art collecting, listening to classical music and constant reading.

"I was born a character man," Robinson said in a recent UPI interview. "Millions of persons look like me-during the first week of life. People send me pictures of their babies saying the kids look exactly like me.

"I write back and tell them to wait a week or two until the infants outgrow it."

Born in Bucharest, Romania, on Dec. 12, 1893, Robinson was brought to the United States by his parents and at age 10, became an American citizen.

"I was born at the age of 10," he often told his friends.

Robinson had four brothers, all of whom, like himself, rose well above the modest circumstances into which they were born. All his brothers became either doctors or lawyers.

Funeral services will be conducted Sunday at Hollywood Temple Israel with Heston, a close friend, expected to give the eulogy.

Burial will be in New York.

Along with his wife, Robinson is survived by his son, Edward G. Robinson Jr., 38, who wrote an autobiography about his relationship with his father; a granddaughter, Francesca, and a brother, William Goldberg.

Bombing Of Lava Island Is Debated

VESTMANNAEYJAR, Iceland (UPI) — U.S. Air Force planes skirted the roaring Helgafjel volcano Friday to determine if bombs would divert its rivers of fiery lava away from the evacuated town of Heimaey.

In Reykjavik, the Icelandic parliament debated whether such bombing missions would do any good, but did not reach a decision.

"Its a doomsday island. The churchyard is covered by volcanic ashes and at least 30 houses are buried up to the roof in the stuff", a rescue official said.

About 300 rescue workers and a handful of journalists were still on the island today. Geologists said Heimaey—the fishing center of Iceland until last Tuesday, when the volcano erupted—will be a ghost island for many years.

Damage was estimated at $140 million. Officials said the government had discussed a special surtax to compensate the loss. Heimaey accounted for some 20 percent of Iceland's fishing industry.

An $8 Million Tab In General Election

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. reports legislative candidates in last year's primary and general elections spent a record $8 million in their campaigns.

Brown said the final tabulation of campaign spending statements filed with his office point out "the urgent necessity to reform the way we finance campaigns.

"Our present system gives an unfair advantage to candidates with money and almost forces candidates to accept the large contributions from special-interest groups and lobbyists," Brown said yesterday in a prepared statement.

He said final records showed legislative candidates raised a total of more than $5.9 million and spent about $5.4 million for the November general election campaign. In the June primary campaign, the candidates raised $3 million and spent $2.5 million.

Brown said victorious Democratic and Republican state Senate candidates reported an average of $67,113 in campaign contributions in the generral election while major party losers raised an average of $27,913.

Successful Senate candidates reported spending an average of $56,761 in the campaign compared with an average of $29,192 spent by their unsuccessful major party opponents.

Democratic and Republican Assembly winners raised an average of $31,690 for their general election campaigns while the losers received an average of $20,678. The winners spent an average of $27,578 compared to $20,665 for the losers.

Brown said state Senate candidates raised a total of about $1.8 million for the November campaign and spent $1.6 million. Assembly candidates raised $4.1 million and spent $3.7 million.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Charlton Heston will serve as a master of ceremonies for the 45th annual Academy Awards presentations March 27, the Academy of Motion Pcture Arts and Sciences announced Friday.

A Call Made To Shed Non-Partisan Cloaks

SACRAMENTO (UPI) - Local public officials should shed their historic non-partisan cloaks and run for office as Democrats or Republicans, the outgoing California Democratic chairman insisted as the party hierarchy met today for its biennial state convention.

"What we've got now is no party responsibility. And therefore vested interests have a remarkably strong control over governmental activities at all levels in California," said Democratic chairman Charles T. Manatt a Van Nuys attorney.

More than 1,100 delegates were eligibie to attend the Democratic State Central Committee convention, whose theme was: "Democratic Leadership from Courthouse to Statehouse."

Asked by newsmen yesterday whether that theme envisioned scrapping reforms Hiram Johnson pushed through 60 years ago to rid California of machine politics, Nanatt replied: "You bet it does."

"Perhaps the cure for the patient 58 years ago has turned out to be something else in later times," said Mahatt. "Local party discipline" exists in several midwestern states "and they are hardly corrupt," he added.

Manatt maintained candidates for "official elected public bodies," such as city councils and supervisorial boards, should run with party labels. That would require a new state law.

The convention will elect a new state chairman tomorrow.

The favorite was liberal Assemblyman John L. Burton of San Francisco, co-chairman of Sen. George McGovern's california campaign. His challenger was Chico attorney-rancher John Merlo.

Merlo told a news conference Burton "represents an ultraliberal element" and turns off moderates. He also said the assemblyman should tend to his legislative duties and permit a volunteer to head the party structure.

"It's either suicide or Merloside," said Merlo.

There was behind-the-scenes politicking among five contenders for the 1974 Democratic gubernatorial nomination: Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, Sen. Majority Leader George Moscone and Rep. Jerome R. Waldie. They were scheduled to be the featured attractions at a banquet tonight.

Burton told reporters he felt Brown led in name recognition, Moscone was ahead in organization, Moretti had the "legislative record of accomplishment" and Alioto was favored by "certain segments of the population" he did not identify.

If elected chairman, Burton said he hoped to develop a program where the five would appear together at party fundraising banquets. The assemblyman also said he intended to call a summit conference of the five to discuss how to prevent the primary fight from becomint too bitter.

Warrants Out In Drug Case

I-J Special Report

LOS ANGELES — A Marin County man and woman indicted on cocaine smuggling charges failed to appear in U.S. District Court here and now are the targets of bench warrants with bail set at $25,000 each.

Melville E. Wolf, 24, of Tiburon and Shari Walden, 22, of San Anselmo, were to have been arraigned last Monday. The two were indicted by a federal grand jury after they were arrested at Los Angeles International Airport last November.

Federal agents said they became suspicious of the way Wold was tugging at his clothing. A search revealed him to be wearing two girdles containing 1.5 pounds of cocaine; Miss Walden was carrying 2.5 pounds of cocaine in her clothing, agents said. The pair had just arrived from Panama.

Wolf had been free on $15,000 bail and Miss Walden on $10,000 bail.

Span Board Approves Pact For Larkspur Terminal Plans

Golden Gate Bridge District directors, despite strong objections about high costs, yesterday approved a $158,800 contract with a group of consultants to detail plans for the Larkspur ferry terminal. (See another bridge district story, page 1.)

The bone that almost stuck in the board's throat was the $55,000 in the contract for an environmental impact report. The contract failed to pass at first in a 9-6 vote, one short of the majority needed to spend funds.

Arguments that the district will have to be armed with the best environmental impact report it can buy — because of expected court challenges to the terminal — finally won over the majority in a 12-2 vote. Only San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini and L. E. Castner of Sonoma County voted no.

The terminal site is opposed by some environmentalists who argue it should go instead out on Point San Quentin.

Marin Supervisor Michael Wornum cautioned that opponents to the Larkspur terminal will pick apart the report "blade by blade, bird by bird, fish by fish."

If it cannot survive their test, then the district "will end up next year with three new ferries circling round and round Alcatraz and nowhere to go."

The consultants are headed by the San Francisco planning firm of Braccia-DeBrer-Heglund, who did the preliminary terminal plans for $134,000.

The contract also includes $36,000 to sample pollution in mud to be dredged, $6,100 for soil tests, $31,200 to study shoaling and a shoaling barrier, $10,500 to plot the channel and shoreline, and up to $20,000 for hearings before public agencies and citizens' groups.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

MILL VALLEY — Postponed to 8 p.m. on Feb. 14 in the district toll plaza office a hearing on a federal loan to buy the abandoned railroad right-of-way through Mill Valley.

CHAIRMAN — Heard director Daniel F. Del Carlo of San Francisco resign as chairman of the building and operating committee Del Carlo, who last month lost the contest for board president to Stephan C. Leonoudakis of San Francisco, said he resigned because Leonoudakis had pulled him off all other district committees.

CARPET — Referred to committee a request from the Golden Gate Commuters Club that the Sausalito ferry be carpeted.

BILLS — Paid bills totaling $1,819,377, including $1,358,044 for 28 new buses. The Bay Area Rapid Transit District was paid $10,000 toward a study it is doing of future travel demands in the Bay region.

PAINT — Bought 1,000 gallons of inorganic zinc silicate paint from Ameron Inc., the only bidder, for $11,720.

JANITORS — Extended for another year a $20,550 contract with Cervetto Building Maintenance Co. to clean the administration building and San Francisco ferry terminal.

JUNKET — Authorized directors Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley and Castner to attend a meeting next month in Williamsburg, Va., of the International Bridge, Tunnel and Turnpike Association.

FERRY — Received staff report that the Sausalito ferry made 6,830 runs during 1972, with only 64 canceled. Of these, 41 resulted from maintenance problems and 23 were because of drydocking. None was because of weather.

WINDOWS — Accepted a low bid from Dean's Window Cleaning Service of $4,580 a year to clean windows at the administration building and San Francisco ferry terminal.

LOBBYIST — Granted the district's special counsel for Washington grants, Richard J. Smart, an additional $25,000 for this fiscal year. He previously was budgeted $30,000 for the year.

SAN RAFAEL — Postponed to the board's Feb. 9 meeting action on spending $525,000 for an additional 15 acres to expand the 10-acre bus base on Jacoby Street in San Rafael. Bettini, objecting the purchase would take the property off the tax rolls of the city of which he is mayor, argued it should not be bought until final plans for the expansion are completed.

McDonald's Slapped On Tipping Law

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A state hearing examiner has ruled that the McDonald's hamburger restaurant chain violated state laws concerning tips.

Byran Seale of the State Division of Labor Law Enforcement ruled after a five-hour hearing Friday that the firm failed to post required notices that employees cannot keep their tips.

Seale said only "small amounts" of money were involved and the company said it would post "no tipping" signs.

He postponed a decision on a second charge that workers were pressured to take lie detector tests.

The complaints were filed by the culinary union here against the non-union firm.

Former employees charged they were forced to place tips in the cash register or a container for employee benefits.

Some former workers said they consented to lie detector tests because they felt their employment would be affected if they refused.

Aid To Aliens Is Under Attack

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Social Welfare Board, declaring aliens are receiving more than $100 million a year in welfare benefits, has urged that state aid be denied to most noncitizens and nonresidents of California.

Robert E. Mitchell, board chairman, told a news conference yesterday that it was "clear that many illegal and temporary aliens and recent immigrants avail themselves" of welfare programs.

Mitchell added that in "our viewpoint" the state aid programs "were intended and should be available only to valid residents of this state and country."

Mitchell said about 8 to 9 per cent of the more than two million persons who are on welfare in California are not American citizens, adding that 5 per cent of the state's population is comprised of immigrants who are not citizens.

The $100 million figure, Mitchell said, included all federal, state and county welfare costs, 15 per cent of which is borne by counties and 35 per cent by the state.

He estimated that the average welfare payment was about $70 a month to each recipient to arrive at the $100 million figure.

Mitchell said the state has taken some steps to curb welfare grants to aliens, but that they "are not yet fully and effectively implemented at the local level and will be of only limited value in face of conflicts" with federal regulations.

Mitchell's comments came as the board released a 54-page report called "Aliens in California."

The board, which is advisory to the state Department of Social Welfare, recommended that welfare be limited to U.S. citizens and immigrants who have permanent residence and have lived in the country for at least five years.

The panel also said welfare recipients should be residents of the state.

Other recommendations of the board included:

—Requiring a sponsor of an immigrant to meet the person's needs rather than the immigrant receiving welfare.

—Screening of noncitizen applicants for welfare through the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

—Broadening a federal program requiring posting of bonds by aliens at border entry points which could be used to defray any welfare costs they might incur.

—Development of a new Social Security card which would not be available to illegal or temporary entrants.

—Enactment of legislation under which receipt of welfare or medical assistance would create a debt

Probe Chairman Claims Deputy Killed Students

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — The chairman of a black committee that investigated the killing of two Southern University students says the students were killed by a deputy sheriff who was aiming at another student.

"As I have looked at the evidence and as we on the committee have assessed it, it is clear in my mind that there is a very real probability that murder in the first degree was committed," D'Army Bailey, a Berkeley, Calif., city councilman and chairman of the "Black People's Committee of Inquiry," said Friday.

Students Denver Smith and Leonard Brown, both 20, were killed by a shotgun blast Nov. 16 as students rushed out of the tear gasfilled campus administration building they had occupied.

Deputy sheriffs and state police had been called into the campus to clear the students out of the building.

The 12-member black committee conducted two days of hearings in which it heard mostly from students at the mostly-black, 8,700-student Southern Campus.

First Filing For County School Board

Marilyn C. Steinau, former Reed School District trustee, yesterday became the first candidate to file for election to the Marin County Board of Education on April 17.

Judith L. Vallas of San Anselmo also filed for the San Anselmo School District board, according to the Marin County elections office.

Mrs. Steinau, 45, is the wife of Belvedere Vice Mayor Allan Steinau. She was first elected to the Reed board in 1963. She filed for the Area 5 seat on the county board, to succeed Arnold T. Dolcini Jr.

He cannot run for reelection, because redistricting of the county board areas under the one-man-one-vote rule left him living outside the boundaries of the area.

Mrs. Vallas, making her first venture into elective politics, is the wife of state bridge engineer James Vallas. They have two sons, a preschooler and a second grader, and live at 260 Brookside Drive.

Mrs. Vallas is coordinating chairman with the Brookside School Parent-Teacher Association, a member of the district advisory committee on special education.

She is 33 and a graduate of the University of Hawaii with a degree in home economics education.

Mrs. Vallas said yesterday she had been attending school board meetings for most of the three years she has lived in San Anselmo and has "a very active interest" in the board.

Filings for the April 17 elections in 20 Marin County School districts will close Feb. 16 at the Marin County Clerk's office.

A special election to fill a vacancy on the board of the Marin Municipal Water District in Area 4, also will be held April 17. There had been no filings to succeed resigned Director Eugene A. Miller, as of yesterday.

The San Rafael city clerk's office is taking candidate filings for the San Rafael City Council and San Rafael Board of Education balloting, which also will be on April 17.

Carl J. (Red) Brown, former San Rafael Board of Education trustee, yesterday took out nomination papers for a city council seat. He had previously indicated interest in running.

Park Tax Election Unnecessary

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — California Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger yesterday opined that the Marin County Regional Park District need not undergo a special tax rate election.

He wrote that everyone "clearly understood" what the tax rate would be when the district was created by a 2-1 vote last Nov. 7.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, had asked for Younger's opinion on behalf of the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

It had appeared that the state's new tax reform measure, might either force a special tax rate election or delay the park district from beginning operations by fiscal 1973-74.

Measure A on the Nov. 7 ballot did not specifically mention that the proposed regional park district would have a maximum tax rate of 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

But the "ballot analyses and arguments clearly stated the maximum tax rate is 10 cents," Younger wrote in a six-page opinion, received late yesterday by Bagley.

"While the matter is not entirely free from doubt, we are of the opinion that if the matter were presented to a court, it would conclude that the adoption of Measure A by the voters satisfied the requirement. . . of the new tax reform act," Younger wrote.

"I'm certainly glad to hear it," Marin County Administrator John F. Barrows said today. "And the supervisors will be happy, too." He noted that County Counsel Douglas J. Malone earlier said that a favorable opinion from Younger probably would resolve the tax issue without the expense of a special election.

Younger's opinion declared that "to require still another election would only be duplication and would constitute a waste of pubic funds. . ."

Bagley reiterated that he was prepared if necessary, to seek special legislation to exempt the park district from the state restrictions.

The tax reform measure requires all districts to gain voters' approval before raising tax rates above 1972-73 levels, or in the case of new districts, to hold a rate election before imposing property taxes.

Two Nabbed For Food Store Thefts

Two men were arrested in San Jose last night for allegedly stealing store fixtures and cash registers from a San Anselmo natural foods store that has gone out of business.

Kenneth Charles Caramella, 27, of San Jose, and Dennis Stephen Morgan, 30, of Los Gatos, were booked on suspicion of burglary and ordered to appear in Marin Municipal Court on Thursday.

According to San Anselmo police, about $700 in equipment was reported missing yesterday from Everybody's Natural Food Store, 1 Saunders Avenue.

Police said they had observed a truck parked outside the store at noon. They traced the vehicle to a San Jose supplier of organic produce, the Well, employers of Caramella and Morgan.

According to police, the manager of Everybody's Natural Food Store, Michael Murphy, said he owed $1,500 to the Well and thought that the supplier might be trying to recover the money.

The store has been closed for about two weeks.

Police said they are also seeking a third suspect in the burglary. Caramella and Morgan were released from jail without bail.

General Plan Hearings On Monday

The Marin County Planning Commission, meeting Monday at 1:30 p.m. at Marin Civic Center, will begin formal hearings on the proposed countywide general plan.

The controversial 20-year plan, which seeks to "turn around" growth and development patterns in Marin, must be adopted in some form by the county board of supervisors by July to comply with state law.

The planning commission discussed the plan last fall during a special meeting in Point Reyes Station when it served as a sounding board for West Marin residents. It took no action.

Under state law, the plan must contain nine specific elements — land use, circulation, housing, conservation, open space, seismic safety, noise, scenic highway and safety.

Several of the elements — low-income housing, open space, transportation and population proposals — have come under fire as being either unattainable or in conflict with one another under the proposed 20-year plan.

Monday's discussion also will include continued consideration of how West Marin's villages should expand and at what rate.

General Plan Session Monday

The San Rafael City Council will meet in closed session at 7:30 p.m. Monday to consider appointments to the citizen's committee on the general plan.

At 8 p.m., the council will sit in public session to consider a federal urban aid project aimed at improvement of Fourth Street and the Miracle Mile from Marguard Avenue to the westerly city limits.

The council will also consider action on a possible landslide on Lindenwood Court in the Glenwood area.

Survey Of Flood Damage Announced

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Army Corps of Engineers employees will begin a countywide survey in Marin on Monday, to gather data on the damage caused by the flooding of Jan. 16-17, according to Nancy Osborne of the engineers' district headquarters.

Survey workers will interview both homeowners and businessmen in the Novato and Southern Marin areas. The data obtained will be used "for control improvements," she said.

that the Senate will promptly follow the lead of the House and enact legislation giving added incentives for service from members of the health professions, so that the requirements for health services personnel can also be put on a volunteer basis," Laird said.

He also said he was worried that without new pay incentives to attract men to the National Guard and Reserves, "it will be extremely difficult, if not impossible," to maintain those forces at the million-man-level called for by Congress. Where once the Guard and Reserves had long waiting lists, they now have none and are 56,000 men below their authorized strength.

But Laird said, "the all-volunteer era —which our Commander-in-Chief, President Nixon, has promised the American people —is upon us ... this means that we have beaten President Nixon's objective of zero draft calls by five months."

Actually the Army will not be an all-volunteer force until December, 1974. Some 51,800 men were drafted last year, including 2,500 in December whose two-year tour of duty will keep them in the Army into 1974. The ending of the draft does not mean draftees now in the service can get out.

Earlier this month in his final report to Congress, Laird raised doubts that a draft-free military would really be possible in the long run. "All of us must recognize that we are breaking new ground and that no one at this point in time can guarantee absolutely that the United States will be able to maintain an all-volunteer force for the indefinite future," he said.

He also warned that if the military continues to be the subject of brickbats and abuse, it will not be able to attract enough volunteers to make the all-volunteer concept work.

"We cannot expect to recruit or maintain a high quality volunteer force with good morale and discipline unless Americans view military service as an honorable and desirable pursuit," his report noted.

Last year 414,800 men enlisted in the military. Of that number, 331,900 were estimated to be "true volunteers" —men who would have joined the service even if there were no draft inducing them to volunteer. That was a 33 per cent increase in the number of true volunteers estimated in 1971 and a whopping 57 per cent more than 1970.

One inducement for more volunteers is certain to be the fact that American servicemen will not be fighting anywhere in the world after 7 p.m. EST this evening.

But one of the main inducements to volunteers in the past year has been the huge pay increases granted servicemen.

A private earned only $95.70 a month as recently as 1968. Now is paid $307.20 plus non-taxable allowances, free medical care, low prices in post exchanges (PXs) and a crack at 128 additional cash bonuses and benefits. The end result is pay equal to well over $100 a week in the civilian world.

The draft has been an almost continuous feature of American life since 1940. Only for 13 months in 1947 and 1948 has there been no draft law on the books in the last 32 years. The draft was also used during the Civil War and World War I.

But Laird's announcement does not mean that the 4,000 draft boards around the country will now fold up. They will remain in business doing almost everything they have done in the past —except draft men.

Eighteen-year-olds will still be required to register. There will still be an annual draft lottery and, with Congressional approval, thousands of low-numbered men will be given physical exams to see if they meet the requirements of the draft just in case it should be needed again.

All this will continue because the Selective Service law does not expire next June 30. That law is permanent legislation. What does expire is the authority of the Selective Service System to order men into uniform.

Man Arrested On Auto Theft

A Santa Rosa man was booked into Marin County Jail yesterday on suspicion of auto theft after a routine traffic stop on northbound Highway 101 near San Rafael.

A California Highway Patrol officer noticed a car without taillights on the freeway at 8:40 p.m. and stopped the vehicle. A check revealed the car had been stolen in Santa Rosa, and the driver, Perry Reed, 37, was arrested.

Reed was held in lieu of $1,200 bail to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

An Arrest Ends Stolen Goods Probe

The arrest of a San Rafael woman on suspicion of concealing stolen property yesterday capped a two-week investigation by San Rafael police.

Patricia Ann Fusilieria, 21, of 14 Pleasant Lane, was booked into Marin County Jail and held in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Police, acting on a tip, said they went to the Pleasant Lane residence last Jan. 9 and discovered the woman and three companions sitting amid a quantity of guns. Officers later discovered that three shotguns, three rifles and one automatic pistol found in the home had been reported stolen from a neighbor's residence the day before.

Also found in the residence, according to police, were three fur coats, two suede jackets, jewely and other items reported stolen from two other San Rafael homes.

Officers said Miss Fusilieria told them she had arrived home with several companions to find the items.

FERRY

be done by a professional service, Kowleski said this was forbidden by the district's agreement with the Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific, which represents the deckhands and ticket sellers.

The club's appeal for carpeting coincides with staff plans long under way to do just that. He predicted it will be installed within three months, after careful planning to make sure it can be cleaned easily and conform to fireproof regulations of the Coast Guard.

The temporary carpeting installed last year for President Nixon's visit had to be put in on 36-hours notice during the Labor Day weekend, thus it was impossible to get the right kind, Kowleski said.

As for the charge that the ferry service was aimed primarily at tourists, he declared "no effort of any kind ever has been made to attract tourists."

In a detailed rebuttal of complaints aired at the club meeting, Kowleski also explained that relocation of the Sausalito parking lot for the shuttle bus was "an economic decision" becuase of a stiff rental hike at the old lot.

Contrary to the claim by Stovel that the City of Sausalito has approved a rain canopy for the boarding area to the ferry, Kowleski reported, the district's proposal never cleared the planning commission.

Plans already are underway, however, for a permanent Sausalito ferry terminal that will provide shelter from the weather, he said.

Kowleski acknowledged the city has agreed to let feeder buses into the parking lot so they can get close to the ferry landing in bad weather. But he added that the lot is sinking on poor fill that the proposal seemed risky.

Stovel's suggestion that a second ferry be rented from Harbor Tours to expand the morning commuter service already was rejected by the bridge board as too costly, he said.

Kowleski said the district constantly was upgrading the ferry service, "but we can't do everything at once."

Three Plead Guilty To Drug Counts

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Two Marin County men and a Washington lobbyist who have pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to felony charges stemming from a narcotics raid are to be sentenced some time next month.

No definite date has been set for the sentencing of Marco F. Madio, 23, and Brian Neal Smith, 27, both of Sausalito, and George E. Miller, 31, attorney and lobbyist.

Visiting Judge Charles Wyzanski of Boston, Mass., who heard their guilty pleas earlier this month, will set the time later, according to Asst. U.S. Atty. John Cooney, prosecutor in the case.

Madio and Miller have pleaded guilty to possessing cocaine while Smith has admitted using a telephone in order to arrange a cocaine sale. They had all been charged earlier with the more serious crime of selling the drug.

The three were arrested Sept. 15 when a dozen federal, state and local narcotics agents raided Madio's home and seized an ounce of cocaine.

PROBE

would be no problem for him, as a mortgage broker, to run credit checks.

The relevance of commissioners' financial backgrounds was not discussed by Oesterman, who wouldn't elaborate except to say credit checks give "other information."

"Of course I did it without their knowledge; you can't investigate (any other way)," the former grand jury member added.

Two of the commissioners, informed of Oesterman's snooping, registered strong disapproval — one saying he would seek the chairman's ouster or resign himself.

"There's not room enough for the two of us on this commission when one is employing police state tactics," said Commissioner Leroy J. Syrop, who nominated Oesterman for the chairmanship and then ran unsuccessfully against him.

"I'm amazed to hear it," Syrop said. "He should be censured and removed by the Board of Supervisors . . . I'll never be able to work with him again. If I can't have him removed, I'll resign."

"I'm amazed and resentful," Commissioner Arlene Blumberg agreed. "It's opening the door to a whole lot of assaults on private lives. I don't like it."

Oesterman's activities drew guarded support from Commissioners Mary T. Lapin and Victor R. Donati Jr. who said they didn't object to being investigated.

Mrs. Lapin said she could understand "his concerns," adding "I didn't know about it but don't object to it."

Donati, meanwhile, said by some to have been involved in the checking, flatly denied any involvement.

"I don't have anything to say and I don't want my name used," he told the I-J. "There's nothing wrong. Oesterman can check if he wants."

Commissioner Elizabeth Emerson, meanwhile, noted "It's a little unusual, I'll go that far. I can't understand why he would do it."

She said she had no serious objections to being investigated, but added the commission should concentrate on something else and avoid a flap.

Charles E. Newman, one of the newer commissioners, said he had heard rumors of something going on but was never sure. "I don't like it," he added.

"I'm sort of surprised to hear it," Commissioner Keith S. Davis said. "He can search my background all he wants but there are more important things to do."

BONDS

bonds to proceed either with the Army Corps of Engineers' controversial plan "or go it alone on a lesser scale," Baptiste said.

The Corps, which has been studying Novato Creek since 1946, has a plan which is under fire from conservationists who fear another Corte Madera Creek "concrete channel".

If the Novato community should decide to go ahead with the Corps' plan, Baptiste said, about $3 million of the bonds would be used to match federal money for the $14 million project.

The remaining $1.5 million in bonds would be used for interim dredging of the creek and acquisition of easements.

Should the community decide against the corps' proposal, the flood control zone could use the funds for a smaller project to protect against a "25-year flood." (The Corps' project would protect against a "100-year flood.")

The Corps' project would take four to five years to complete while a zone project would take about three years.

The Corps' plan calls for greater widening of the creek and use of concrete channels in some portions, Baptiste added.

Before any project can proceed, it must be approved by the flood district advisory board, the Novato City Council and the board of supervisors.

Public hearings on the corps' project will be held in late February or early March, he added.

They came to Black Point after Norton retired about 25 years ago.

Both belonged to the Black Point Improvement Club, which named a street, Norton Avenue, in his honor. Mrs. Norton also belonged to the Black Point Women's Club and the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in San Rafael.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. Raymond Braly of Arlington, Va.

Funeral arrangements were pending at Redwood Chapel Funeral Home.

Street Plans Due Discussion

A public hearing on plans to widen Washington Street will be held at the Petaluma City Council meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Plans call for widening Washington Street from Kentucky to Keokuk streets and installing signals at Howard and Kentucky streets.

The council also will consider a rezoning request by Sunco Development Corp. to permit homes and apartments on east Washington street at Ely Boulevard.

Suspect In Slayings Is Questioned

SANTA CRUZ (UPI) — Sheriff's deputies were reportedly questioning a bearded kayak maker today in their investigation of the brutal slayings of five persons, including two small children.

The Santa Cruz County sheriff's office refused to comment on the report which came from an informed source within the sheriff's department.

Deputies admitted earlier they were seeking the man, Robert C. Francis, boyfriend of one of the victims. They said he was not a suspect but they hoped to get clues from him.

Meanwhile, authorities were still investigating the murder of a San Rafael girl whose dismembered body was washed up in pieces on Santa Cruz and Monterey County beaches in recent days.

The slain girl, Cynthia Ann Schall, 18, of 175 Clinton Court, was identified through fingerprints taken from her right hand, found Friday by surfers at a beach near Capitola.

Miss Schall had been reported missing Jan. 8, from a Santa Cruz home where she was a live-in babysitter while attending Cabrillo College. She was the daughter of Sue Schall McEvoy of San Rafael.

The latest slayings in the area came to light yesterday with the discovery of the bodies of a young Santa Cruz couple in their hillside home, several hours after a "hippie" mother and her two young sons were found slain in their remote mountain cabin a few miles away.

James R. Gianero, 24, an unemployed carpenter, and his wife, Joan, 21, were found shotgunned to death in the bathroom of their home yesterday. The night before the bodies of Kathy Hughes, 31, her sons, David, 9, and Daemon, 4, were found in their remote cabin a few miles away.

Deputies said Mrs. Hughes, who lived with Francis, had been stabbed in the chest and shot with a small caliber pistol in the head. The children, they said, had been stabbed in the back and shot in the head.

Deputies said all the victims were "close friends." They added they had no motives for the slayings.

Investigators described Francis and his girlfriend as "hippies." But, they said, the two children had been well cared for. They had been living on welfare.

In October 1970 an eye surgeon and four others were killed at his fashionable hilltop home near here. John Linley Frazier was convicted of the slayings and sentenced to life in prison.

Wife Of Rock Singer Files For Dissolution

The wife of blues and rock singer Van Morrison filed yesterday in Marin Superior Court for dissolution of their three-year marriage and division of property including their home in Fairfax.

The suit by Janet Morrison declared that she and George Ivan Morrison, the Canadian-born recording star, were married in New York City June 7, 1969, and separated last Nov. 17. They have a two-year-old daughter.

Irreconcilable differences were cited.

The community property listed included a horse named Moondance, and business interests in Caledonia Productions, BMI, Warner Brothers recording contracts, recording equipment and a studio.

Seeks Dissolution

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Television talk-show host Merv Griffin was sued for dissolution of marriage by his wife of 14 years, Julann Wright, attorney Marvin Mitchelson said Friday.

Moretti Accuses News Media Of Unfair Capitol Reporting

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti has accused the news media of constantly attacking the Legislature in the last month and rarely reporting "some of the positive aspects" about the Capitol.

The Van Nuys Democrat was angered yesterday by reporting of the Legislature's brief session on the national day of mourning for former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

He assailed as an "outrageous untruth" reports which he said asserted the lawmakers met simply to protect loss of their $30-a-day expense allowances.

"For the last month or so, the press has seen fit to do nothing but to continue to attack the legislature and very seldom ever takes any interest in pointing out some of the positive aspects of this place," Moretti said in radio interviews.

He took exception to news stories that pointed out that by meeting Thursday the lawmakers were assured payment of their expense allowances for that day and the next three, totaling $120.

Moretti said the Assembly was not "legally required" to be in session Thursday for him to authorize the expense payments. "I can do that whether or not we were meeting in session," he said.

Under a long-standing policy, neither house of the Legislature can recess without the consent of the other for longer than 72 hours without forfeiting the expense allowance.

Passage of the legislative reorganization ballot measure (Prop. 4) at the November election abolished the three-day consent provision and allowed either house of the Legislature to recess for 10 days without the other's approval.

However, legislative rules implementing Prop. 4 have not been adopted. The legislature temporarily is operating under rules of the 1972 session.

An aide to Moretti, Ethan Wagner, said Moretti has "rethought it and has interpreted the old rules in light of the public's expression on Prop. 4. His policy now regarding per diem reflects the principle in Prop. 4.

Wagner insisted the Thursday meeting was called to pay tribute to Johnson, although most federal and state offices were closed.

The Senate met Thursday for four minutes and recessed for the weekend in Johnson's memory. The assembly met for 37 minutes, eulogized Johnson, criticized the news media for noting the expense payments and recessed until Monday. Neither house normally meets on Fridays.

Sen. Albert S. Rodda, DSacramento, disclosed he had instructed Senate clerks to waive his $30-a-day expense payments for Friday, Saturday and Sunday. He declined to offer a reason.

Deputy Testifies Magee Took Weapons From Him

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A deputy sheriff testified yesterday that accused killer Ruchell Magee took a shotgun and a revolver from him shortly before the 1970 gun battle at the Marin County Civic Center in which four persons died.

Magee is on trial for the murder of one of them, Judge Harold J. Haley.

Deputy Sheriff Norman Johnson said he was outside the building when the gunmen and their hostages emerged on their way to their nearby van. He said Magee walked up to where he was crouched behind some shrubbery.

"He told me to drop my shotgun on the ground," Johnson testified. Then, he said, Magee was ordered by another of the gunmen, Jonathan Jackson, to get the shotgun.

"I bent over, picked up my gun and handed it to Magee," Johnson said. "Then Magee reached over and unsnapped my holster and removed my service revolver."

The hostages were then herded into the van, out of Johnson's sight, and shortly thereafter gunfire broke out during which Haley, Jackson and two other gunmen were killed.

Before the jury entered the courtroom for the morning session, Magee asked to leave, as he has done on past occasions, and he was taken to a nearby holding cell.

Northridge Plan Due Discussion

The Northridge Open Space Plan will be considered at a meeting of the mayors of Mill Valley, Corte Madera and Larkspur to be held Monday at 8 p.m. in Mill Valley City hall.

The session also will be attended by county supervisors Michael Wornum and Gary T. Giacomini and Brian G. Whittenkeller, who drafted the plan.

A similar meeting in November resulted in the mayors declaring the Northridge should be given highest priority when the newly formed county regional park district considers open space acquisition.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Birthday countdown! Bake a cake for these celebrities, but be sure to put the right number of candles on each one. Guess who's 52, 55, 65, and 73?

1. Skitch Henderson, pianist and orchestra conductor, can play serious or pop music as the occasion demands. This Minnesotan made good in the big city, becoming familiar to national TV audiences as the band leader on Steve Allen's "Tonight" show. He has been featured on the Sinatra and Crosby radio shows. During World War II he was a U.S. Air Force pilot.

2. William Randolph Hearst, Jr., began his career in journalism in 1928 as a reporter on his father's newspaper, the New York American, and today continues his active interest in world affairs, writing a column for many of the dailies in the Hearst chain. He was a war correspondent, 1943-45, and won a Pulitzer Prize in 1956.

3. Donna Reed is that actress who resembles the girl next door, who refused to stay under "The Shadow of the Thin Man," being determined to enjoy "The Human Comedy" and make "Thousands Cheer" as she proved to audiences "It's a Wonderful Life." She won a supporting actress award from the Hollywood Motion Picture Academy and had her own TV show for nearly 10 years.

4. Hyman Rickover, who celebrates another birthday today, is that United States Naval Admiral who has been credited with developing the first atomic-powered submarine. He is a Naval Academy graduate who qualified for submarine service in 1930 and was assigned to Oak Ridge, Tenn., after World War II to see what nuclear power could do for ships. Naturally, he thought of using it for submarines.

WINS WITH KING

West opened the five of spades, and South won with the king.

Declarer saw that he could take eight tricks on the run. Where was the ninth trick to come from?

The long club suit was a bad risk. If South knocked out a club, back would come a spade to force out the ace. The next club trick would allow West to take the spades. It was possible, of course, that each opponent held four spades, but this was quite unlikely.

South decided to try for his ninth trick by way of a heart finesse. At the second trick, therefore, he led the eight of hearts and put up dummy's jack. East won with the queen of hearts and returned a spade.

WEST COVERS

South led the nine of hearts next, but West covered with the ten. Dummy's five of hearts was not a winner, and South had only his original eight tricks. Down one.

South was correct in trying for his ninth trick in hearts, but wrong in his method.

HEART ACTION

South should start the hearts by leading the eight and letting it ride for a finesse. If this play loses to the ten, South can finesse with the jack of hearts the next time. Thus, he cannot be worse off and the deep finesse may improve his chances.

As the cards lie, the finesse with the eight would force out East's queen. South would then have nine top tricks.

DAILY QUESTION

You have opened the bidding with one club, and partner has responded one spade.

It is now up to you again, holding:

♠- A K
♥- 9 8
♦- A K Q 7
♣- Q J 10 5 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two diamonds. The "reverse" bid shows your strength. You cannot afford to bid no-trump when you lack a stopper in one of the unbid suits.

Sharp Extremes In Population

CHICAGO (UPI) —The nations of North America reflect some of the world's sharpest extremes in population densities. The population for the continent as a whole, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, is 33.3 persons per square mile, but only a few of the smaller nations come close to this average.

The continental United States has a density of 56.1 persons per square mile. This is about 10 times greater than Canada's, but the highest density of all is in Bermuda, which has 2,476.2 persons per square mile, nearly 500 times the Canadian density.

Vietnam Cease-Fire Stirs Memories

THE PRESIDENT'S announcement that peace really is at hand in Vietnam releases a flood of memories for those of us who were around when World War II ended dramatically nearly a generation ago.

On Saipan, the word of Japan's offer to surrender and the subsequent cease-fire spread rapidly via grapevine telegraph. One jubilant group of junior officers piled into a jeep to head for a Navy officers' club where they were sure they could find something appropriate to drink in celebration. Enroute, they had to stop briefly for some road repair work. One of the junior officers spotted a Yale classmate, an enlisted man, in the road repair crew. They had not seen each other since college. The enlisted man was instantly invited to drop his shovel and climb aboard to join the celebration, which he did.

Two days later the officer faced court martial for taking his enlisted classmate into an officers club.

On the aforementioned road, some men of another American military road repair crew threw sizeable rocks at defenseless Japanese PWs being transported in an open GI truck. It was incredible.

THE MEMORY pageant includes recollections of the dropping of the first A-bomb.

After Iwo Jima and Okinawa were taken by American forces it was obvious that the next move must finally be against the Japanese homeland. The Japanese fought with increasing suicidal fanaticism on Iwo and Okinawa. The knowledge that some of us would now face a new high level of fanaticism on Japanese home islands was grim.

Our best guess was that it would take one to two more years of that business before the last Japanese soldier was buried on the home islands. We knew from personal experience that they didn't ever surrender, they would never quit.

We were sure we faced another year or two years of this — and losses among us which would dwarf all previous losses.

On neighboring Tinian Island we knew there was an odd-ball B-29 squadron, kept segregated from everyone else on the island. Everyone knew they had some secret new super-blockbuster bomb.

But bombs didn't do much for the foot soldier. Somebody still had to wade in and go after the enemy face-to-face, one-by-one.

THEN IT HAPPENED. The first A-bomb was detonated above Hiroshima.

Even the fanatical Japanese couldn't take that, we knew.

To know that we were spared one to two years more of that kind of life (if we were to survive at all) made it the most deliriously happy day of our lives.

No wonder we are mystified by those who at the time of Harry Truman's death a month ago asked whether he had committed some great moral wrong in approving the use of the A-bomb!

The A-bomb unquestionably saved lives of untold thousands of young American men.

Clearly, President Truman had no choice but to approve its use.

THE MEMORY pageant recalls the night when the first planeload of American PWs liberated from Japan arrived at Guam.

Some were emaciated, cruelly maimed and so weak as to be incapable of enjoying their liberation. To this day those memories bring tears.

Strangely, some were the picture of health.

Let us hope that when our young men are released from North Vietnam PW camps, they do NOT emerge emaciated and cruelly maimed. Let us pray that they somehow all come out healthy, sound and adequately nourished.

WHEN GENERAL MacArthur presided over the signing of the surrender in Tokyo Bay, he expressed lofty hopes for a new era of prolonged peace. President Nixon voiced somewhat the same, but more cautiously phrased, sentiments in his radio address announcing the Vietnam cease-fire agreement.

Really, they didn't sound much different than did Neville Chamberlain when he returned from his tragic Munich meeting with Hitler to predict rather confidently, "peace in our time."

There are still among us a representative number of World War I veterans who fought to "make the world safe for democracy" in the "war to end wars".

Those of us who are veterans of World War II felt that we had participated in a demonstration of the futility of war which humanity would surely recognize as just that.

The "UN police action" in Korea, we hoped, would reinforce the lessons of World War II.

But we let the Vietnam war happen.

No wonder our under-30s don't understand us and think we are mostly wrong!

We fervently pray that when our present under-30 generation matures, it will have better success than we have had in dealing with mankind's most devastating illness — the inclination to make war.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

What Does It Really Mean To Have Peace?

At some time during elementary school I first began hearing of a place called Vietnam, and of a war that was growing up, as I was. In junior high school, older brothers of my friends were being sent there to fight; in high school my friends and I begged for peace; and now in college, it is my friends who have fought there.

The Vietnam War and I have grown up together, and I can't remember much of what peace was like. So now I hear that there has been a cease-fire agreement. I am thankful that the war is finally over, but all I know of peace is that it is the absence of war. . .we'll have to find a better definition.

No-Fault Insurance Initiative Opposed

I read with interest Mr. (Richard W.) Shand's letter of Dec. 15, 1972 wherein he was critical of the Legislature not having acted in the matter of coastline protection and no-fault insurance.

I am totally sympathetic as is our association at Mr. Shand's frustrations with the legislation in the matter of coastline protection. . .

I do agree with Mr. Shand that the initiative process is the proper process when the Legislature fails to reflect the wishes of the voting public. On the other hand I do not believe the majority of the voting public is in favor of a specific plan of no-fault auto insurance. What they have been sold on through advertisements costing millions of dollars is the general principle of no-fault auto insurance. But it is not enough to be in favor of a general principle, it is necessary that there be a specific item of legislation which is supported by the insurance industry and opposed not only by the California Trial Lawyers but also by the California Consumer Federation representing 115 consumer groups, California Rural Legal Assistance, representing poor people, the State of California Retired Employees Association and the like. . .

Thinks Executioner Would Be Hard To Find

Since last November's election, when a majority of voters indicated that they were in favor of restoring capital punishment, I have heard a number of people indicate vigorous reaffirmation of such a course.

When and if the executions resume, I have a suggestion that some of them might consider seriously. Let the executioner — the person who actually drops the pellets into the sulfuric acid — be drawn from among the registered voters in the same manner that jurors are now impanelled. He or she could be summoned to the nearest county seat, and asked, on oath, whether or not he or she was in favor of capital punishment. On an affirmative answer, the name of the individual could be placed in a pool, with the ultimate choice drawn by lot or computer. On scheduled execution days, the transportation and other expenses would be met by the state. "Other expenses" could conceivably cover psychiatric aid if needed.

This could in effect be the end of an old, and in some quarters, revered institution, since executioners would be awfully, awfully hard to find.

Vietnam Has Turned Americans Away From Remainder Of World

WASHINGTON — Not the least part of the damage done by the Vietnam War is the way in which it has turned us in upon ourselves. We have become so absorbed in our own tragic entangelement that increasingly what is happening in the rest of the world is ignored.

This applies with particular force to the nearly four months of backing and filling in the now-you-see-it, now-you-don't attempt to reach a cease-fire. Without a single word of explanation from the President himself, the massive bombing of the north was turned on. That alienated peoples everywhere as almost no other move in the Vietnam War had done.

The media has a lot to answer for in the confused search for peace. It has been reported too often as though it were a tennis match or a prize fight. How many times on the television screens have we seen the arrivals and departures in Paris and in Saigon repeated ad nauseam, the long black limousines, the wave of greeting, the swift departure for a secret rendezvous. In defense of the media it must be said that, with so little of an official nature to go on, the only recourse was to record the to-ing and fro-ing across the oceans.

AS BANDIED ABOUT today, the word isolationist is entirely out of phase. That label came out of 1939 and 1940 and the concept of Fortress America. In the age of the intercontinental missile with a nuclear warhead, the isolationism of 30 years ago has little or no meaning.

Yet, as one consequence of the terrible involvement in Vietnam, withdrawal has a deep, compelling appeal. In his speech accepting the Democratic nomination for President at the Miami Beach convention, Sen. George McGovern repeated the refrain, "Come home, America." Whatever he may have meant beyond the rhetoric of a political appeal (and it was never made clear), this for the Republicans was equivalent to isolationism.

The preacher's son from the prairies of the West, the main source of that earlier isolationism, seemed to be bidding his fellow Americans to turn away from disastrous foreign adventures and begin to work on the evils besetting America. If that was his message — and it seemed to be reinforced by his repeated call for immediate withdrawal of American forces from Vietnam — the American electorate rejected it by an overwhelming majority.

NEVERTHELESS, the great middle mass, the President's silent majority, is responsive to this kind of appeal. No one knows it better than President Nixon himself. The evidence was in his inaugural address when he said:

"The time has passed when America will make every other nation's conflict our own, or make every other nation's future our responsibility, or presume to tell the people of other nations how to manage their own affairs."

That is a clear reaffirmation of withdrawal from the cold war crusade — the crusade that was the initial motivating cause of ietnam, to which Richard Nixon once subscribed with such ardor. He is engaged in creating a big power structure that he hopes will underwrite his generation of peace. Those who give him unfailing support seem convinced that the Metternichian diplomacy of Henry Kissinger cannot fail.

THIS IS CERTAINLY not isolationism. To the isolationists of the past, big power diplomacy was a work of the devil meant to draw innocent Americans into the trap of the Old World's quarrels. In the refrain, "Come home, America," something of this same suspicion was implied.

The case is put more politely by the discerning correspondent of the London Sunday Times, Henry Brandon, in his forthcoming book, "The Retreat of American Power." The question is whether it is to be an orderly retreat and not one forced by past hopes and future economies.

If peace now is at hand after so many false alarms, one must ask whether the continuing goal will be to prop up President Thieu in Saigon with a costly apparatus in Southeast Asia and in Vietnam itself. After the billions of aid Thieu has received, that will be merely to continue the war in another disguise.

We'll Be Workin' On The Railroad Just To Pass The Time Away

WASHINGTON — The Long Island Railroad temporarily is back in operation. But it is predicted that once a labor settlement is reached fares will have to be raised. This will cause fewer people to take the train, which will drive up costs, and so on and so forth.

What can be done to make the Long Island and all commuter trains and buses profitable? How can the United States get people to give up their automobiles and use mass transportation?

A SOLUTION to the problem has been worked out by Xavier Greyhound, an economist with Rolling Stock magazine.

Greyhound says, "The trouble with mass transportation is that no one is taking advantage of the American work ethic. A majority of Americans feel very guilty when they aren't working."

"That's true," I said.

"Where do you find the most idle people in this country?"

"On buses and trains," I said.

"Correct. On a bus or a train there just doesn't seem to be enough work for a person to do," Greyhound said.

"Therefore, the United States is wasting one of its greatest sources of manpower. Millions of people are spending millions of hours on our transportation systems doing nothing."

"YOU HAVE A PLAN for them?" I asked.

"Yes. What we must do is put these passengers to work. Make them fill their time with useful work which will give them pride and satisfaction, as well as let them earn extra money to pay for fare increases."

"How can you do it?"

"As each person boards a bus or train, he will be handed parts of a television or radio set. He will be expected to assemble the set by the time he reaches his destination."

"What a boon to the gross national product!"

"The train conductor or bus driver will act as foreman, making sure the set is assembled correctly and passes inspection."

"What a blow to the Japanese electronics industry!" I said.

"EACH PASSENGER will be paid by piecework. Those who live far out on the island could put together two or three sets before they hit Pennsylvania Station. Those who live closer will have to content themselves with assembling one, though they will be entitled to overtime in the event the train is late."

"The Common Market is doomed!" I said.

"Once the passengers become more proficient, we could have them put together cameras, tape recorders and pocket calculators. The Long Island Railroad could become the longest assembly line in the world."

"Fantastic!" I said. "People would be fighting to take trains and buses. What about passengers who have to stand up?"

"They would be in charge of installing the vertical hold on the television sets," Greyhound said. "To make sure that no one goofs off, each bus line and railroad would have a quota. They would be expected to produce so many sets a day. If they didn't, their bus or train service would be cut off until the passengers agreed to up their production figures."

"THIS WOULD CERTAINLY put the railroads in the black," I said.

"More importantly, it will give the people a pride in riding the rails again. For years the glamor and fun of trains has been missing. But as soon as you give a passenger some useful work to do with his hands, he'll become a decent member of society."

AN EDUCATOR'S VIEW

Costly Education Innovations Produce Disappointing Results

By JOHN W. GILBAUGH
(Professor of Education, California State University, San Jose)

The search for educational panaceas has cost the American taxpayer millions of dollars. And worse than the squandered money has been the loss of educational opportunities to an undetermined number of American children and youth.

The Ford Foundation, a tax-exempt organization, has just issued a report which reveals that the $30 million it spent during the decade of the '60s on educational innovation failed to produce expected results. The money was spent to back experimental programs which were to serve as models for all of American education. Programs similar to those sponsored by the Ford Foundation provided the bases for virtually unrestricted federal grants to education. The amount estimated for the current year may reach $146 million.

SOME OF THE IDEAS may have been good, and under proper circumstances might have succeeded. Paul Nachtigal, a Colorado educator, in his pessimistic report on Ford Foundation educational activities attributed the disappointing results to human failures. Leadership, or lack of it, was a primary cause for the lackluster achievements of many experimental programs. The turnover in personnel at the directorship level had devastating results for the enthusiasm of originators of experiments. Keen interest in a program generally waned with each newly appointed director. Jealousy also reportedly figured prominently in the less-than-successful results obtained in other programs. Administrators, teachers, and school board members who were not sufficiently involved in the programs not only refused to support them, but in some instances openly opposed them.

Nachtigal, in his independent evaluation, along with other members of his team formed to study the results of Ford Foundation-sponsored educational projects, reportedly criticized the roles played by college and university educational theorists.

Virtually all of them — that is the theorists — had been away from the classroom so long they found themselves out of touch with reality in areas of specialization in which they should have been acknolwedged experts.

EVEN MUCH of the new gadgetry used to revolutionize education to make it better for all American children and youth lost its novelty. Consequently some of it is gathering dust.

What about many of the other innovations that have now become standardized in contemporary American education? Flexible scheduling, which in theory sends educational theorists into a state of euphoria, in practice has converted some school systems into toal chaos. Team teaching? There is no evidence that the academic achievement of children and youth has risen under the plan. And what about programmed instruction? It has yet to prove its superiority over the use of conventional textbooks.

Not far from Jericho the Jordan River slips gently into the Dead Sea. Here millions of gallons of fresh water daily become part of the saltiest body of water on earth — six times more salty than any ocean. It is known, too, as the lowest spot on earth.

This area figures persistently in the Bible. And, with the route Jesus would have taken over mountain passes on his way to Jerusalem, He must have looked down many times at this large body of water and the barren stillness surrounding it — such a contrast to the lush green areas found all along the banks of the Jordan.

In 1947 a Bedouin boy cast a stone at random into one of the many isolated caves that riddle the hilly terrain. He heard something shatter and ran. Some time later he returned with a friend to discover several large stone jars crammed with scrolls. A 2,000-year-old religious library had been found — the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Abortion Ruling Religious Bomb

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Depsite the U.S. Supreme Court decision removing legal restrictions on early abortions, the question of their morality still remains dynamite in American religious convictions.

It is not simply a difference between religious groups, but runs explosively through all of them, Protestant, Jewish and Roman Catholic.

The official position of many Protestant denominations, along with that of the Roman Catholic Church, is strongly antiabortion, despite exceptions of some theologians in both groups and some Protestant bodies.

Eastern Orthodox churches and orthodox Judaism also sharply oppose abortion, while reform and conservative Judiasm have favored easing laws against it.

So sharp and sensitive are the differences over the matter that a cooperative organization of most major Protestant and Orthodox bodies, the National Council of Churches, has been unable — in four years of trying — to formulate a modern stand on it.

"The new permissiveness of the law confronts the churches with a greater, more urgent responsibility than before," Dr. R. H. Edwin Espy, general secretary of the council, said of the High court ruling.

"With the legal restraints removed, it is more essential that the religious dimensions be brought to bear to help people make a responsible decision, not only the pregnant woman, but doctors and all those involved."

Other religious leaders also said the court decision, although striking out legal barriers to abortions in the first three months, does not resolve the religious-ethical issue.

This simply is left up to the individuals, their consciences and the influence of their religious guides.

"One trusts in the decency and good sense of the American people not to let an illogical court decision dictate to them on . . . morality and human life," said John Cardinal Krol, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

While the matter now is left to individual choice, the conflict over it rolls on in religious circles, and among ethicists in biological sciences.

"Changing of laws does not change people's convictions about a practice," says Methodist theologian J. Robert Nelson, of Boston University.

The question has produced one of the keenest moral battles of the century. In numerous Protestant and Jewish bodies, it has brought about revisions of their former antiabortion stands.

At the heart of the struggle has been question of just when a human life begins.

Judeo-Christianity, emphasizing the sacred worth of each person, originally held that life began at conception and that a developing fetus thus constituted life as precious as after birth.

Modern genetics reinforced this view, contends Portestant moral theologian Paul Ramsey of Princeton University. "Genetics teaches us that we were from the beginning what we essentially still are in every cell."

Early Christianity and Judaism condemned abortion along with infanticide, both of which were permitted in ancient pagan societies.

But in modern times, amid rising concern for population control and women's rights, numerous Protestant groups have urged removal of legal prohibitions on abortion, leaving it to individual choice in early stages.

This position, taken by the Supreme Court, has been officially endorsed by the United Church of Christ, the United Presbyterian Church, the Lutheran Church in America and the United Methodist Church.

Other Protestants insist abortion be limited to cases endangering the mother's life or in cases of rape, incest or fetal deformity. Versions of this position have been taken by Southern Baptists, the Episcopal Church, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, the National Association of Evangelicals and the National Baptist Convention, a black denomination.

Blacks and other minorities in the churches generally have fought liberalized abortion policies, calling them genocidal.

Marin Evangelical Free Church of San Rafael will feature a special presentation of the controversial "Jews for Jesus" group tomorrow at 7 p.m.

Moishe Rosen, spokesman for the "Jews for Jesus" will speak and a group of these Jewish Christians, called "The Liberated Wailing Wall," will share in song, testimony, and dramatic presentation their attitudes and outlooks since accepting their Messiah Jesus.

The story of these young Jews is one of completion in Christ — and how Jesus made them to be more Jewish.

Last March, the Northern California Board of Rabbis announced an official policy of intolerance against this group. "The Jews for Jesus movement," the board said at that time, "represents a form of apostasy." Since that time, "Jews for Jesus" have been unwelcome in synagogues and youth centers in the Jewish community.

Sam Nadler, former dope dealer and now a member of the Jews for Jesus" presentation group, expresses hope that the day will soon arrive when the group will be welcome in the synagogues and Jewish center by their fellow Jews. "If the rabbis looked at the Old Testament with open hearts, I'm certain they would see Jesus' name written clearly between the lines."

Another of the group's members says "There is a real fulfillment in Jesus. Now that I am a Christian, I know what it means to be a Jew!"

Pastor Sam Walberg of Marin Evangelical Free Church in San Rafael said the 7 p.m. Sunday service is open to all who would like to hear these Jews for Jesus tell of their beliefs and their work.

AN OFFER OF HELP
Life can seem pretty rough sometimes. Greed, carelessness and anger can get to you, if you let them.
But many people have found something that is helping them hold on—something that is restoring peace and order and purpose in their lives. It's a deeper knowledge of God, gained through reading the Bible and the Christian Science textbook.
Come in and read them yourself. Or borrow them to read at home, without charge.

Casper In Front By Four Strokes In Crosby Golf

By JOE SARGIS

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Veterans Billy Casper and Orville Moody, two fellows who almost faded from view last year, opened up daylight on the field in the $205,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am today mostly because they putted well when everyone else didn't.

Casper, coming off his worst year since 1963 and a sore back that laid him up seven weeks, started play in the third round at Pebble Beach today after literally taking apart Cypress Point and Spyglass Hill. Billy shot an opening round 66 at Cypress and added a 67 at Spyglass Friday to bring his 36-hole scores to an imposing 11-under-par 133.

Moody, the former Army sergeant who came out of obscurity to win the 1969 U.S. Open title and then went into near eclipse last year in a fight with his sponsors, almost kept pace with Casper, opening with a 71 at Spyglass and adding on a 66 at Pebble Beach for a 36-hole score of seven-under 137.

Both dropped some exceptional putts, all the more glittering because they came over greens still wet from nearly a month of continuous rain. The sun beamed down Friday but it wasn't strong enough to dry out the three Crosby seaside courses.

"Sure, I'm surprised with my putting," said Casper, "but I'm not questioning what is happening. I only wish it continues at least for two more rounds."

"I started to play well last fall," said Moody, "but I guess no one noticed. I'm not all that surprised with my play here but like Billy, I'm not going to try to figure out what is happening. I'll take it with no questions asked."

Casper sank birdie putts of 30, 25, 18, 15, 14, 8 and 5 feet during Friday's round, which he started with an ache in his back.

"Once the putts started dropping," said Casper, "I forgot all about my back. When you are playing well its not at all difficult to keep your concentration."

Moody had birdy putts of 50, 15, 15, 10, and 4 feet, and six inches twice. The two 15 footers came on uphill putts.

"I didn't play much last year because I had too many personal problems (with his sponsors)," said Moody, "and when I have outside problems, I can't play well. Some fellows out here (on the tour) have a way of blocking things out. I can't, so I stayed around Texas last fall and played in some local events."

Moody didn't do badly, though, picking up more than $26,000 in those local tournaments compared to only $13,000 on the tour. Now all that is behind him and he is ready for a full year of play.

Jack Nicklaus, who never seems to have problems on or off the course, ran into a triple bogey on the 17th hole at Cypress in the second round Friday or otherwise he could have been up there with Casper and Moody. Jack finished with a 69 that left him in a tie with young Don Iverson of LaCrosse, Wis., at four-under 140, seven strokes off the pace.

Gibby Gilbert, Ray Floyd, Bobby Nichols and Don Massengale were at 141 while Tom Weiskopf, Doug Sanders, Ianny Wadkins, Maurice Verbugge and Dave Marr were at 142.

Arnold Palmer, who said he missed eight makeable birdie putts, shot a second round 73 and was at one over 145, while Lee Trevino who was second to Nicklaus in the money race last year, bagged a 70 and was at 144.

Portions of today's third round, after which the cut will be made, will be televised nationally as will two hours of Sunday's windup. Both days the action will be from Pebble Beach.

Drake Takes League Lead

By LEW CODDINGTON

In a manner which was certainly convincing, if not astonishing, Drake High School took over first place in the Marin County Athletic League basketball standings last night by annihilating Redwood, 81-60, before 1,100 delighted fans in San Anselmo.

Don Asay scored 16 points, Eddie Joe Chavez 14 and Rick Herbert 13 for the Pirates, who improved their MCAL record to 5-2, a game better than Redwood, Novato, Marin Catholic and Terra Linda.

"I was totally satisfied," said Drake coach Pete Hayward. "The kids played the way they should. I think Redwood probably used up a lot of adrenal in against Novato (a 67-66 victory Tuesday), but we would have been tough against anybody tonight."

Drake held a 25-15 lead early in the second quarter, but Redwood cut the margin to 27-25 and it looked like a close game would ensue, as befits two teams tied for the league lead. No such thing happened. The Pirates went on a sustained surge to make the score 62-37 at the end of the third quarter, outscoring Redwood 35-12 over the stretch.

Drake went on to build the margin up to 27 points on two occasions before mass substitution occured. In the waning minutes, the Pirate fans let loose with their "80 cheer," reserved for when the team reaches the 80-point plateau, which it narrowly missed in several non-league games.

Drake made 13 of 21 shots from the floor in the pivotal third period, and held Redwood to five of 15. "They're notorious as a third-quarter team," said Giant coach Dick Hart. "They're a good team with a good bench and they deserved to win."

Asay, a 5-foot-11 senior forward, is an example of the "good bench," although he may not be sitting there again for quite a while. Tabbed by Hayward for his first start of the league season Tuesday against San Rafael, he responded with 16 points, starting again last night, he got 16 more.

The victory was the first for the Pirates over Redwood since the championship season of 1967, when Drake won, 52-47, on Feb. 24. The Giants won the intervening 10 games.

Mike Connor scored 23 points for Redwood to lead all scorers. The Giants were playing without forward John Troppmann, down with the flu.

There was a wide disparity in the teams' performances at the free throw line, though it did not account for the whole point spread. Drake made 15 of 26 free throws; Redwood just four of 11.

EXAMINER GAMES

George Woods Is Top Performer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Bulky George Woods outpushed his U. S. Olympic teammates and a badly-beaten Olympic gold medalist Wladyslaw Komar of Poland Friday to highlight the Examiner All-American indoor track meet at the Cow Palace Friday night.

The 300-pound Woods, who won the shot in the 1968 Examiner games and finished second at Munich, tossed the 16-pound ball 68' 6 ½ on his third throw to beat defending champion Al Feuerbach by two inches. His efforts won Woods the award as the meet's top performer.

Feuerbach got off his throw of 68-4 ½ on his first try. Woods moved into the lead with a throw of 68-5 ¾ on his second throw and then improved on his next try.

Brian Oldfield was third at 64-10 ½ while Komar never got his rhythm and finished last at 62-2 ½.

One other Olympic medalist came through, however, when young Randy Williams of USC, the 1972 king, beat 1968 world record setter Bob Beaman in a 26-2 ¼ to 26-0¼ long jump.

The high jump also saw a classic matchup between an old champ and a new one. Olympic medalist Dwight Stones and world record holder Pat Matzdorf battled to a tie before Matzdorf won in a jumpoff at 7 feet 2.

In the 60 yard dash, Chuck Smith of the Southern California Striders breezed to a 6.1 clocking to nip Willie Deckard of the California track club at the tape.

Martin McGrady of California international made a shambles of the open 440 yard dash with an easy victory in 49.1 Former UCLA star John Smith, who has been ill with flu all week, ran fourth.

Marty Liquori, making a comeback after an injury, finished strong to beat Tracy Smith in the two mile. Liquori took the lead with a little less than two laps remaining and won by 15 yards in a time of 8:42.0.

Lance Babb of California International, a last minute entrant, whipped Jerry Wilson of the Southern California Striders in the 60 yard high hurdles with a time of 7.1.

Unheralded Mark Winzinreid scored the major upset by defeating Olympic champion Dave Wottle in the 880-yard dash.

Winzinreid, former University of Wisconsin star, led all the way to win in 1:51.3. Wottle made a strong bid on the final tap and was timed in 1:53.1.

The closest race of the night came in the final event when Kenya's Kip Keino surged through the final 50 yards to beat Duncan McDonald of West Valley Track Club by inches. Both runners were timed in 4:03.8.

McDonald had grabbed the lead with 2 ½ laps to go and built up the margin to 12 yards before Keino closed fast to win.

After the meet, Keino apologized for not going faster.

He said he had wanted to run under 4 minutes and lead all the way, but was surprised to see McDonald move out ahead.

A standing-room only crowd of 13,955 watched the action.

The flop of the night was the pole vault. Swedish aces Hans Lagerquist bowed out with an injury early in the competition and former world record holder Kjell Isakkson withdrew after the bar went to the 17-foot level.

The final two competitors in the vault, Vic Dias and Bob Stovar of the Bay Area Striders, couldn't clear 17 feet so the bar was lowered to 16-6 where they finished in a tie.

Volleyball Game Set

The medical staffs of Kaiser-Permanente Medical Center of Terra Linda and Marin General Hospital of Greenbrae will meet in a volleyball game dubbed the Bed Pan Bowl Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Redwood High School gym in Larkspur. Admission is free.

KLOPFER WINS IN A WALK

San Rafael High School's two race-walking teachers, Goetz Klopfer and Bill Ranney, recorded a 1-2 sweep of the two-mile walk last night in the San Francisco Examiner All-America track meet at the Cow Palace.

Klopfer, affiliated with the Stockton Racewalkers, won the event in 14:12.4, while Ranney, of Oakland's Athens Track Club, was second in 14:20.2.

Terra Linda Turns Back Novato Cagers, 67-63

By TOM THOMPSON

Novato High School's basketball team may be forming some peculiar habits.

For the second time in as many games, the Hornets dropped far behind early, tied it up late, and finally fell to some near perfect free-throw shooting in the closing minutes to lose to Terra Linda 67-63, in a Marin County Athletic League contest on the winners' court.

The loss dropped Novato into a four-way tie for second place with Terra Linda, Marin Catholic and Redwood with 4-3 records, one full game behind first place Drake, and a half game ahead of idle San Marin.

Tuesday, Novato, again for the second consecutive game, lost it on the free throw line, sinking only three of nine, while Terra Linda was 13 of 19, eight of 10 in the crucial fourth quarter. Terra Linda committed only 11 fouls to the visitors' 15.

Last night it was Nick Mattos who did the Hornets in, sinking two free throws with 1:17 left to play, making the score 65-59, and putting the game away, as about 800 fans looked on.

Mattos, finishing with 11 points, got much assistance from teammate Mark Lowey, who had 27 points and leads the league in scoring. Trojan coach Bob Corley also lauded Brian Morey in his first start of the year at center. Morey scored 10 and Scott Logan 14.

Joe Powell scored 22 for the losers and Curtis Saine contributed 14.

Terra Linda jumped out to a 15-7 first-quarter lead and built it to 17 points with 2:41 left in the first half. The Hornets outscored the hosts 9-2 to cut the margin to 10 at halftime. Second half play saw both teams battling almost evenly until Novato began to rally with about four minutes left in the game.

Powell rattled off five straight baskets to tighten the score to 57-54 with 3:22 showing on the clock. Dan Del Rose then sank a free throw, stole the ball, and fed it to Willie Barnes, who tied the score at 57-57.

Ironically, the Hornets seemed to let down after that, as the Trojans scored six consecutive points to set up Mattos' winning free throws.

It was the sixth time in a row Novato's games have been decided by four points or less.

Novato	7	13	16	27 — 63
Terra Linda	15	15	19	18 — 67

Terra Linda — Lowey 12-3-27, Logan 7-0-14, Morey 3-4-10, Mattos 4-3-11, Leaird 1-3-5. Totals: 27-13-67.

Marin Cagers Host Tough West Valley

The first mate will be in charge of the Tars tonight when West Valley College of Campbell visits Kentfield for a vital Camino Norte Conference basketball game against College of Marin at 8 o'clock.

For the second straight game, Marin assistant Jim Webster will run the team. Head coach John Panagakis has caught the flu and yesterday morning said, "I may not even show up at the game if I don't feel any better than his."

There will be no more important junior college game played in the state tonight. Marin has a 17-2 record and is ranked No. 2 in California, while West Valley is 16-3 and rated No.3.

Marin leads the conference with a 4-0 record, but West Valley is 3-1 after an 80-77 loss to Skyline of San Bruno last Saturday night, so the game takes on a special urgency for the Vikings.

"We will have to counteract their (Marin's) quickness," said West Valley coach El Brown. "They are quicker than we are, and there's no weakness in their starting lineup."

"Three things make West Valley an outstanding team," said Webster. "Their balance, their press, and the fact that they play with intensity all the time.

"We've been working in practice against their press. We had a chance to work on it Tuesday (in a 77-54) victory over Cosumnes River Junior College of Sacramento, Webster's junior college head coaching debut.) We had trouble at first but later we began to do all right."

Marin forward Wil Garner is tied for the conference lead in scoring, according to statistics released by Junior College Athletic Bureau in San Mateo. He and Stan Foster of Solano each have per-game averages of 18.0. The only other Tar in the top 20 is guard Joe DeMaestri, 13th at 13.5.

Balanced West Valley has no scorers in the top 10 but four in the second 10, led by 11th-place Paul Boskovich, a 6-foot-5 center. Tim Walsh, a 6-8 forward, is averaging 13.3, while 5-11 guard Rick Hile checks in at 13.0 and 6-3 forward Bruce Batnich at 10.0.

All are sophomores. So is 5-11 Tim Tolbert, who alternates at guard with 6-1 Enver Apaydin.

Marin center Neil Traub is a doubtful starter for the game due to abdominal pains which first struck him earlier this week. He does not have appendicitis, as originally feared, Webster said.

Other minor aches plague the Tars, but Webster said "We've been practicing well this week and we'll be ready."

"Marin is as good a club as we've seen all year," said Brown. That's a strong statement, since West Valley has played 10th-ranked Santa Barbara, 14th-ranked Santa Monica, third-ranked small division power Cuesta of San Luis Obispo, and Brown has scouted fourth-ranked Long Beach and top-ranked Allan Hancock of Santa Maria.

Marin 'Cats Defeat San Rafael

By ROB MILLER

Playing what coach Dave Gonsalves considered "our type of game — a slow game," Marin Catholic High School scored a 38-34 basketball victory over the San Rafael Bulldogs last night on the Wildcats' court.

The game, viewed by 500, was Marin Catholic's third straight win, giving them a 4-3 Marin County Athletic League mark. It was also San Rafael's fifth straight loss. The Bulldogs are now 2-5 in MCAL action.

Gonsalves explained, "By a slow game I mean we slowed it up enough to where we could keep up with the bigger San Rafael team.

"We went with our small team and we still did well on the boards due to Ben Partee and Mike and Dan Mahoney." Partee pulled down 16 rebounds giving him a total of 63 in seven games, and the Mahoneys each had seven.

The game was marred by a fight in the fourth quarter when Marin Catholic's Tom Cronin decked the Bulldogs' Guy Perry. Perry hit the floor hard, and was unconscious for several minutes. According to San Rafael coach Bret Tovani last night, Perry is suffering from "a probable broken nose and concussion." He was to see his private physician today.

Tovani said after the game, "If Marin Catholic can't beat you on the court, they'll do it any way they can. And if that's the way they want to play, then we don't want to win that badly."

The Bulldogs were never able to take the lead from the 'Cats after the third quarter. After Perry went down, both teams were fired up, but San Rafael's shooting was off. By the time Marin Catholic's Paul Bartolini sank a fielder with four seconds left, it was all over.

The Wildcats had the game scoring advantage, with 40 per cent from the floor, and 43 per cent from the line. San Rafael had a dismal 25 per cent and 53 per cent from the line.

High scorers for Marin Catholic were Mike Mahoney and Bill Reilly, each with 14 points. For San Rafael, high man was Byron Stewart with 13. Stewart led the Bulldogs in rebounding with 13.

Warriors, Lakers Rematch Tonight

OAKLAND (UPI) — If the Los Angeles Lakers are going to win it all without Happy Hairston, it's going to be defense that does it for them.

Playing a crucial game against their Pacific Division archrivals at home Friday night, the Lakers put the clamps on Rick Barry and came away with a 100-84 victory over the Golden State Warriors.

The teams play again tonight, this time at Oakland Coliseum Arena, starting at 8 o'clock.

Coach Bill Sharman called Friday night's game the Lakers' second best defensive outing of the season.

"We caught them on a cold night and we played a very good defensive game," Sharman said. "It probably was our best defensive game of the year except for our game against the New York Knicks (a 95-88 win) here last weekend.

"Tonight (Jim) McMillian did one heckuva job on Barry."

Giving three inches away in height, the 6-foot-5 McMillian held the Warriors' high-scoring forward to his lowest point total of the season, 13.

Barry connected on only 6 of 20 field goal attempts but didn't appear to be bothered by a sprained ankle which caused him to miss Tuesday night's All-Star game at Chicago.

"You just have to play a lot closer," explained McMillian, "and not give him a shot."

In addition, McMillian scored 10 of his 14 points in a pivotal third quarter that saw Los Angeles increase an 11-point halftime bulge into an 86-59 runaway.

Jerry West led the Lakers' attack with 22 points while Bill Bridges popped in 18 points.

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

NEW YORK — Steve Smith, a senior at Long Beach State, Friday night became the first man ever to clear the 18-foot pole-vault barrier indoors, soaring 18 feet, ¼-inch at the 66th annual Millrose Games.

"I wanted to do it in New York," he said. "All day long I had butterflies in my stomach thinking about it. But I knew I could do it. People kept asking me about the gash I had in my leg and a pulled thigh muscle, but neither bothered me. I'm used to competing like this."

Signups for the two leagues and the Senior division will be held Thursday and Friday from 7:30-9 p.m. at the San Rafael High School cafeteria.

New Coach, Another Loss

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Kevin Loughery can take only one solace from his debut as a National Basketball Association coach—he's still 46 losses better off than his predecessor.

The Philadelphia 76ers took the court for the first time under the new leadership of Loughery Friday night and walked off it just as they had done 47 times under former Coach Roy Rubin—as losers.

Loughery, though, displayed the wisdom of a veteran coach as he put the blame for the 105-100 setback at Cleveland squarely on himself.

"It was my fault that (Lenny) Wilkens had a good night," said the 32-year-old Loughery. "He made the difference. I just waited too long to make the adjustments on him."

Wilkens, a former coach himself at Seattle, led all scorers with 28 points, including 20 of them in the second half. Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch agreed that his backcourt man was the difference, explaining, "Wilkens reeled off 10 straight points that gave us a 90-82 lead and they couldn't catch us."

Philadelphia, which has won only four of its 52 games, actually outshot the Cavs from the field, 84-70, but made only 16 of 28 free throw attempts to 35 of 42 for Cleveland. the victory was the eighth in 11 games for the Cavs in January, the best month of their three-year history.

Fred Carter led the 76ers with 25 points, including 13 in the final period.

Another player who suffered some bad luck Friday night was Bill Bridges of Los Angeles, who needed 19 points to reach the 10,000-point plateau for his career. He popped in 18 points, only to have referee Mendy Rudolph disallow a basket at the final buzzer that would have put him over the top.

Nevertheless, the Lakers walloped Golden State, 100-84, to stretch their Pacific Division lead to 5 1-2 games over the Warriors.

The Boston Celtics, racing off to a 47-24 first quarter lead, stretched their Atlantic Division lead to 2 1-2 games over idle New York by beating the Houston Rockets, 139-126, and in other action Friday night the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Detroit Pistons, 117-105, the Chicago Bulls beat the Baltimore Bullets, 110-100, the Atlanta Hawks crushed the Buffalo Braves, 118-82, and the Phoenix Suns beat the Portland Trail Blazers, 120-116.

Pale Little Finn Steals The Show

The golden horns sound their ancient summons as once again a flock of pigeons fly out of a grand stadium on a beautiful summer day. The Olympic Games of Paris, 1924, have begun.

The United States has sent a team of 300 athletes to these games. Their strongest competition figures to come from a small but proud team from Finland, which has only 60 members.

A young American swimmer, John Weissmuller, wins three gold medals, while his Yank teammates in the track and field competition sweep the shotput and win most of the short races. But the Finns stay right behind with an awesome display of distance running.

They purport to have superior training methods for the long races. As proof, Finnish distance star Willie Ritola sets two world records in winning the 3,000 meter steeplechase and the 10,000 meter run.

Another countryman does even more. He is a pale little Finn named Paavo Nurmi. Nurmi enters the 1500 and 5000 meter races. Both are to be run within an hour and fifteen minutes of each other. Nevertheless, Nurmi, running with a stopwatch in hand, wins them both.

At the start of the grueling 10,000 meter cross country run, 39 entrants trot out of the stadium on a very hot afternoon. The heat takes its toll, as many runners collapse on the Paris roads. A half hour later, a lone runner returns to the stadium. It's Paavo Nurmi, running easily and breezing to his third gold medal.

In the 3,000 meter relay the Finns, with Nurmi, win again. The Finns have lost the unofficial team medal competition to the United States, 255 to 166, but they have maintained their world dominance of distance running. Yet the most memorable feature of this Olympics will have to be the great running of Paavo Nurmi, who has astonishingly won four gold medals.

Gabriel Wants To Be Traded

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Roman Gabriel wants to be traded from the Los Angeles Rams to the Washington Redskins and his former Ram coach, George Allen, a personal friend of his said Friday night.

Stu Nahan of KABC-TV said he learned that Garbiel had called new Rams' coach Chuck Knox to inform him of his wishes.

The Rams Wednesday announced the hiring of Knox, 40, and the firing of Tommy Prothro and Thursday obtained quarterback John Hadl from the San Diego Chargers in a trade for defensive end Coy Bacon and running back Bob Thomas.

High-Flying Vallejo Rips Petaluma

Petaluma High School was blown out of the gym in the first quarter last night, as the visiting Vallejo Apaches took a 21-point lead and rode it to a 70-55 North Bay League basketball victory.

The loss drops the Trojans' league record to 2-4.

"They just dominated the ball game," Petaluma coach Mark Resichling commented after the game. "They had a super first quarter and we were just cold. (Venson) Washington dominated the boards for them."

The Trojans were behind 38-16 at halftime, but won the second half with a big 26-point fourth quarter, 39-30. By that time, however, Vallejo was playing its second team.

The Apaches are the number one ranked school in the Redwood Empire, and Reischling agrees with the polls. "They have the potential to be the best team we've faced all year," he aid. "They are super quick and play well together."

Washington led all scorers with 24 points and Beavers added 14. Kirk Smartt paced Petaluma with 14 points.

St. Vincent In Cage Victory Over Tomales

Bob Vyenielo and Dan Tocchini scored 41 points between them last night to lead St. Vincent High School of Petaluma to a 70-59 North Central League II victory over the visiting Tomales Braves.

The victory upped the Mustangs' league mark to 3-0 so they remain tied with Point Arena, which upset Kelseyville, 66-51, last night. Tomales is 0-3 in league play.

Vyenielo put in 21 points and Tocchini added 20 for his season high. "Besides doing all the scoring, those two kids dominated the boards," Tomales coach Jim Clahan commented. Rob Loughran scored 14 points for the Mustangs.

Tomales was led by season long scoring leader Russ Sartori, 18 points, and playmaker Spirito Ballatore, 17.

Redwood J.V. Streak Ended

Drake High School's junior varsity basketball team handed Redwood its first Marin County Athletic League loss of the year last night, 45-41, in San Anselmo, to move into a tie for first place with the Giants at 6-1.

Pirate Steve Harnsberger hit two free throws with 29 seconds left in the game to make the score 44-41 and seal the win. Steve Parsons had 12 points for the hosts.

In other games last night, Novato held off a late rally by Terra Linda to win, 62-47, behind George DiRuchio's 22 points and Les Nicholini's 13, and San Rafael outscored Marin Catholic, 50-38.

Cardinal Newman Tops Rancho Cotate

By PAUL DWORIN

Budding art students could take a lesson in the use of contrast from Cardinal Newman High School basketball coach Jack Fitzgerald.

Last night Fitzgerald had his Cardinals running for the first three quarters to build up a seven-point lead, but when host Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park cut the gap to one point with five minutes to play, the Santa Rosa school went to the stall game to protect its lead and ended up with a 50-44 Sonoma County League victory.

The loss, which was the Cougars' third straight in SCL play, dropped Rancho Cotate's league mark to 2-3, three games behind the undefeated Cardinals. "I'm not conceding a damn thing yet," Cougar coach Mike Francis said.. "We could still catch them, with some help."

Cardinal Newman held a 43-38 lead one minute into the fourth quarter, but two baskets by Mike Sanchez and another by Marshall Brant cut the margin to 43-42. Fitzgerald then put on the stall, which succeeded in opening up the lane and allowing Joel Faller and Jerry Robinson to put in two uncontested lay-ups each.

"It was an effective stall," Francis commented. "It's tough playing a really quick team in the stall because you have to respect their quickness going to the basket and that lets them pass the ball around outside until someone gets open underneath."

Cardinal Newman outscored the Cougars 8-2 in the first three minutes of the game, as the Cardinals' full-court press and man-to-man defense caused repeated turnovers. The Cougars had 25 for the game.

Brant was high point man for the game with 23, making nine of 12 shots from the field.

Cardinal Newman	12	17	12	9	— 50

Rancho Cotate — Callinin 3-2-8, Brant 9-5-23, Holman 1-0-2, Young 1-1-3, Sanchez 3-0-6, Hamann 1-0-2. Totals: 18-8-44.

Terra Linda Wrestlers Take Lead

Terra Linda High School added a few knots to the already tangled Marin County Ahletic League wrestling race yesterday by defeating Redwood, 34-21, to move into first place with a 4-1 record.

Previously unbeaten Redwood fell to second place at 3-1, followed at 2-1 by idle Tamalpais and by San Rafael, which beat San Marin yesterday, (score unavailable).

The tangle comes from the fact that Redwood beat Tam, Tam beat Terra Linda, and now Terra Linda has beaten Redwood.

Trojan heavyweight Jon Loberg pinned Redwood's Ted Adams to remain undefeated, and has allowed only one of his estimated 15-20 matches to go the distance.

"Of course, we always rely on Mark Egide (114 pounds) and Mike Weinstein (122)," said Terra Linda coach Bob Hetherington. "Reggie Grant (135) also came through. And those were big victories by Tim Bennett (156) and Mike Thornton (167), each winning 2-0."

Terra Linda 4-1, Redwood 3-1, San Rafael 2-1, Tamalpais 2-1, San Marin 2-2, Novato 0-3, Drake 0-4.

Frosh Basketball

John Riccardi came off the bench to score two key baskets in the fourth quarter, including the game-winner on a driving layup with less than a minute left, as Marin Catholic High School's freshman basketball team rallied from an eight-point third-quarter deficit to defeat Redwood yesterday, 34-33. The important Marin County Athletic League victory left Marin Catholic unbeaten at 7-0 and dropped Redwood to 5-2.

Seals Fight Back, Hold Blues To Tie

OAKLAND (UPI) — The California Golden Seals now lead the league in two departments —one so-so and the other disastrous.

They achieved their 12th tie Friday night when they held a St. Louis team that hasn't tasted defeat in its last six contests to a 1-1 standoff.

But they also had their third winger injured when Craig Patrick suffered a slash in his lower leg that is expected to sideline him for at least a week.

Scoring ace Joey Johnson has his jaw wired and won't be back in action until late next week and Gary Croteau has a knee injury that is expected to sideline him for some time.

More than 7,000 fans turned out to watch Stan Weir's goal in the first period almost stand up until Gary Unger hit in the final stanza to achieve the tie.

But the real stars of the show were goalies Gilles Meloche of the Seals and Wayne Stephenson of the Seals who each made some sensational stops.

WITNESS TO HISTORY

Pilot Remembers The Red Baron

By FRANK FARRARA

Yellowed, worn films of World War I airplanes flickered on a small screen at Novato High School yesterday and the image of the legendary fighter pilot, Baron Manfred von Richtofen, the "Red Baron," flashed by.

Seated at the rear of the room watching impassively was a trim, silver-haired man "in his middle 70s," who was there when the Red Baron was shot down in a dogfight over France.

The onlooker was Capt. O. C. "Boots" LeBoutillier, last surviving aerial witness to the death of the Red Baron, who was flying with a Royal Air Force group that tangled with von Richtofen's "Flying Circus" April 21, 1918.

LeBoutillier, commander of Flight B, 209 Squadron, said, "There were 15 of us and four were knocked down so there were 11 of us and 28 of them."

Von Richtofen, flying a red triplane, was shot down by Capt. Roy Brown, LeBoutillier said. "Brown made a pass in front of me and I could see his tracers going in, and the triplane went down.

"We didn't know at the time that it was the Red Baron," he said.

Australian ground crews claimed they had shot von Richtofen down with ground fire, but the pilots were convinced that "Brown got him," LeBoutillier said.

The World War I ace with six kills to his credit was speaking to a class, part of an all-day teachers institute at Novato High School.

LeBoutillier, a native of Montclair, N.J., said he was a young pilot with "about five minutes' flying time," when he went to Canada, "lied about my age" and headed for the Royal Air Force.

"Boots" Le Boutillier Tangled with Red Baron

"They told me we'd be in big flying boats over the North Sea observing and going after submarines, but that never materialized, so they put me in pursuit planes."

His first flight in England was a disaster when he was assigned to a plane he wasn't familiar with and crashed into a stone fence.

"They gave me a second chance," he said. With only 29 hours' of flying time, he was sent into combat.

At first, the planes had one machine gun on top of the wing that fired over the propeller, but in 1917, the machine gun was synchronized with the propeller, he recalled.

He praised the Sopwith Camel, called Camel because it had a hump in it, as "the finest airplane on either side... otherwise I wouldn't be here today.

The Sopwith Camel "was a kind of a wicked airplane to fly. Some guys got killed just flying it, but it saved my bacon plenty of times."

LeBoutillier said he went down "the first time over the lines when I cartwheeled into barbed wire and the French pulled me out. They never sent you to the medics. You just put your goggles back on and went up again."

The life expectancy of a fighter pilot in combat "averaged 20 hours or three weeks," he said. "I didn't know it then and I'm glad I didn't."

There weren't any safety devices and no parachutes," LeBoutillier said.

"We lost a lot by fire. Today the planes are sophisticated and have all the safety devices but 50 years from now these airplanes will look like nothing."

Except for heavy fog at Newfoundland, LeBoutillier might have been one of the early flyers to cross the Atlantic.

He said he was attempting to fly the Atlantic carrying the girl friend of a friend.

"I made 1,200 miles to Newfoundland, but it was fog, fog, fog, and she wanted to go back to New York so I flew back to New York."

After the war, he had a career in commercial aviation, "made pictures in Hollywood, about 18," worked for the Civil Aviation Administration, and then entered private business, he said. He lives in Las Vegas.

LeBoutillier was the speaker last night at the start of a three-day conference of aerospace education workshop directors at Hamilton Air Force Base, sponsored by the Pacific Region of the Civil Air Patrol.

$8,000 Damage In Apartment Blaze

A fire that swept from the heating room of a San Rafael apartment and burned through a door to the hallway at 8:40 p.m. yesterday caused $8,000 damage, firemen reported today.

The fire at the Odesso Kelly residence, 155 Nova Albion Way, was sparked by combustibles too near a furnace, firemen said.

To Visit Canada

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip will visit Canada from July 31 to Aug. 4 for the beginning of the Commonwealth prime minister's conference, Buckingham Palace announced today.

Wallace In Satisfactory Condition

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George C. Wallace rested in a hospital today, recuperating from prostate surgery, his sixth operation since being paralyzed from the waist down by an assailant's bullets last May.

"His condition is satisfactory," said Billy Joe Camp, Wallace's news secretary. "He is alert and in good spirits. The governor's temperature and vital signs are normal."

The surgery, performed Friday at the University of Alabama Medical Center, was to correct an enlarged prostate gland and improve urinary drainage.

The enlarged prostate did not result from the shooting, but the enlarged gland hampered the flow of urine from the bladder, over which Wallace has no control, doctors said.

"The surgery on Gov. Wallace was completed as planned and without any complications," said Dr. George H. Myers Jr., the surgeon.

Camp said he did not know when Wallace would be released from the hospital.

FIRST PLUNGE HARDEST

A Love Affair With Diving

By SUSAN LYONS MIDDAUGH
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BINGHAMPTON, N.Y. — Marion Clayton Link didn't want to take that first dive. She didn't have much confidence in her swimming ability, and she was not used to the oxygen tank strapped to her back. But her husband's enthusiasm for hunting buried treasure was contagious, so she took the plunge.

At first her feet refused to stay below her head, and the fish frightened her a bit. But gradually, she was charmed by the quiet beauty of the deep-sea world. Somewhere beneath the waves was the start of Marion Link's love affair with diving, an affair that has brought her honor, adventure, publishing contracts, and her husband's wholehearted approval.

Since that day 20 years ago, Marion and Edwin A. Link, the aviation pioneer and retired industrialist, have explored the sunken cities of Caesarea and Port Royal. They've gone on expeditions for the National Geographic Society and the Smithsonian Institution.

They've recovered ancient Roman cooking pots from the Sea of Galilee; Grecian pottery from the harbor at Syracuse, Sicily; jewelry, coins, and grape shot from shipwrecks in the Florida Keys and the Caribbean. They've challenged an accepted theory about Christopher Columbus's first landing in the New World, and introduced a new one of their own.

MORE RECENTLY, however, Mr. and Mrs. Link have shifted their attention from gold doubloons and pieces of eight to fish farming and oceanography. What sparked the change was Ed Link's realization that treasure hunting is more of an engineering problem than an adventurer's riddle.

From his own experience, he knew there was no way a diver could live and work at great depths for an extended period of time. Many of the Greek sponge divers who tried it were killed. Others suffered from exhaustion, cold, and hunger, after decompressing for hours in the water.

As he had earlier worked to solve aviators' problems, now Link set out to tackle those of divers. First he developed an underwater air supply of helium and oxygen. Next he designed a rubberized diving suit for keeping the diver's body warm at great depths. Then, working in the organ loft and basement of his home, he built a model for a unique aluminum and Plexiglas submarine and tested the motors for it in a Sears Roebuck swimming pool. Finally, he designed the Johnson-Sea-Link, a 23-foot, 9½-ton five-man submersible, costing $450,000. (Link and J. Seward Johnson, of the pharmaceutical firm, donated the sub to the Smithsonian Institution.)

THE SEA-LINK, which looks like a helicopter, can accommodate a pilot and observer in its plexiglas bubble and three divers in its aluminum hull. It can carry a team of divers to a depth of 1,000 feet and stay there 48 hours. Once Sea-Link is settled on the ocean floor, the divers are free to enter and reenter the sub to study fish habits, plant life, rock and coral formations, even search for sunken ships and ancient artifacts.

Such freedom comes from being able to adjust the pressure in the chamber to that outside. The pressure will remain at that level until the diving team is back on board ship, and in a separate decompression chamber. The chamber, located in the stern of a former Coast Guard vessel, Sea Diver, now used by Sea-Link for research, is equipped with eating and sleeping facilities, as well as a lockout area for medical examinations.

But there is more to this sea picture of shipwrecks and submarines. Someone has to plan the expeditions, order food and supplies, keep records, and care for the guests and crew aboard Sea Diver.

ENTER MARION Link, quartermaster, hostess and secretary of the 100-foot vessel. She has coped with situations the average housewife never has to face — like ordering 700 pounds of meat at one time, and having 12 adults for breakfast, lunch, and dinner for days or weeks at a time. On one occasion Mrs. Link had to teach their Greek cook how to use electrical appliances.

"When Johnnie started to work for us 11 years ago, he didn't know the difference between a refrigerator and a freezer," she said in an interview. "What's more, he couldn't speak English." Mrs. Link resolved the problem by coaching Johnnie in English, and posting a small vocabulary list in the ship's galley.

Marion Link also doubles as a sailor. She keeps the ship's log and takes her turn on watch with the other members of the crew.

But perhaps her greatest contribution is that of writer. A former newspaper reporter, she has written two books about their expeditions and her husband's experiments. The second book will be published next spring by the Smithsonian Institution Press.

Her first book, "Sea Diver," is a detailed account of the preparation, hard work and mishaps that often make treasure hunting more struggle than sport. "If we find the (Santa) Maria," she once said, "all we expect are the remnants. Perhaps some fittings, a few cannonballs, maybe a cannon or two."

THE LINKS never did find Columbus's flagship, but they did locate what they claim is an anchor from the Santa Maria.

Calculations and research aside, finding a sunken ship is usually "accidental," said Mrs. Link.

Mrs. Link, straightforward as her writing style, cherishes few illusions about treasure hunting and its rewards. She knows how rough weather can cause diving delays, and the boredom that comes from waiting for calm seas. She has seen the attitudes of governments toughen toward treasure seekers, and divers become discouraged by permits and high taxes.

The Young And Minorities Showing Tendency Toward Self-Destruction

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite the taboo of suicide, selfdestruction goes on with mankind and is going up with some groups—the young and the minorities.

Officially, for the last two decades, suicide has ranked around the 10th leading cause of death for all ages. But, say two authorities on the subject, these records are not absolutely reliable, for in many cases it is impossible to determine whether an "accidental" death really was that or whether it was intentional.

Also, because of persistent cultural and religious taboos and financial pressures, some families and communities refuse to admit a suicide has occurred in their midst.

For these reasons, psychotherapists and other suicide prevention workers believe that suicide may rank actually as fifth or sixth among causes of death.

COUNTING ONLY the recorded deaths even, the toll is twice that of homicides in the United States, or 24,000 a year. They cost the community about $4 billion in emergency facilities, brief hospitalization and loss of income. And incalculable is the "widening ring of tragedy a suicide leaves behind."

These are some points made in "Dealing with the Crisis of Suicide", a new Public Affairs Committee pamphlet written by Calvin J. Frederick and Louise Lague.

Dr. Frederick, now with the National Institute of Mental Health's Center for Studies of Crime and Delinquency, was assistant chief of the Center for Studies of Suicide Prevention at the institute when the booklet was written.

Miss Lague writes for the Evening Star and Washington Daily News.

The two say that most suicides occur in urban areas and there is an upward trend in suicide among minority groups who for the most part are urban dwellers.

Among American Indians, the rate in some tribes is at least five times higher than the national average...in some big cities, the rate among black males up to the age of 35 is much greater than that of white males of the same age...over the last 25 years, suicide has risen to the fourth leading cause of death among young people 10 to 24 years old.

"THEIR HALPLESSNESS, hopelessness, and loneliness are usually brought on by family problems, but all kinds of problems—the failure to make good grade, or to be accepted by school groups, an argument with a friend—are magnified in their small world," say the authors.

Why do people commit suicide? The authors list among the factors impulse ("heat of anger, frustration or disappointment"), the feeling that "life is not worth living anymore" (depression), serious illness, and communication — "often people who attempt suicide are trying to say something to those around them..."

Many times the person planning suicide sends out signals — sometimes subtle clues, other times outright statement. Still others don't talk about it, especially the young, the elderly and professional persons.

Who can help? You can, say Dr. Frederick and Miss Lague. So can the family doctor, dentist, close friends, hairdressers, co-workers, employes or employers, policemen and women.

Don't ignore the signals. Do take every threat seriously.

Don't dismiss a threat with "You're not the type." This can be a challenge to the suicidal. Don't try to shock the person with "Oh, go ahead."

DON'T TRY to analyze the person's behavior to him. This should be done by a professional. And do seek professional help as soon as possible.

Do be willing to listen. Promise that everything possible will be done to keep the person alive.

Simple, Not Plain Is Fashion Word

Simple, not plain. That's the shape of '73 fashions, according to Mildred Sullivan, director of the New York Couture Business Council. "And it's a well-known fashion axiom, the simpler or more classic the shape, the more important the fabric and color story.

Sugary pastels, sparkling white, fields of florals, soft luxurious fabrics or nubby naturals are the raw materials.

TOUGH AREA

Women In Blue Patrol New York

By RICKY ROSENTHAL
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK — As the patrol car inches forward down the dark wintry street, Lucille Burras Cano and Kataline Salzano become more alert — and suddenly quiet.

The "beat" of the two New York City policewomen: Bedford-Stuyvesant, one of the poorest — and most crime-ridden — neighborhoods in the United States.

— neighborhoods in the United States.

The pair, part of a special experiment which puts policewomen on patrol duties previously handled almost exclusively by men, represent a trend among America's major policing agencies — recruitment of more women officers and upgrading their roles in police work. The mere presence of women, some analysts argue, is dramatically changing the shape of law enforcement in the United States.

Capt. Victoria Renzullo, who heads the police department women's section in Manhattan, attests to this. Her office, a coordinating point for New York City's women officers, reports that out of approximately 300 women on the force, 229 are policewomen, one is a deputy inspector, one a captain, five are lieutenants, 14 are sergeants, and 50 are detectives.

IN OTHER cities across the country — such as Chicago, Dallas, Oakland, Ann Arbor, Mich., and Hershey, Pa. — women are playing greater roles in police work.

However, of the 29,000 policemen in the five New York City boroughs, only about 1 per cent are women.

The "policewomen on patrol" experiment is sponsored by a grant from the Police Foundation in Washington, a privately funded organization. The New York program is seven months old, and Lt. Lucille Accera, who heads it, says it has liberated discontented policewomen who were chained to what they call "perpetual female assignments." These assignments (which still exist for the majority of women in the department) consist of matron work, guarding female prisoners and female material witnesses, and the care of youngsters.

The policewoman's needs, aspirations, and goals are changing; they "want to be out on the street," Mrs. Mary Kittel, a plainclothes woman who works with a male partner, is a good example. Mrs. Kittel, a mother of five, made four felony arrests this month.

This is "exceptionally good," according to Sgt. William Ambrose of the 77th Precinct — the Bedford-Stuyvesant area where five of the "experimental women" are working. The rest are posted in Queens and lower Manhattan.

Early resistance from policemen came because the men did not want to ride with a female partner, said Lieutenant Accera. Their attitude was: "It's just one more person to protect, instead of being protected." This attitude is changing, she says.

PRELIMINARY FINDINGS show that women use psychology rather than brute force, but the department wants to prove this.

Miss Burras Cano and Mrs. Salzano, both trim, petite, and pistol-packing, confirmed this aspect of their work on the 4 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. shift. They are on RMP, radio-motor-patrol, patrolling 10 blocks as part of the Neighborhood Police Team in the Bedford Stuyvesant area.

Three months of judo throws and karate experience at the Police Academy give them some security, but, says Mrs. Salzano: "The gun gives us a sense of security, but mostly we shoot with our mouths." The he-man approach is not popular with either to them; this they feel is "the traditional cop attitude." Miss Burras Cano is deeply aware "of the desperate daily struggle" of the people she has come to know and like.

When confronting troublemakers, says Miss Burras Cano, she thinks "How many times have they been abused?" She knows, as does her partner, that more than 50 per cent are on welfare and the area is 100 per cent black. Problems come with people's built-in inferiority complex.

In seven months they have encountered no attack. They have disarmed people and found "no real resistance."

"They react to our femininity," said Miss Burras Cano. They realize full well that critics say that once they get hurt the program will end. One police official in their precinct thinks danger lies ahead. There will come a time when someone or a group will want to provoke an incident.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Any Young Girl Has The Chance To Wear Miss Teen-Ager Crown

DEAR RAP:

How does a girl go about entering a national pageant like the Miss American Teen-Ager Contest? Do you have to live in a city that has a local contest? Our town never does. — SHEILA

P.S. Am I silly to think I'd have a chance?

SHEILA:

I passed your question along to Sol Abrams, vice president of Miss American Teen-Ager Contest, Inc., and he answered, "Any young lady throughout the U.S. or its territories who would like to enter may do so by merely writing to:

Miss American Teen-Ager Contest, 1605 Lemoine Ave., Fort Lee, N.J., 07024.

"We will direct the applicant to the franchised contest nearest her home," he said. You don't need a local sponsor, but if your application is accepted, you will have to pay your own way to the preliminaries. And you must be between the ages of 13 through 17. No special "talent" is required.

Other teen contests include:

Miss National Teen-Ager Pageant, finals to be held in Atlanta, in late August. Applications are now available from the National Certification Office, 126 Bunn Drive, Rockton, Ill., 61072.

Miss Teen-Age America, Fort Worth.

America's Junior Miss, Mobile, Ala.

Write on, Sheila, and good luck! — SUE

DEAR SHEILA:

You ask, "Am I silly to think I'd have a chance?"

Carla Tevault, who was crowed Miss American Teen-Ager last August, asked herself this question too: With 250,000 hopefuls competing, how could a girl from the small farming and mining community of Petersburg, Ind. make it past first eliminations?

But she did!

When, as a state winner, she arrived in New York City for the national finals, she looked around and wondered, "What am I doing here?"

"Most of the girls," she recalls, "had on wigs or falls and lots of attractive makeup, and they were all so pretty. I thought then and there I wasn't what they were looking for."

But she was!

Carla, as wholesome and unaffected as a Hoosier hoedown, thinks of herself as just an ordinary American college girl. (She's a freshman this year at Mark Spitz' Alma Mater, Indiana University.) "Being Miss American Teen-Ager doesn't make me any different than I was before I was crowned," she says. "At school most of the kids don't even know. I seldom tell anybody. I would rather have people like me for myself."

Her favorite clothes are belled jeans, shrinks, blouses and blazers, and when she models her crown for photographers, she's apt to wear it like a beanie. But there are public appearances too: talk shows, luncheons, "openings," when she dresses — and looks — like a queen.

Freshly back from Hollywood where she guested on major network programs and acted as teenage "ambassador of good driving" for Dodge Motor cars, Carla will spend the rest of her reign being a week-day student and a week-end queen. Whenever college schedules permit, she accepts the modeling jobs and other honors which come to a national pageant winner.

Her ambition? To be a doctor of psychology. And she's determined that nothing will jeopardize her grades. Recently she gave up a tremendous modeling job in New York because it conflicted with final exams.

. . . All of which, I hope, Sheila, answers your question: You aren't silly to think you wouldn't have a chance. Consider the lovely things that can happen if you try. And even if you don't win top honors, it will be a great experience. — HELEN

Horsehair Braid On Organza Gowns

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE:

I am planning to make six bridesmaids' dresses for my daughter's wedding. The dresses will have an overskirt of organza. I've noticed that the readymade organza gowns have an invisible braid at the hem to make the skirt shape out. What kind of braid is this and how should it be applied?

Mrs. L.N.B.

DEAR MRS. L.N.B.:

This invisible braid you are referring to is called horsehair braid and is usually available in two widths, one-half-inch wide is the most common, then it is possible to find it about two-inches wide.

Carefully measure and mark the hemline of the overskirt and cut away the excess fabric, leaving about one-fourth inch. Your hair braid is stitched to the right side of the garment, flat edge of braid on your exact hemline. Be careful not to stretch edge, it would be very easy to do with a circular hem.

Fold your hem to the inside of garment and machine stitch through the braid and the fabric very close to the hemline edge — it won't show. In using this narrow braid, I don't feel it is necessary to catch the unstitched edge to the garment.

If you are using the wide braid, proceed with the first step and machine stitch to the garment. You will find a thread at the outer edge of the hair-braid, draw it up slightly until the unstitched edge of the braid fits the shape of the skirt, be sure not to pull this up too tight or the hem will buckle.

Because of the extra width of the braid, it will be necessary to invisibly tack it to the seams and possibly once or twice in between the seams, always remembering to keep your hand stitches nice and loose.

MRS. HOWARD D. Stiles, Wilbraham, Mass., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion.

"I (like everyone else) had a box full of buttons saved for reuse but most often it was too much trouble rummaging through to see what would be suitable. One day I sorted them all out and sewed all the matching buttons together. Now at a glance I can not only see the kind but how many I have."

(Great idea for those after-holiday days when you have some extra time.)

DEAR EUNICE:

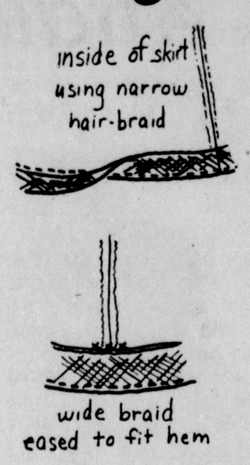
Can you give me some guidelines on what kind of patterns are suitable for diagonal fabrics, either a woven diagonal or a printed design. One pattern states that it is not suitable, but another with seemingly the same lines, says nothing. Frankly, I'm confused.

MRS. ANN R.

DEAR ANN:

I think the pattern companies have put fear in every women who sews when it comes to diagonals. They are so attractive and make up so beautifully if you choose the right pattern. Basically, it must be a simple one.

This kind of fabric will not work well with any part of a pattern cut on the bias. You must also refrain from using a pattern with raglan sleeves and a shawl collar. Outside of these three instances, I see no reason to avoid this fabric.



I have suggested before that if you are in doubt as to how a garment will look when you are using fabric that is unusual, there is a fun way to do it. Take a piece of typing paper, if your fabric has diagonal lines or a diagonal weave, line off your paper in the same way to resemble a miniature piece of fabric. Now, cut out the little shapes of the pieces of your pattern which are given on your work sheet. Place them on your paper and draw an outline on them. Cut them out and pin together just like you would if you were constructing your garment.

It's so imple to see just what effect you will have and to decide whether it is what you want or not. You can actually come up with some very creative ideas by using your fabric as part of the design.

DEAR EUNICE:

I know you probably don't get many letters from men, but I thought I might be able to pass on a new idea for men's loungewear.

I've always found it most uncomfortable and unattractive to see bare, hairy legs hanging out beneath a lounging robe. Happiness is a full length one.

A friend just made one for me out of a velvety dark green material and it's "super." It's about time for a new trend, the men will really go for it. My friend said she just took a regular pattern and added the extra length. In fact, she said the robe was really easy to make — it sure scored with me.

BOB E.

DEAR BOB:

Good for you. I think a long robe for a man is really a "super" idea as you say. The newest men's fashions are also featuring full-length caftans for men. Why should the gals have all the fun? Now with a more relaxed look in menswear, I think more and more gals will be making casual garments for their men.

Eunice Farmer gives easy-to-follow instructions on how to make a caftan in her "Super Caftan." For your copy send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

The Jacket Plays Big Spring Role

The jacket is the constant element in any separate formula this spring. The silhouettes range from cardigans to wear over everything to the short blouson baseball jacket, a skirt jacket or a smoking jacket.

The blouson looks good with short puffed or roll-up sleeves, or a full gathered back. The jacket with the drawstring waist may be one of spring's most popular themes.

Classes In Nutrition To Start Feb. 15

Stargazer

Caroline Herschell, born in England in 1750, was considered the first important female astronomer. That fact, recorded in the 1973 "Liberated Woman's Appointment Calendar," is based on her having discovered three nebulae and eight comets.

A Sculptor Of Gigantic Style, Size

By MARJORIE BRUCE-MILNE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

LONGON — The success of Henry Moore's recent exhibition in Italy has confirmed his stature as the outstanding sculptor of the day. His great monumental pieces laid out on the terraces at Forti di Belvedere in Florence seemed to become a part of the landscape.

There was nothing in their spirit to conflict with the work of the earlier and supreme Florentine masters: Donatello and Michelangelo. Like them he was seen to be concerned with humanity, even if in a more abstract manner. When Moore's name is mentioned one thinks instinctively of his monumental works. But a recent exhibition at London's Lefevre Gallery of 33 small bronzes and drawings from this 1939-1958 figurative period helped to make clear why he is regarded by many as the greatest living sculptor.

Though most of these bronzes are so small — the "Rocking Chair" measures only 5½ inches, the "Two Women Seated, and a Child" is only 6¾ inches high — they all have a remarkable presence. They combine tenderness with strength. Size is seen to be unimportant; what matters is their proportion and balance. Each is a work of art in its own right.

Recognition was slow in coming. Moore was 30 years old before he had his first one-man show in London. Though it only realized 90 pounds (then $450), it was counted an artistic success. Jacob Epstein, Augustus John, and Matthew Smith all bought drawings for which they paid one pound a piece, at that time worth $5.

Today a fine Moore drawing can command 1,000 pounds or over; a miniature sculpture can top the 15,000-pound mark (about $40,000), while, last year, a major sculpture — a reclining figure which Moore carved in 1945 in elmwood — realized a record figure of 104,000 pounds ($260,000)

It was during the period covered by the drawings and sculptires now at the Lefevre Gallery that the breakthrough began. In 1939 Moore was a comparatively poor and struggling sculptor, earning a meager income by teaching two days a week at an art school.

In the late '20's he worked mostly on stone carvings of reclining figures — one of these was the first to have a pierced hole as part of the composition. He carved half-lengths, mother and child groups, masks and heads which showed a Mexcian influence.

His first exhibition at the Leicester Galleries in 1931 brought violent opposition. There was a call for his resignation as instructor at the Royal College of Art. Although the principal of the school stood squarely behind him, as soon as his existing contract lapsed Moore chose to accept an offer, at a lower salary, to teach at the Chelsea School of Art. Here he continued until 1939, the opening year of the second world war.

Moore himself attributes the awakening appreciation of his work to his now-famous "Shelter Drawings" made during the 1940-41 blitz on London. People found something profoundly moving about these figures, some sitting in underground air-raid shelters, waiting wearily for the attack to stop others lying, row upon row, asleep, apparently defenseless.

The artist always waited to be well out of sight before he committed the vivid impression to paper. He was unwilling to infringe the dignity of anyone who might still be awake.

The draped figures seen in the shelters had an abiding influence on Moore's work, for they reappear constantly in his sculptures during the next few years.

In 1943 he had his first one-man show abroad, of drawings at the Buchholz Gallery, New York. He began to make sketch models for family groups of the type seen in the small bronzes, as well as abstract and naturalistic reclining figures — the sculpture which reached the record price last year belongs to that period.

In 1946 Moore visited the United States and in New York had the first of his 100 retrospective exhibitions abroad. At the recent show he is said to be working on something new. It will be interesting to see what emerges.

Locations For Mental Care Units

Four locations have been tentatively selected as home bases for the teams to bring on-the-spot services to Marin's scattered population under reorganization of county mental health services.

The staffs will work from San Rafael, Novato, Point Reyes Station and Tamalpais Junction, said Dr. Robert Taylor, mental health program chief, in a report on the changes to this week's meeting of the County Mental Health Advisory Board.

The Central Marin team will operate out of the child health unit on H Street, San Rafael; the west Marin team from Point Reyes Station; the North Marin team either from the Hunan Needs Center in Novato or close by; and the Southern Marin team from a rented facility at Tamalpais Junction.

Dr. Taylor told the Independent-Journal a typical team, such as Southern Marin's, will include a unit administrative chief, three full-time social workers, two full-time psychologists, two half-time psychiatrists and one full-time mental health worker.

The changes, aimed at decentralizing the $2.9 million department of some 180 employees, were approved by the board of supervisors on Dec. 12.

The Marin County Mental Health Advisory board also:

ELECTED — Reelected Jack D. Williams chairman, and elected Dr. Robert Marvin as vice chairman.

BYLAWS — Approved draft bylaws which limit members' terms of service to no more than two three-year appointments, or part of a three-year term; the board has never had bylaws, and the draft must be approved by the county counsel and by the board of supervisors.

PLANNING — Appointed an ad hoc committee to draft a planning process for the target committees of citizens who give advice and ideas to the program chief.

MEMBERS — Seated two new members, Dr. Catherine Cline Pike, and Supervisor Gary T. Giacomini.

ADVOCATE — Appointed Dr. Pike as "child advocate" to the state Citizens Advisory Council; the council advises the state department of mental hygiene.

TRANSITIONAL — Heard from Dr. Taylor that the county will apply for $75,000 state funds in "state hospital days" saved by not using the services to help pay for the transitional program; the project, also funded with $123,000 in state social rehabilitation service funds, will operate on a contract basis to provide training and residential care to mental patients once the acute phase of their illness is over.

Herring Fishing Halted By State In Tomales Bay

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — State Fish and Game Director Ray Arnett yesterday said he has halted commercial herring fishing in Tomales Bay under emergency legislation signed earlier this week by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Arnett said he ordered a halt to the fishing Thursday when it was learned that the total catch for this year had exceeded 500 tons. A total of 600 tons had been caught by the time the stop order had reached boats in the bay, he said.

Arnett said herring resources would be endangered if 750 tons were taken from the bay. Under legislation signed by the governor Tuesday, the director was authorized to halt herring fishing in both Tomales and San Francisco Bay.

The measure, which became effective immediately, expires March 25.

Character Actor Naish Dies At 76

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — J. Carroll Naish, who established himself as one of Hollywood's greatest ethnic character actors in a career spanning a half century, died Wednesday in La Jolla, his family disclosed Friday. He was 76.

Naish, bedridden two years with emphysema, died after a week in Scripps Memorial Hospital. He was to be buried today in private services.

The mustachioed, Irish-born actor, who mastered nearly 20 dialects during his film career, played Hindus, Mexicans, Japanese, Chinese, Arabs, Jews, Italians, Poles, English, American Indians and South Americans.

Naish played a succession of strutting villains and heavys. But it wasn't until near the end of his career that he played the title role in the radio and TV comedy, "Life With Luigi," and his talents in ethnic roles were recognized by the public.

One of the few nationalities he never played was his own. "When the part of an Irishman comes along, nobody ever thinks of me," Naish once reflected.

Critically acclaimed by fellow actors for his rare, dialectic and acting talents, Naish's name was usually midway down in the movie screen credits and was little known by the public.

Moyers Released From Hospital

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bill Moyers, press secretary to the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, was released from Georgetown University Hospital Friday evening.

Moyers, 38, was admitted Wednesday complaining of chest pains. But doctors diagonosed them as "Tietze's Syndrome," a painful inflammation of the ribs and chest cartilage.

Harmonica Player To Be Featured

The fourth in a series of live broadcasts over KTIM-FM from the Lion's Share in San Anselmo at 8 p.m. tomorrow will feature Chicago blues harmonica player Charles Musselwhite and his band.

This will be Musselwhite's first appearance since his recent recovery from an automobile accident.

Also appearing on the program will be Dave Alexander and his blues group.

Another Lane Of Bridge Due To Open Monday

A fourth southbound lane will be available for the first time Monday morning to commuters crossing the Richardson Bay bridge — if weather permits completion of work today and tomorrow.

Robert Halligan, spokesman for the state Division of Highways, said southbound lanes on the bridge were to be closed one at a time throughout today. Lanes will be restriped and cleanup work completed on the bridge widening. Wet weather however, would delay the work, he said.

The newly added fourth lane on the northbound side also should be ready for use within a week, Halligan said.

A Big Year Ahead For Traveling

"Already," says Marin's travel advisers, "we have had some very heavy 1973 bookings. . . Every indication is that this is going to be a whopper of a year for travel."

By DON KEOWN

With one busy, active travel year just behind them, Marin County's travel advisers are looking ahead to an even bigger 1973.

While it is still very, very early,travel agents agree that Marinites are already beginning to flock into their offices and to ring their telephones, to lay plans for extensive 1973 vacations.

"While it is difficult to generalize, January is usually a slow month for us," says one. "But that hasn't been true this year. We have had some very heavy 1973 bookings — for the spring, the summer, even looking ahead to autumn. Every indication is that this is going to be a whopper of a year for travel."

And some 1973 travel trends are already beginning to take shape.

FOR INSTANCE, say the agents, the cruise vacation, which has zoomed in popularity the last few years, is going to make further gains in 1973.

"There are more people interested in cruises than ever before," says one adviser. The Caribbean is a big gainer, with many Marinites taking advantage of the combination air-sea packages that permit them to fly one way, or to fly both ways to the eastern coast, and from there enjoy their cruises among the colorful Caribbean islands.

The several fine new cruise ships now based at or touching on West Coast ports has generated intense interest in sea travel, the agents say. So hundreds of Marinites will be transported by those comfortable, often luxurious, ships — to Mexico's Riviera, north to British Columbia and Alaska, to Hawaii, to the Caribbean, even around the world.

ONE DEFINITE trend spotted by Marin travel agents is a keener interest in the South Pacific.

"The South Pacific is going to be very, very big this year," says one."There has been a lot of advertising, and it is paying off in 1973."

The heavy volume of tourist traffic to Europe is certain to continue. England will remain a prime destination, although there is a tendency now to spend less time in crowded London and to enjoy the tranquil British countryside — in Cornwall, along the seaside, in the Cotswolds, the Scottish Highlands, etc.

The Continent will receive its fair share of the visitors from Marin, with some travel agents reporting a noticeable increase in interest in Greece and Yugoslavia.

THE CASTLE hotels of Europe are drawing special attention from Marinites as a staying place.

Hawaii, of course, still holds forth as a favorite and lovely destination of vacation-planning Marinites.

The certainty in the travel picture for Marin is that there will be an unprecedented number of its residents leaving their home county and abodes temporarily to taste new experiences and new sights, overseas, or at points on their own continent. The huge number of recreational vehicles now owned by Marinites in itself means that many, many of these will be traveling the highways of the USA, bound for the national parks and monuments, the lakes, the mountains, the seashores.

An uncertain factor in the overseas portion of the travel picture is the matter of fares.

TRAVEL ADVISERS are still awaiting a court decision on challenges to the new Travel Group Charters schedules to Europe. If these fares survive the court tests, then the scheduled airlines will find themselves offering bargains that will be entirely competitive with the affinity group charters that have been the bread and butter of the non-scheduled lines in past years. And travel agents will be handling the new business.

Involved are fares like from $280 to $350 (depending upon the season) between San Francisco and London.

But one requirement would be that the initial payment by the traveler be made four months in advance of departure, so that, according to one agent, "if the question is not resolved in the next 30 days, time will be a critical factor as far as the 1973 travel season is concerned."

But even if the TGC fares are delayed or rejected, the traveler will very likely have an alternative in the so-called APEX (Advance Purchase Excursion) fares for which a number of airlines have filed for government approval.

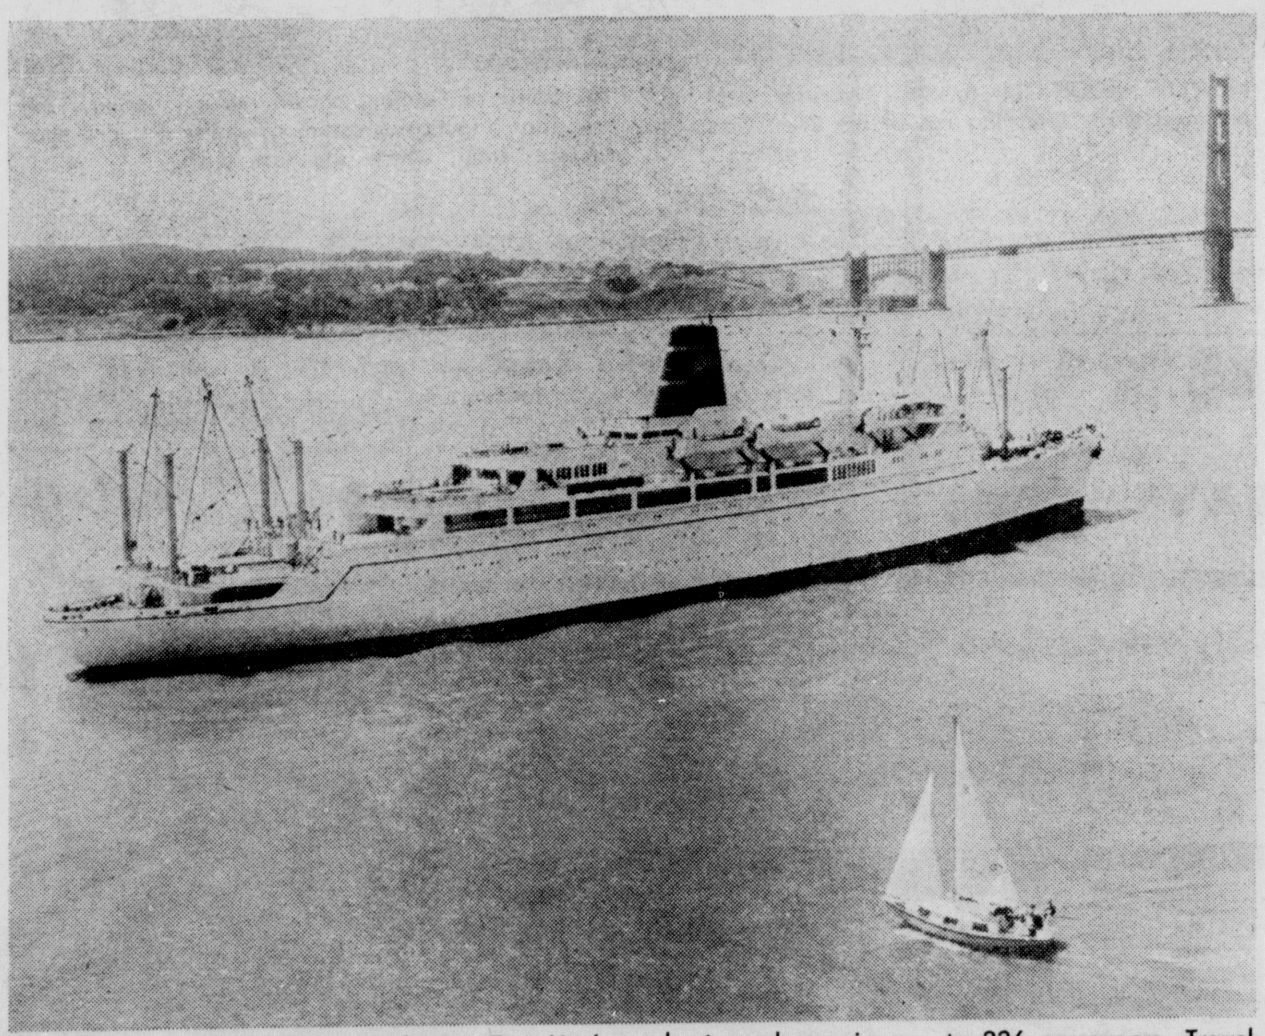
FOR EXAMPLE, the British Overseas Corp. proposes a $308 fare for London for the summer month of August, and other airlines have worked out their own low APEX figures.

These are non-charter fares with no group requirement. But there are some special stipulations including full payment and ticketing three months in advance of travel.

Marin travel agents, buoyed by the prospect of the APEX and TGC fares that may spell the end to the old non-scheduled group affinity charter business from which they were largely excluded, also have an unusual and attractive assortment of special vacation packages with which to entice Marinites this year. But all indications are that Marinites require little enticement. They are ready and eager to go —to Ireland's thatched cottages, to England's castles, to Italy's museums, to Scandinavia's forests, to Australia's beaches, to Rio, to Anchorage, to Africa's big game plains, to teeming Tokyo, to sunny Greece, to Fiji, to Israel, to wherever their wanderlust, their desire to see and to learn, their wish for a change of pace and something different might take them.

THE COVER

EARLY each year the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine devotes an expanded issue to travel subjects, aimed at helping Marinites plan their upcoming vacations. This is that issue for 1973. In the pages that follow you will find ideas for vacation destinations, hints to make your traveling more pleasant, stories to whet your appetite for touring, and a complete, four-page directory of travel services and products prepared by I-J business writer Wat Takeshita. Advertisements, too, point out the importance of early planning for your trip. The cover art is by Ron Davis.



THE SS MARIPOSA, of the Pacific Far East Line's ocean-going, passenger-carrying fleet, heads out of the Golden Gate for South Pacific waters. The popular 20,000-ton liner and her twin sister, the SS Monterey, are famous West Coast ships named after historic California counties, cruising at 20 knots and carrying up to 336 passengers. Travel agents in Marin predict that the Mariposa and the Monterey, as well as other cruise ships operating out of our West Coast ports, will be busier than ever in 1973, as the tremendous surge of interest in cruise vacations continues unabated.

New Cruise Ships — Pleasure Palaces

Here they are — the new Pacific cruise stars.

Twenty-million-dollar nautical palaces, their freight is well-heeled passengers and the trappings to pamper them.

This new generation of pleasure liners is to its predecessors as a Ferrari to a DeSoto.

Watch the lofty snow-white ship cast off from its California moorings, listen to its carefree sailing song. Primed with champagne, voyagers line the rails and spin webs of serpentine, just like Cole Porter on Ile de France during the great trans-Atlantic crossings.

There comparisons end.

THIS SHIP happens to be Norwegian, the water is blue Pacific, and these sailings mark the western debut of the new Pacific cruiseliners, seagoing resorts to match the top hotels of Europe.

This particular debutante is Royal Viking Star, a nine-deck pousse-cafe of cabarets, artworks and cocktail bars. She was launched in Finland, took her inaugural runs to the North Cape last summer, her first dip in the Pacific last November. She and her two sisters, scheduled for West Coast appearances late in 1973, will cruise the world from Leningrad to Sydney.

Royal Viking Star has been joined this winter by two galactic rivals, Island Princess of Princess Cruises; and Spirit of London from P & O, the British cruise line which began it all back in 1837. Our star and her sisters-to-come (surnamed "Sea" and "Sky") weigh in at 21,500 tons, carry about 500 passengers, and set smashing standards.

Total investment in the three Royal Vikings and their two cruising cousins exceeds 100 million dollars.

A FEW EXAMPLES serve to highlight the generation gap between this built-for-cruising quintet and the phasing-out "transportation-type" ships:

Item: All but 26 of the "Royal Viking Star's" 289 stateroom have ocean views.

Item: On her ninth (topmost) deck perches the Stella Polaris lounge, 180 degrees of unobstructed vista 70 feet above waterline. On moonlit nights, in this lavender-and-silver aerie, you get a sensation of gliding silently in some Apollo spaceship.

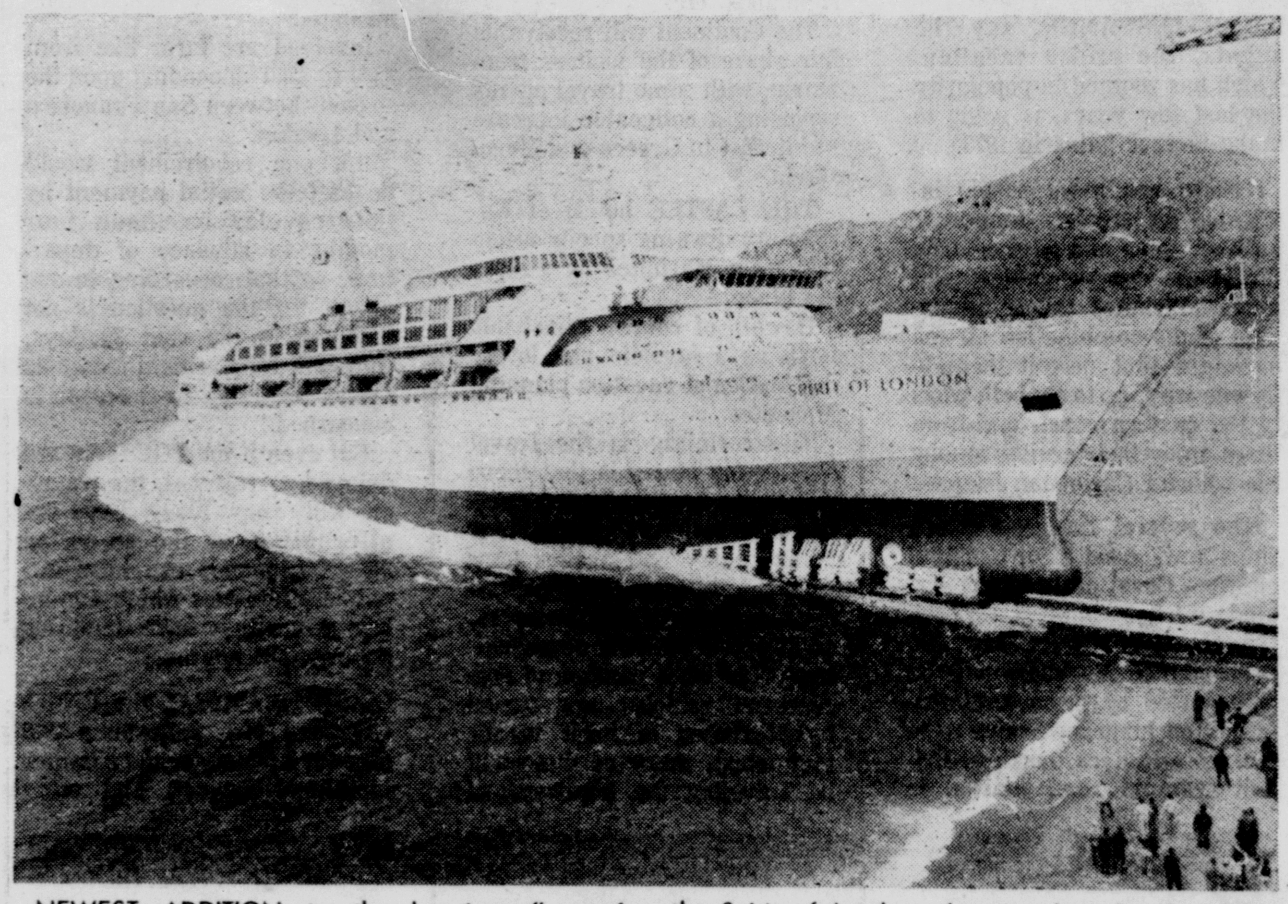
Item: Hundreds of dazzling modern paintings, prints, ceramics and sculptures adorn this Viking's public rooms and private cabins. Down part of the Promenade Deck runs an art gallery, its changing exhibits (all for sale) supervised by a museum chief.

Item: The side-to-side dining salon, six decks above water level, affords picture-window views utterly lacking on more conventional ships. All 500 passengers can be served at once.

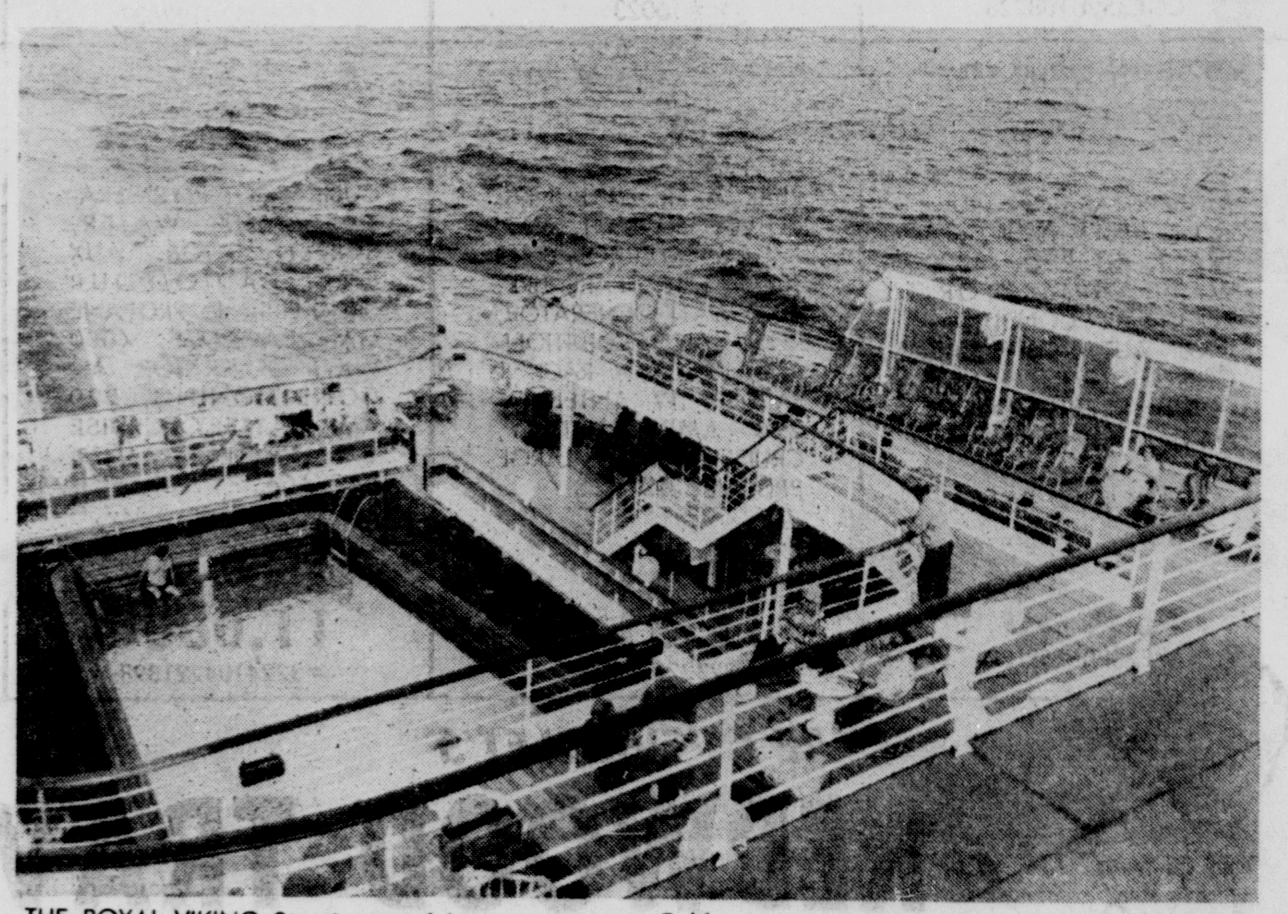
Items: Birch-paneled saunas. Spacious sheltered pool. A rainbow-lit waterfall to accent outdoor dancing. Heavy crystal ashtrays and pastel cobweb-light bed-throws. Elevators to everywhere. A 156-seat, wide-screen theater. Stateroom lockboxes for valuables. Rich natural-wood or brushed-aluminum finishes, muted colors, accented sometimes by sea-blues or reds.

VIKING GUESTS pay well — a minimum of $71 per day, with the average around $100. But this includes all the amenities mentioned, plus all the escargots, ptarmigan, caviar and reindeer ragout you can eat. Almost nobody ever mentions money.

Altogether there's a new dimension to that mightiest of oceans, the Pacific, this year. Royal Viking Star, Spirit of London and Island Princess are bringing it to the cruising public.



NEWEST ADDITION to the luxurious fleet of pleasure ships operating out of the West Coast is the Spirit of London, shown making her first big splash at a launching ceremony in the shipyard near Genoa, Italy, where she was built.



THE ROYAL VIKING Star is one of five new cruise ships flying the flags of Trans-Pacific Passenger Conference Lines that will be sailing out of California ports to all corners of the world by the end of this year. The Royal Viking Line's ship offers 289 staterooms, all but 26 of which have ocean views.

France's Other Wine Region

Mention the French wine country and invariably one thinks first of Burgundy, then the region around Bordeaux, and perhaps, almost as an afterthought, the Valley of the Rhone.

All produce big, robust wines. Brilliant reds for the most part. From grapes grown on hillsides of what we have come to recognize as France's traditional wine country.

BUT THERE is another, entirely different wine country in France. Here the wines are white, crisp, fruity — almost sparkling on occasion. These wines are produced from grapes grown on the slopes of the Vosges foothills, which look across the Rhine.

The region is, of course, Alsace; it ranks after Bordeaux and Burgundy in terms of wine production.

Scenically the province turns out to be as pretty as any place one could hope to reach, offering the tourist a whole string of pleasant surprises. For one thing, there is the wine raod which wends its way for a hundred or so miles through vineyard country along the edge of the Vosges, passing into the out of charming villages set with 15th and 16th Century half-timbered houses.

RIQUEWIHR, for example, is considered second only to Saint-Emilion among the lovely wine towns of France, with Kayersberg not far behind. Stop at picturesque old inns. Taste flowery wines served in green-stemmed glasses. Or go into cellars to tap the product at the source. New wine is put into old barrles in Alsace. From fall to spring it rests in great casks stored underground, then is transferred into bottles.

Try a cool Riesling on a sunny day to find out how good these wines can be. Nor is Alsace lacking in gastronomic specialties, this being the home of renowned Pate de foie gras, choucroute a l'Alsacienne (sauerkraut garnished with sliced ham, boiled potatoes and various kinds of sausages), chicken dishes, river fish prepared in ingenious ways.

For anyone out to plot a different kind of wine tour, particularly during the fall season of the grape harvest, Alsace can make for a happy choice. Consider Alsace a discovery at any time of the year, with or without wine. Ruins of ancient castles crown green hilltops. One comes upon walls of fortified towns. Along with vineyards, forests fill out the hillsides. The view is across fertile plains where tobacco grows. Perhaps the most romantic part of all is the "Ried," a watery land of meadows laced with canals, studded with willows and poplars alongside the Rhine.

Sydney Is Ideal Gateway City, Except For Airport Red Tape

Harbor, Weather, Facilities All Offer A Warm Welcome To Visitor

By RALPH HUBLEY

SYDNEY, Australia — If I were to design the ideal gateway city, it would look something like Sydney.

It would have a magnificent harbor, mild weather, modern accommodations, excellent service, good transportation, cool parks, nearby beaches and recreation areas, an enthusiastic citizenry, a colorful historical background, restored areas and a promise of adventure just beyond the city limits.

However, from the traveler's standpoint, I think I could improve on Sydney's two-year-old airport and Australia's visa regulations.

APPROACHING THE city by airliner you will easily spot the large white "petals" of the long budding Opera House and the Sydney Harbor Bridge, unmistakable landmarks of Australia's oldest and largest city (population 2,780,310). Some million and a quarter other overseas passengers had a similar view when they landed here last year, for even at night the landmarks are brightly lighted for all to see.

From the sea, the city is hidden by high cliffs and wooded beaches until your ship swings through Port Jackson. Then the city stretches out across the entire western horizon.

This gateway to an ancient land of the kangaroo, koala and platypus bristles with building and new ideas — an appropriate entrance for the many thousands immigrating to this new land of opportunity. There is so much building going on that the photographer will find it difficult to get a skyline picture without a skeleton arm of a temporary crane poking into view.

WHEN YOU land at Kingsford Smith Airport, Sydney's international air terminal on Botany Bay six and a half miles south of the city, you will find the domestic terminal on the opposite side of the field. If you are one of the more than 29,000 transit passengers who go through here in a year, you will be transported to domestic flight connections on Trans Australia Airlines or Ansett.

However, if you are one of the 550,000 a year who wish to go into the city, it is another matter.

You will seldom find a taxi waiting, for they are usually at the domestic terminal. The hotels do not as yet furnish courtesy cars, and there are no public buses from the international terminal, But Qantas will take you to the airline headquarters in downtown Sydney.

IF YOU CAN'T get on the Qantas minibus you should phone for a taxi right away as it may take 20 minutes to arrive.

You may even become a bit overheated while waiting in summer, as there was no air conditioning buit into this new steel and glass enclosure. If it's raining, don't be alarmed if a few drops of water seep through the roof. Local residents will agree with your criticism of their airport and often point to the new airport at their rival city of Melbourne as what could have been done. Some say that Melbourne has gained considerably as a gateway because of the convenience of its new Tullamarine airport.

The open frankness in criticism of government and self is quite refreshing for the visitor. On Sundays it's fun to go to the Domain, a park between downtown Sydney and the Wooloomooloo district, to watch the sport of heckling soapbox orators.

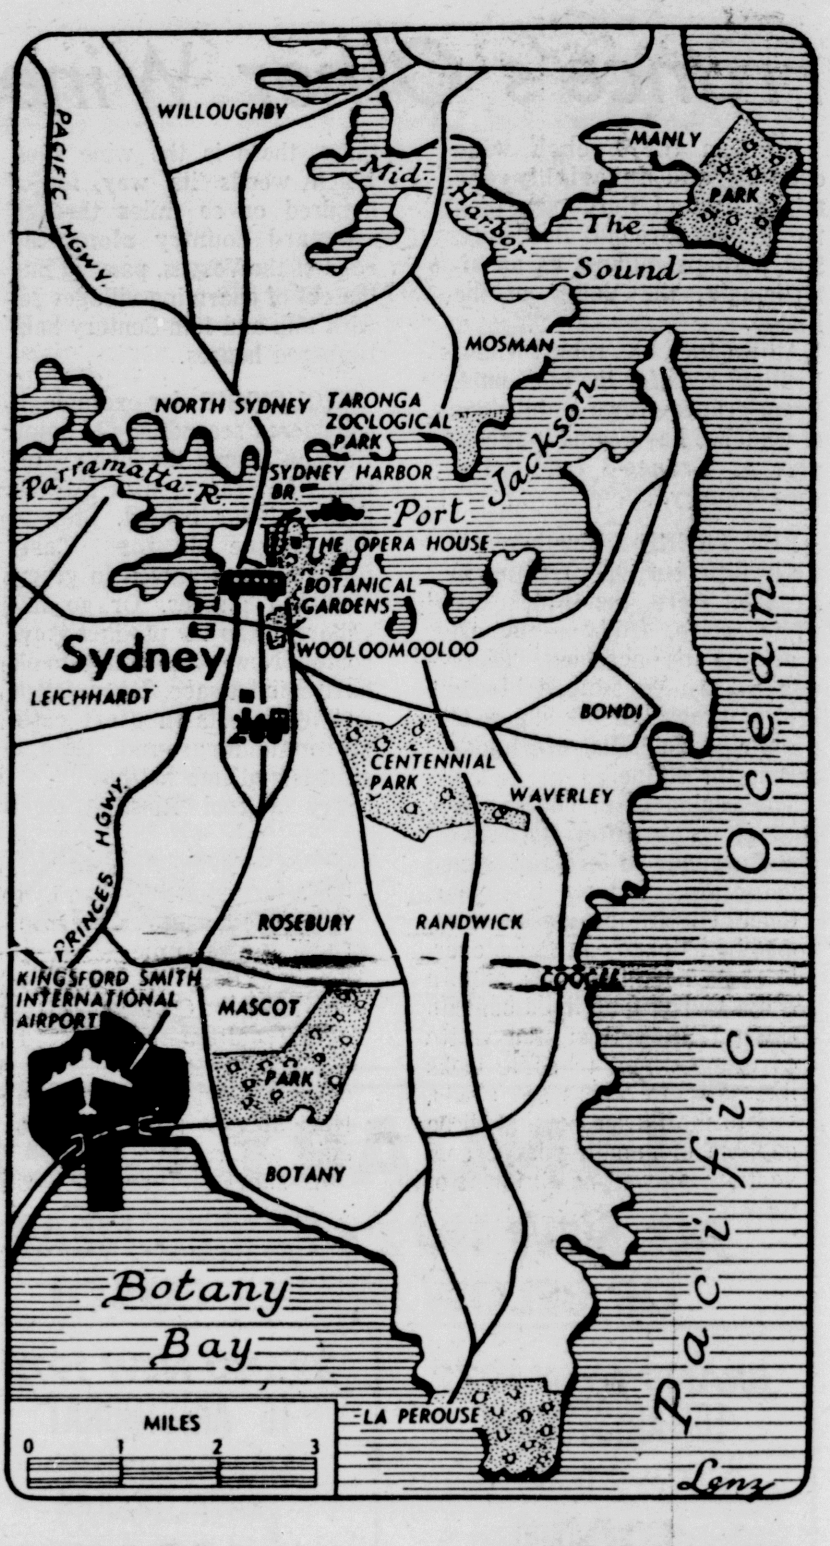
HOWEVER MUCH help Australians seem ready to offer the visitor, some of the place names in Sydney can be confusing. For instance:

Kingsford Smith Airport is also called Mascot Field.

The tallest building in Sydney is called Australian Square Tower — but it is round. You will want to be sure to see the view of the city from the observation platform at the top or from the Summit restaurant a floor below.

There are no farms near Farm Cove. But the Royal Botanical Gardens surrounding it are beautifully maintained.

Kings Cross is not as religious as the name might indicate, nor as sinful as its reputation.



SURF CARNIVALS are a unique summer attraction of Australia's 12,000-mile coastline and particularly of Sydney with its 30 first class surfing beaches all within the city limits. Unpaid, volunteer surf lifesavers, famed for their rescue of swimmers and boaters in trouble, race daringly in surf boats over pounding breakers. The programs also include swimming races, water rescue demonstrations and marching contests.

Port Jackson is also called Sydney Harbor.

Darling Harbor is nowhere near Darling Point.

The subway is called the railway.

ALTHOUGH YOU will find some helpful tourist information in folders in your hotel room, you should make sure to acquire the official Sydney tourist map. It is easy to read and full of suggestions about what to do and where to go. It is issued free at the New South Wales Government Tourist Bureau, 8 Martin Place (phone 2-0136).

On the lower ground floor of the same building you can obtain the "Directory to Government Bus Service to Sydney and Suburbs" from the Department of Government Transport. With these two guides, Sydney is yours. If you get stuck, hail a taxi. They always seem handy.

A subway circles under the city and connects with suburban trains, but I could see no advantage to the tourist as it is in New York, Paris or London. Stick to the buses where you can see more. Many are double-deckers.

AND WHERE will these buses take you? To the beach if you like. Sydney boasts of more "golden beaches" along the coast than any Pacific island. They are clean and protected.

Or you may like to visit the restored area known as Paddington. It is an inner-city suburb overlooking Port Jackson to the north and Botany Bay to the south. It is topped by Victoria Barracks. Millions have been spent by individuals renovating Victorian terraced houses in Paddington, now a fashionable place to live. You can see ironwork grilling and fences, art galleries, boutiques, restaurants along its winding lanes and its steep streets.

Most of the shops are closed on Mondays. Tuesday is probably the best day for a visit because you can see the colorful changing of the guard and tour Victoria Barracks.

KINGS CROSS, another well-known section called the Greenwich Village of Sydney, can be skipped over by the tourist with no loss. No longer as Bohemian and arty as it once was, it is trying to live up to its shady reputation and has become quite honky-tonk.

Not to be missed, however, are the Vaucluse House, the Mitchel Library, the Art Gallery of New South Wales, the Australian Museum and the Rocks area.

The Rocks marks the site of the first white settlement by Captain Phillip in 1788 and contains many of the Georgian and Victorian buildings exactly as they were in the boisterous days of Sydney.

An exciting new $500,000 redevelopment of East Rocks area is designed to blend the old with the new. Tower buildings are to scale down to the old structures being preserved. There will be a separation of pedestrian and vehicular traffic on different levels.

MY GOURMET friends tell me that this international city

The Gateway City To Australia — Modern Sydney

has only recently developed outstanding dining places. Chinese, Italian, and French restaurants are recommended.

In typically Australian restaurants stay with the seafood dishes. Rock oysters prawns (a type of shrimp), Sydney lobsters, Tasmanian scallops, red snapper, whiting, and John Dorry are all certain to please the discriminating diner. Also try the kangaroo tail soup.

For a look at the progress being made on Sydney's controversial Opera House, scheduled to be opened later this year, there is an observation platform on Bennelong Point overlooking the construction project. The four halls beneath the uniquely designed white cover — which to some looks like sails, to others sea shells, and to me flower petals will be capable of handling large conventions as well as all forms of musical and dramatic productions. It is easily reached by a short walk from Circular Quay at Sydney Cove.

BESIDES THE Opera House, probably the most photographed Sydney landmark is the Harbor Bridge, a single, 650-foot span that carries an eight-lane highway, two railway tracks, a foot-way and a bicycle way. The Pylon lookout on the city side of the bridge can be climbed for a good view of the harbor.

While at Sydney Cove you may like to take advantage of another form of transportation — the ferryboat. Sydney Harbor's ferries include two hydrofoils. The longest scenic trip — running seven miles, nearly the length of Port Jackson — would be to Manly Cove where there are excellent beaches. The ocean going ferry South Steyne departs Sundays at 1:30 p.m., November to May, from No. 3 Jetty at Circular Quay.

A shorter ferryboat ride would be to Taronga Zoological Park. When you get off the boat take a bus to the top entrance and walk back down through the zoo beautifully laid out on a wooded hillside with grand views of Sydney. If you are interested in seeing the platypus, it keeps short visiting hours — 11 a.m. to noon and 2 to 4 p.m.

Would that the entry requirements were as favorable as the weather. Even with your health card, two passport-size photos, proof of departure date in hand and a personal appearance at the consulate office, it takes 24 hours for the bureaucracy to process the papers. This requires returning your passport by mail or an individual pickup the next day.

A million-dollar taxi for peanuts.

Let's kill off the notion once and for all that a helicopter ride has to be expensive.
It doesn't.
In many cases, you can get a ride from Marin to San Francisco's airport for as little as $8.37.

In a few cases, it'll cost you exactly $7.29.
It all depends where you're going from San Francisco and with whom you're flying, so it's smart to check with your travel agency—or with us—before you make any plans.

SFO checks your luggage through to your destination, then zips you to the airport from Marin in just minutes.

No traffic jams. No parking problems.

On Seeing Mexico By Roller-Coaster

By RUTH ELLIOT

You don't have to go to Cuzco, Peru, for top railroad thrills, or to the Jungfrau in Switzerland. You can find just as much excitement on the "Chihuahua Choo-Choo" in northern Mexico.

That's not its real name; it's the Ferrocarril de Chihuahua al Pacifico (meaning "Railroad from Chihuahua to the Pacific"). It's a thrill-a-minute ride from its start in north-central Mexico to Los Mochis near the Pacific.

It's a railroad through the sky, a roller coaster of a train that climbs to 8,000 feet at Creel in the Sierra Madre Occidental and then winds dizzyingly down through the Barranca del Cobre (Copper Canyon) to sea level.

It's a 13-hour trip of 585 breathtaking miles through some of the most rugged and unexplored country in the Western Hemisphere, inhabited mostly by the primitive Tarahumara Indians pursuing a Stone Age existence in their hidden caves.

THE LITTLE TRAIN crosses the Continental Divide three times in a single day, scoots through two time zones, traverses four different climatic zones.

It dives into 73 tunnels totaling 21 miles in all, one of which, Descanso, is more than a mile long; it crosses 39 bridges, some of them strung on precarious-looking trestles hundreds of feet above the roaring waters. Highest is Chinipas Bridge, 335 feet above the Septentrion River; longest is over the Rio Fuerte.

A remarkable feat of engineering! Moreover, a fantastic travel bargain: Tickets are less than $12 for a trip everyone in the family will enjoy.

This incredible little railway was completed less than 12 years ago, 90 years after it was conceived in 1871 as a freighting shortcut from Presidio, Tex., to the Mexican port of Topolobampo on the Gulf of California.

PASSENGERS MAY go only as far as Los Mochis, however. Beyond it the old rails on the freight line are too worn for passenger trains to run the last 16 miles to Topolobampo.

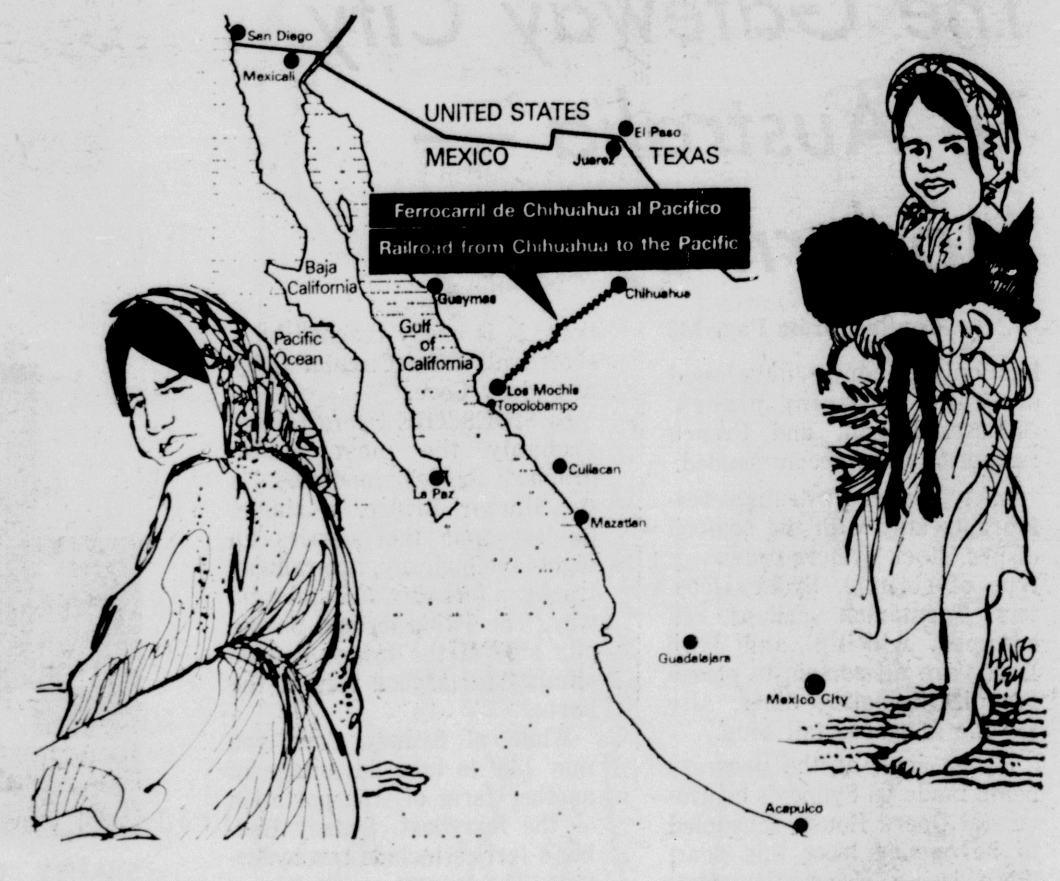
There's no clickety-clack on the C and P railroad; its steel tracks were built like the so-called "elastic rails" invented by the French, cushioned with rubber and electrically welded with no bolts and joints.

For most passengers, the climax of the trip is El Divisadero, where the train stops for 20 minutes and everyone rushes to the edge of the barranca to view the dramatic Urique Canyon, often mistaken for Copper Canyon. Actually, few travelers have ever seen the inaccessible Copper Canyon.

At Divisadero, Indians and visitors watch each other with equal fascination. Until the advent of the railroad, the Tarahumaras were isolated. Even now, little is known of these shy people whose ancestors lived in these same barrancas as long as 2,000 years ago.

THEIR NAME means "foot runner." It's been said that they can run as far as 100 miles a day. A race is a celebration: The runners kick a small ball of juniper wood the entire distance for as long as 72 hours, while others run alongside to light the course with torches.

The Tarahumaras would rather be nomads than live together in villages. There are an estimated 50,000 of them roaming the mountaintops in summer and seeking the warmth of barranca caves in the winter. They're a handsome race with straight noses, coppery skin and gleaming black hair. They are said to live mostly on parched corn, very finely ground and flavored with goat's milk.



Since the most exciting part of the railroad trip is unquestionably between Los Mochis and Creel, many travelers go that far, stay over and return to Los Mochis the following day; others stay over and continue on to Chihuahua. Or vice versa!

There are two different trains on the Chihuahua line these days.

MOST TOURISTS prefer the two-car, Italian-made Fiat, a sleek diesel-powered, air-conditioned train with broad windows for picture-taking. There is an efficient refreshment corner from which drinks and snacks are served on trays at your seat. Departures are at 8 a.m. daily from Chihuahua, except Sunday and Wednesday; from Los Mochis daily, except Monday and Thursday.

The other train is a Pullman, passenger and freight originating at Ojinaga. This longer combination train leaves the Chihuahua station at 10:15 p.m. on Tuesdays and Fridays and arrives in Los Mochis the next day at 3:20 p.m. Its counterpart leaves Los Mochis for Chihuahua on the same days at 8 a.m. after the Fiat has pulled out.

There's a gourmet dining car, lounge, and also a domeliner designated as "community property." Passengers excitedly roam the length of the train all day and when it stops, jump off to try new camera angles.

IT DOES STOP, often, to wait for workmen ahead or to honk a pig or goat off the tracks.

You never see trainmen in Mexico anxiously consulting their watches, though; their schedule is "mas o menos" (more or less). This relaxed attitude is part of the charm of the trip, in fact all of Mexico.

More information may be obtained by writing the Mexican National Tourist Council at 9445 Wilshire, Beverly Hills, Calif. Brochures aplenty will be sent to you. If you want detailed railroad schedules, write F. J. Saenz, traffic superintendent, Chihuahua al Pacifico, Box 46, Chihuahua, Mexico.

Berlin Is Well Worth A Visit By A Traveler

It's An Exciting City — And A Monetary Bargain

By ALBERT HUGHES

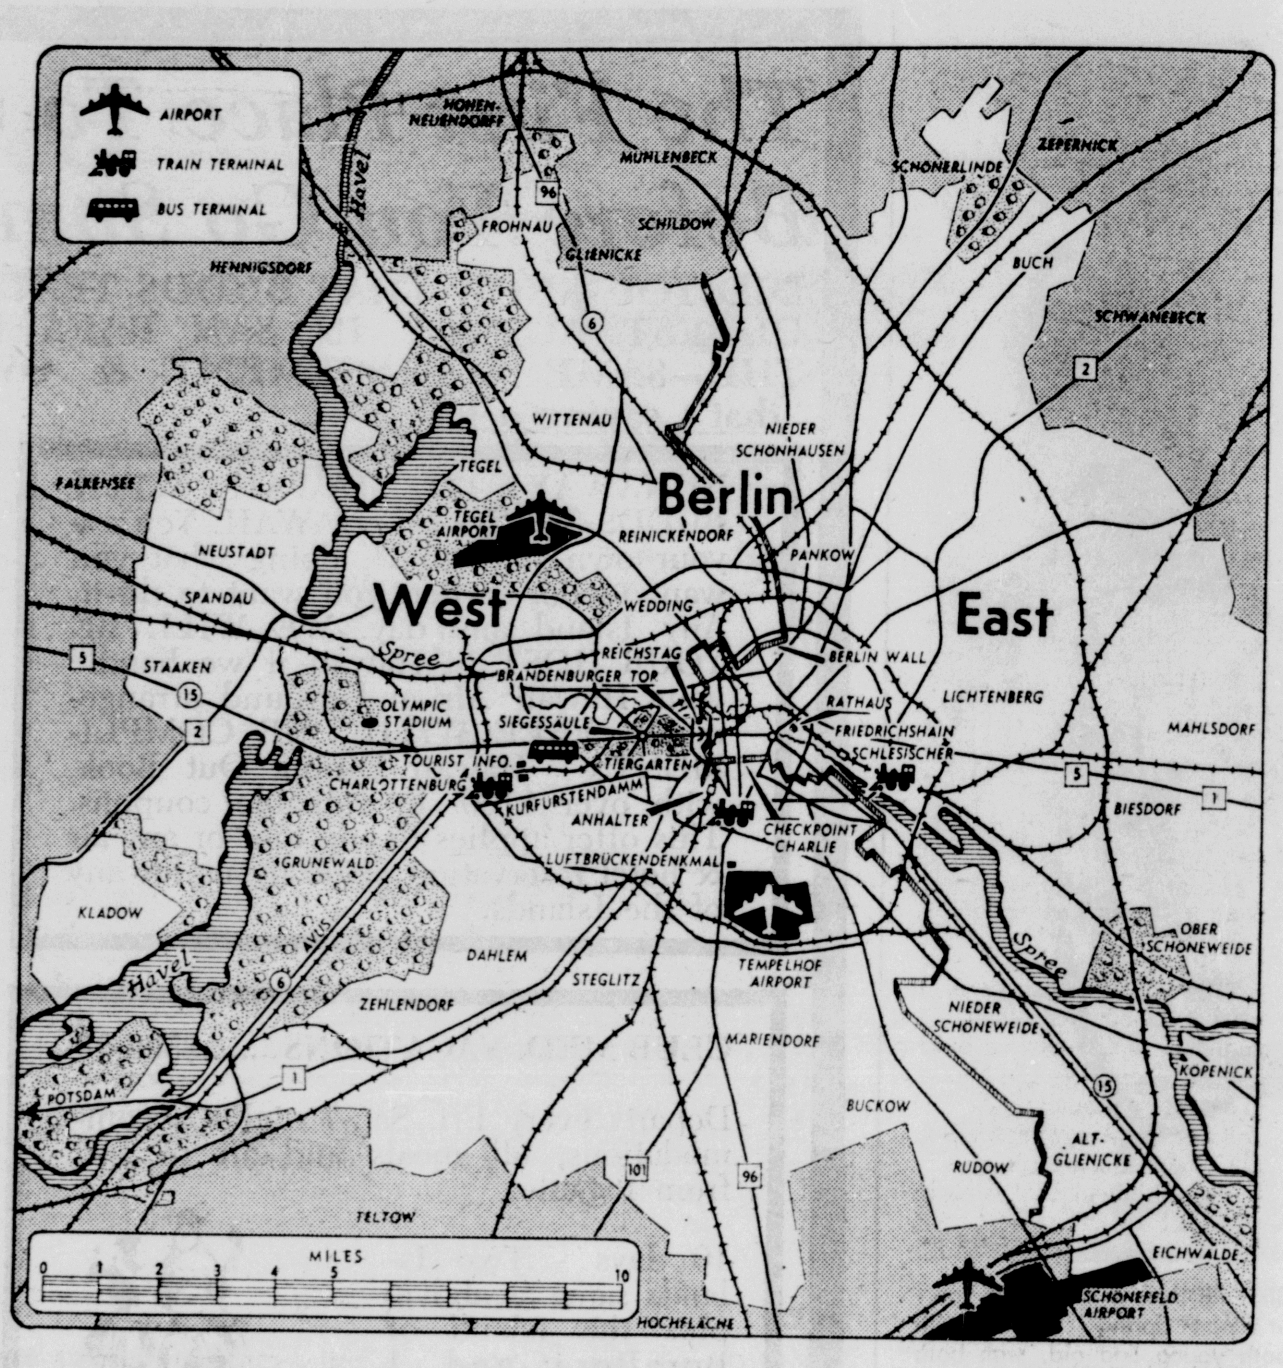
BERLIN, West Germany — For a quarter of a century now, the aerial route into the former German capital has been the most convenient way, and perhaps the only one for some, to cross the 110-mile East German zone between West Germany and the allied sectors of Berlin.

American airliners still come down past residential buildings on their approach to Tempelhof Airdrome.

Berlin has long rated with Boston as having an airport closest to the city. In Boston, the airfield's nearness to the city has led to controversy. It is doubtful that West Berlin residents living near the field would complain about aircraft noise.

TOO MANY OF them remember poignantly the days of the 1948 airlift when the city literally lived, and eventually survived, on supplies brought in by air across the Soviet blockade. Everything — food, clothing, emergency supplies, even coal for heat — was flown in by an air movement that amounted to thousands of flights daily.

Leaving the airport by taxi the visitor sees the airlift monument in the Tempelhof Plaza that commemorates the aerial bridge — and the airmen lost to keep it operating.



Other allied carriers, notably the British, come into Tegel Airdrome north of the city. Schoenefeld, the East German airport southeast of the city, is where the East German and Eastern Europe airlines land in Berlin.

THE TRAVELER can go by train, bus or his own car across the East German zone, but it generates such special problems that most tourists prefer to overfly the area.

For no other reason than the "war of nerves" conducted by the East Germans, there have been delays — trains and highway traffic have been halted, visitors sometimes searched, with no explanation. Americans and British who speak German fluently are regarded with suspicion. On some occasions they have been detained because of the East's suspicions of espionage.

Cross-zone travel continues, however, and regular train and highway tourists obtain a transit visa at the official border crossing points. It costs about $2.50 and is usually issued for the same return point, unless the visitor requests otherwise.

THERE ARE four designated rail crossings —two highway, and one ferry. These are the only crossings permitted to American and British tourists.

Tourists thinking about putting Berlin on their European itinerary should not hesitate to include it. It is an exciting city and a good travel bargain. An all-expense holiday of a couple of days, including a good room, meals, and sightseeing, is reasonably priced. The city has ample hotel space.

Berlin is a 24-hour city, so the visitor will always find "something doing" at any time. The Kurfurstendam is the central street of West Berlin from which the sightseeing tours and personal expeditions funnel out. The street has wide sidewalks, attractive shops and numerous sidewalk cafes, alwasy a delight to American visitors.

RESTAURANTS RUN the gamut of cuisines. There are French ones to equal any in Paris, Viennese to match Vienna, Scandinavian on par with anything in Copenhagen or Stockholm.

Sightseeing tours are the best way to see quickly most of the things visitors have come to See Europe by bus.

In fact, see Europe in your choice of buses. The new Volkswagen Station Wagon comes as a 7- or 9-seater. (The 7-seater is standard and has an aisle all the way through. Like a bus should.)

There's room in the back of the bus for 10 or 12 good-sized valises.

The man to see about buying one here is the man to see about having one waiting for you in Europe. Your local authorized Volkswagen dealer. He'll arrange licensing and delivery and even give you the scoop on how to get it back home.

It'll be nice to have a family bus with about twice the inside room of most conventional wagons. And VWs save you money on travel expenses. On either side of the Atlantic.

Lots To See, Do In West Berlin

see: the wall, the ruined Kaiser Wilhelm Stadium and the Funkturm, or television tower, with its revolving restaurant.

Tourists with time should take the combined West and East Berlin tours, although these can be done separately. In this way, they will watch the solemn East German security role enacted at "Checkpoint Charlie," the allied crossing point between the west and east sectors.

THEY WILL observe a surprising amount of construction going on in the east, including housing, buildings and hotels — even international types. They will see the Air Ministry Building where Goring reigned, and the small hillock that is all that remains of the Hitler-Eva Braun bunker.

The East Germans obviously are showing only their best work to Western visitors, although alongside the wall one can see some of the shabby empty buildings remaining.

East German tours at latest reports were making only stops at a hotel for refreshments and souvenirs and the Russian war memorial. Almost every visitor is bound to heave a sigh of relief at getting back into West Berlin. The contrast between east and west is inescapable.

THE RUSSIAN war memorial inside West Berlin is far more interesting, since it provides an opportunity to watch Russian soldiers on guard duty. The memorial was built, incidentally, before the boundaries had been established between the west and east sectors.

Berliners say it demonstrated Russian fondness for celebrating victories as quickly as possible.

At several points along the wall platforms have been erected which visitors may mount to watch what is going on in the East German zone. At Potsdamerplatz, the visitor can see what has happened to what was one of the busiest spots in old Berlin before the wall cut it in two.

WEST BERLINERS were photographed on the go in front of the Kaiser Wilhelm Church, partially war ruins, partially rebuilt. It is one of the landmarks included in every tour of Berlin.

For the visitor with more time, a visit to the lakes is indicated. The city has one of the most pleasurable of water areas, and it is crowded on Sundays and holidays with pleasure craft, swimmers and excursion boats. One may cruise for all day if he wishes.

THIS IS A most delightful part of Berlin.

The Berlin Zoo is rated as one of the best in the world. It displays the animals as near as possible in their own habitats.

There are bears, magnificent specimens, including American grizzlies who stand on their hind legs begging for food. Lions, camels, and elephants also are in natural habitats. The zoo is so large that a visitor can easily spend a day seeing its creatures.

It is fun just to stroll the Kurfurstendam at night, visiting the Europa Center with its various restaurants, shops and cinemas.

Berlin seems to live for the moment, and that is undoubtedly part of its charms for visitors.

Lima: Jumping Off Point For Conquistadores And Tourists

By JAMES GOODSELL

LIMA, Peru — This capital city, with its surprising blend of colonial charm and modern bustle, was once the mecca for Spanish conquistadores seeking a fortune in the New World.

For thousands of those hardy explorers, Lima was the jumping-off point in their quests for rumored riches and possible fame. And the city became the place to which they longed to return.

Today's visitor is more fortunate than those early explorers. He can savor Peru's still largely untouched interior without all the hardships that faced the early explorer.

And Lima is a much more adequate town today than it was in colonial times.

LIMA MAY HAVE some rivals today as a jumping-off point for trips to the interior of South America, but no other capital city on the continent has so much of the past right at hand.

That's probably the reason why Lima's big, modern Jorge Chavez International Airport is one of the three busiest in South America. It is not uncommon to have jets bearing the names of three or four European airlines, a couple of South American lines and a United States carrier, along with half a dozen Peruvian planes, on the tarmac at the same time.

Peru, of course, is Indian country. The descendants of the Incas and other Andean people are today the largest element in Peru's racial mix. They are a proud group, loyal in many ways to their rich ancestral traditions, and this is one of the first things that a visitor must note on his arrival. As long as he is in Peru, he'll encounter this attitude at every turn.

LIMA ITSELF is cosmopolitan, blending the Indian and the white, the colonial and the modern. And it is surprisingly expensive. Hotels such as the Gran Bolivar and the Crillon charge prices comparable to New York rates. There are less expensive hotels, but the accomodations are more Spartan and sometimes less clean.

The tourist will find less ex-

THE PERUVIAN CAPITAL city of Lima lays proud claim to South America's newest and most modern airport. Its Jorge Chavez International Airport is also one of the three busiest on that continent, with Lima serving as a gateway to the South American interior and to other metropolitan centers in all directions.

pensive hotels, with considerably more charm, in outlying cities.

Restaurants in Lima are similarly expensive. A good meal for a couple at any of a dozen major restaurants within a five-block radius of the top two hotels will come to $15. But the service and atmosphere in these restaurants make the price worth it.

Getting around Lima, as in any Latin-American city, can be an adventure. One point: Stay away from the taxis lined up in front of your hotels. Their prices are normally three and four times the charge made by taxis you can hail in the street.

OF COURSE, HAILING a taxi is sometimes a hassle, for half a dozen Peruvians may have hailed the same taxi and you end up in an Alphonse-Gaston routine with several Peruvians. But that is part of the adventure.

Lima serves as the take-off point for trips to the Inca ruins of Machu Picchu and colonial cities like Cuzco and Arequipa. But before one heads for these spots, he ought to get a good look at Lima.

The fashionable shopping and residential Miraflores district is worth a few hours, as is the slum belt linking Lima with the seaport of Callao, in which hundreds of thousands of Peruvians live in squalor. The contrast tells much of the story of Peru and of South America.

There are good beach resorts to the north of Lima, but remember the seasons here are reversed: summer comes in December, January, and February.

IF YOU HAVE only a few days in Peru — not enough to get into the interior — there are Inca ruins within an hour's drive of Lima. And the ruins near Lima are worth a visit.

Shopping in Lima is worth the time, but often prices are higher than one figures he ought to pay. However, with patience, a little searching, and an adventurous attitude, the visitor ought to be able to locate bargains in almost everything from jewelry to items of silver to colonial-style furniture to vicuna and alpaca rugs and garments.

The rule of thumb might well be: Don't buy the first item you see; look around a little.

Most hotels, restaurants and service facilities add a service charge to the bill, but it is still wise to tip the waiter or the hotel housekeeper (more often than not in Lima, the housekeeper is a man). Perhaps 10 per cent of the bill for the waiter, 75 cents a day for the housekeeper.

ONE GOOD investment in Lima is a current copy of the Peruvian Times, an English-language weekly with a lot of local news and a host of interesting features on Peru and neighboring countries, plus many advertisements of Lima attractions.

If the tourist is going on elsewhere in South America, particularly to the south, Lima is an ideal jumping-off point.

There are six or seven daily flights south to Chile, three or four to landlocked Bolivia, and a similar number to Argentina and Paraguay. It is also possible to go right across South America from Lima to either Rio de Janeiro or Sao Paulo in Brazil.

That trip to Bolivia might well be worth trying overland, if there is time. After a stop at Machu Picchu and the towns of Cuzco and Arequipa, the train ride to Lake Titicaca, which forms part of the frontier between Peru and Bolivia, is an experience one will never forget. And the boat trip on Lake Titicaca is also worth the effort.

A Taste Of The Old West At Cowboy Hall Of Fame

By MURRAY J. BROWN

The old Wild West may have passed into history but memories of the uniquely American era are being preserved at a national shrine in Oklahoma City, officially designated as the National Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center.

The capital of the Sooner State also is the site of the National Finals Rodeo where the top American and Canadian performers compete for the title of All-Around Cowboy as well as big prize money.

The Hall of Fame, perched on a hilltop off U.S. 66 in the northeast section of the city, has been visited by more than two million persons since it was opened in 1965.

BUILT WITH funds contributed by individuals and organizations in 17 western states, the unique non-profit memorial was designated by an Act of Congress as a National Monument honoring the pioneers who won the West, the Indians who lost it and the cowboys who became its symbol.

As a national treasury of art and relics of the historic era, its halls are filled with collections of saddles, spurs, handguns, rifles and other old West gear. There is a lighted relief map that traces the old famous trails, and dioramas and other exhibits depicting Indian and pioneer life, rodeos and historic events, and paintings and sculptures by earlyday and contemporary artists.

One of the most prized exhibits is the 18-foot-high original plaster model of sculptor Charles Frazier's "End of the Trail." The statue, by the designer of the Indian head-buffalo nickel, portrays an Indian warrior with a dragging spear slumped over an exhausted war pony.

It has been called the most expressive of all art work depicting the final defeat of the American Indian.

THE COWBOY Hall of Fame is full of noted Westerners and not all were strictly riders of the range. Theodore Roosevelt is honored as is Mormon leader Brigham Young. Sacajawea, the Shoshone Indian girl who guided the Lewis and Clark Expedition, also is included.

Busts of Kit Carson, the old Indian scout; Jake McClure, a world champion roper, and Richard King, founder of the famous King Ranch in Texas, also are there, among hundreds of others.

Honored also is Charles M. Russell, the wrangler-artist whose western paintings are known around the world. The center has some of his outstanding works, including a number of bronzes and a rifle decorated with his carved illustrations. On display in the Center's art gallery also are many paintings by Frederick Remington, also a noted artist of the Western scene, and wood sculptures by Willard Stone, a contemporary Indian artist.

FOR CHILDREN, there is a spacious "see and do" section in the basement of the modern main structure where they can pan for gold or romp in an authentic replica of an Indian camping ground.

There's a display of pioneer transportation, an appropriately-furnished sod house and a full scale turn-of-the-century Western town.

Children as well as adult visitors to the Hall of Fame and Heritage Center are encouraged to make nominations of famous Westerners for future election or suggestions for new exhibits.

The National Finals Rodeo takes place in Fair Park in early December. Competitors include the 15 top cowboys — based on earnings during the year — in saddle bronc riding, bareback riding, calf roping, bull riding, steer wrestling and team roping.

For additional information on the Hall of Fame, rodeo and other attractions and special events write to Chamber of Commerce, 200 Skirvin Tower, Oklahoma City, Okla., 73102.

Paddling Down The Russian River

". . .excess items can be lost out of your canoe," warns the brochure. "The river bottom is lined with purses, glasses, cameras, shoes. . ."

Maybe so, but fun-seekers are willing to pay the price.

Starting this March hundreds of them each week will be paddling, scrambling, sunburning, spluttering — and diving for glasses and cameras — on a 70-mile stretch of the Russian River centered in the pretty farm town of Healdsburg, a short drive north of Marin.

The Russian, named by home-sick Muscovite fur poachers about 1812, is a usually placid warmish stream that twists through oat fields and around redwooded knolls and resorts. Occasionally it swings through narrow channels or under overhanging willows — close enough to tip the careless canoeist. That's when the lunch goes overboard.

UNTIL RECENTLY, only a few weekend outdoorsmen canoed the Russian.

Promotion did its part, and now 500 metal double-enders are rentable at Healdsburg, or its satellites. The price is right (about $10 a day) three can ride, and the water glitters with flashing paddles. Scoutmasters, their charges, young lovers, Mom and Dad all love it.

The drill goes something like this: reservations are made (by phone, usually), and canoeists (who should bring two cars) meet the rental operators at the pre-ordained spot. For example, if it's to be a short "upstream" run, that means Healdsburg Municipal Beach, just off the 101 Freeway.

Parking one car, the canoeists drive the second upstream to, say, the Alexander Valley Bridge, where their craft awaits. Then follows a few warning words: don't steer too close to metal levee barriers here, better portage there, wear your lifejacket, don't throw litter on the banks or use the paddles for baseball. . .

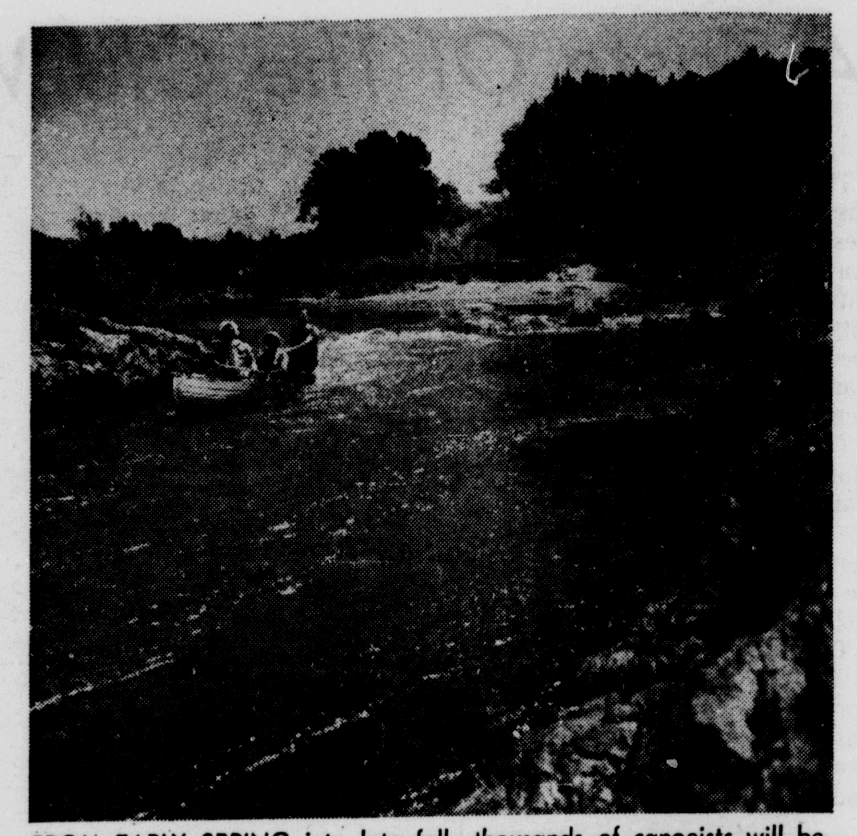
BUT AS ONE operator used to tell it: "Nobody listens until I say it'll cost them $200 if they wreck a canoe."

A 15-mile paddle (downstream all the way) is not beyond the capabilities of week day office workers. Especially when it's punctuated with lunch stops, swim breaks and an occasional beer.

For the young, or those with time, there are two-and-three-day voyages which start up near Asti. There the Italian Swiss Winery provides a rosy send-off. Five-day safaris (week days only) for the experienced camper ($20 and up) start at Cloverdale and may end at the ocean near Jenner.

Upstream runs end at Healdsburg. The last three miles, from Del Rio Woods, are flat water and harder paddling than on the current-assisted upper stretches. At Healdsburg, the first car is retrieved and the canoeists drive back to pick up the second.

Downstream trips begin at Healdsburg, going to Hilton or Mirabel Park in one day, Guerneville or Monte Rio in two. There's a one-day jaunt from Mirabel to Guerneville, and a short hop from Guerneville to Monte Rio.



FROM EARLY SPRING into late fall, thousands of canoeists will be paddling down the twisting, tree-lined Russian River in Sonoma County this year. Over 500 canoes are available for rent at Healdsburg and nearby points for the from one to five-day adventures on the glittering Russian.

OPERATOR Bob Trowbridge will tailor variations or combinations to suit. He's been doing it for 25 years.

Canoeing the Russian, there's plenty of opportunity for picture-taking, but cameras and other valuables, as noted, are best transported in watertight plastic bags. Canoes in tyro hands tend to capsize.

River-running weather continues excellent into fall, and it's then — when leaves turn and temperatures get nippy — that some connoisseurs prefer to ride the Russian River. Certainly it's less crowded, though you may miss the chance to watch someone else get dunked.

A New State Park Offers Skindiving And Rich Ecology

Salt Point is California's newest and most challenging state park — especially if you are a skindiver, shell-picker or biology teacher.

That's because this 3,174-acre preserve, an easy drive north of Marin, has everything from tide-pools to midget trees, brown pelicans and Indian mounds.

MOST OF the time, thick brooding fogs that dominate the redwood coast hand over Salt Point. Some mornings sunshine accentuates the menacing rocks, rocking kelp beds, and sea-slanted meadows with a sparkling magic. Whatever the weather, families clamber up and down the Pacific-washed boulders and peer in wonder at tidepools full of waving anemones, scuttling crabs, and an occasional creepy slug.

Skindivers particularly like Salt Point for its varied launching places and underwater botanical gardens. Sandstone cliffs plunge sharply into the Pacific, and the oily sweels make subsurface adventuring resemble Cousteau's happy TV hunting grounds.

"Look, but don't touch," asks the State Park Service, stressing that the ecology is fragile, and souvenir-hunting verboten. Fact is that Salt Point was bought and preserved to provide space where school kids can study California tideland life.

SALT POINT is reached by driving north from Marin on Highway 101 to the Fulton turnoff (US116) north of Santa Rosa, thence west to seaside Jenner, and north on the Coast Highway 23 miles to the signed park.

Salt Point adjoins the lovely Kruse Rhododendron Reserve where great peacock shrubs bloom in spring-time.

A Different Kind Of National Park

By BRADLEY SMITH

The bear-watcher — that most famous of National Park visitors — would be lost and unhappy in one of the nation's newer reserves.

Canyonlands National Park, designated in 1964, is no place for the drive-in tourist, but holds majestic sights and untold mysteries for the adventuresome.

In this age of crowded national parks, with bumper-to-bumper campers waiting to look into Grand Canyon or see Old Faithful, a traffic jam in Canyonlands consists of two four-wheel drive vehicles facing each other on the sheer cliffs.

CANYONLANDS, a 257,640-acre web of canyons where the Green and Colorado rivers have their confluence, is set in the southeastern Utah desert. It lies over a great salt bed larger than the state of Vermont, a remnant of what was once a huge landlocked sea.

The impression the traveler gets is that this is not a park for the harried tourist. The modes of transportation are four-wheel drive, horse, boat and foot.

At first glance — from Dead Horse Point State Park on the north — the canyons look like a vast wasteland through which the meandering Green and Colorado have carved a leisurely path.

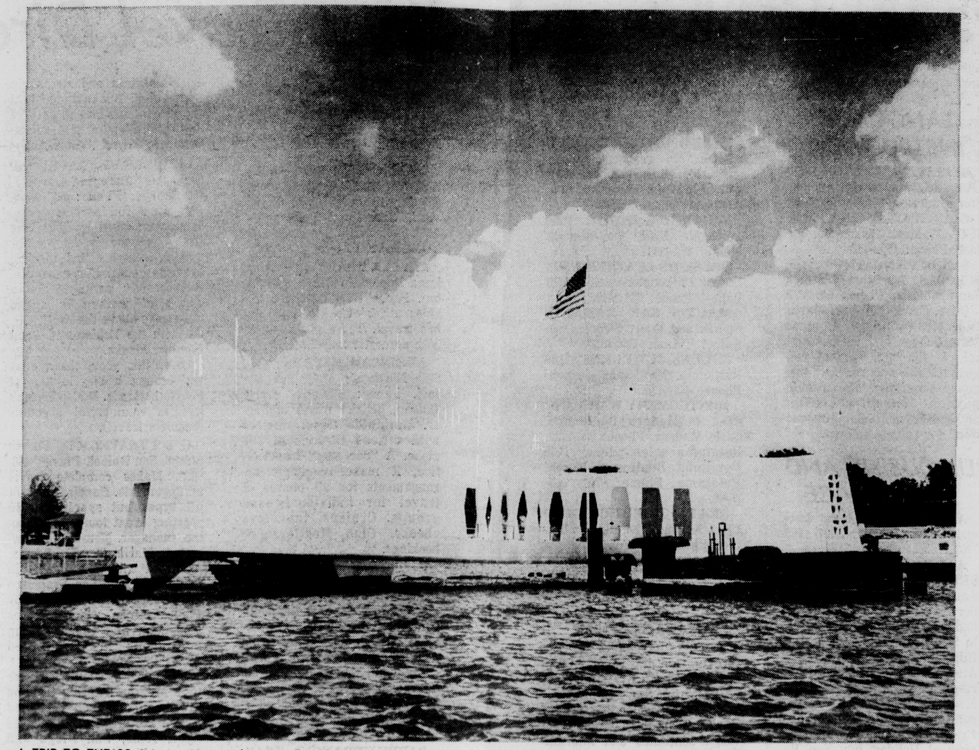
A PASSENGER car can drive along rutted roads on the northern rim overlooking the canyons and to Upheaval Dome, a huge crater formed by salt pushing up through the sandstone and making what some geologists first thought was a meteor crater one-mile wide.

From the north rim, a jeep road drops off the sheer cliff into the canyons.

From the jeep road can be seen Bighorn Sheep on the White Rim of the canyon or one can look down another thousand feet along the banks of the Colorado for mule deer or beaver. The White Rim Trail, an all-day trip by four-wheel drive vehicle, provides a spectacular view of the canyons.

ON THE SOUTH, a paved road enters the park to Squaw Flat where one of two improved campgrounds lies. From that point horses or four-wheel drive vehicles are required to see the rock spires around Chesler Park or the Druid Arch formation.

From Moab, a once-booming uranium town, paddle boats take tourists into the upper reaches of the canyons during the day and at night.



A TRIP TO THE SS Arizona Memorial at Pearl Harbor is a must for every history-minded, patriotic visitor to Honolulu. The U.S. Navy operates a free launch service to the water-surrounded memorial, but reservations should be made in advance. (Hawaii Visitors Bureau photo)

'TO INSURE PROMPTNESS'

Tipping Got Its Start In London Coffee Houses

There are many names for it: tip, pourboire, hand-out, silver, baksheesh. Whatever it's called, though, it is supposed to open doors, transform frowns into smiles and generally pave the way for travelers almost everywhere.

"The whole idea of tipping goes back more than 200 years to the coffee houses in London," according to the travel experts. "These were popular places for 17th Century males to meet and drink coffee and chocolate while discussing politics, philosophy and literature. Since the h'penny or so they paid for hours of sitting around failed to cover the wages of the hired help, the customers were expected to drop coins into a brass-bound box on which were inscribed the words 'To Insure Promptness.' The initials — TIP — thus became the origin of the modern meaning of tipping."

Today, the smart traveler plans his tips as an integral part of any vacation budget. There are a few places — most of them fading fast — where tipping isn't really expected. The Soviet Union is one of them. Iceland is another. And in Tokyo, taxi drivers won't exactly snarl at you if you fail to give them something extra.

Then, of course, you never tip airline stewardesses, flight crews, ticket clerks or any other service personnel, except the porter who carries your bags, when flying.

"If you want to show your appreciation for extra services," advises Continental Airlines, "write a letter to the airline's headquarters."

A lot of people wish that the airline's insistence on "no tipping" would be universal, but that's just wishful thinking.

Some Guidelines On Costs Of Recreational Vehicles

The Recreational Vehicle Institute has issued some guidelines for campers who wish to rent units for their vacation trips. Rental rates vary according to geographical location, season, unit size and type of equipment. But some average costs:

Motor homes: 22-foot model — $225 per week, plus 10 cent a mile.

Truck campers: eight-footers, plus pickup truck — $85 per week, plus 10 cents a mile; nine and a half footers and pickup — $100 a week and 10 cents a mile.

Camping Trailers: 14-foot unit — $65 per week, 16-foot unit — $90 a week.

Travel trailers: 16-foot unit — $110 per week.

In addition, there are deposits for each unit and a rental fee for bumper-type and axle-type hitches for trailers.

Safari Camps of America reports the growing fall and winter space requirements of hunters and skiers has induced the company to establish a tollfree reservation service for recreational vehicle owners. Jim Estes, president of the franchise camp system, said the service will be in effect year-round.

Safari operates camp grounds in 30 states. The service will enable a camper to book reservations at any franchised site for a given date by phoning headquarters in Columbia, Mo.

Why Not Stay In A Castle?

Lodging in authentic medieval castles, ancient monasteries or convents, baronial mansions, stately chateaux or even royal palaces, is now readily available to the American traveler in Europe.

Today there are over 500 such places which have been adapted as hotels or guest-houses throughout western Europe, and they offer a very wide range of accommodations and rates. Usually they will cost no more than a motel in the U.S. And, what's more, you can enjoy all the modern amenities and comforts far beyond the dreams of the knights and ladies, kings and queens who once resided there.

"Castle Hotels of Europe," a guidebook to Europe's most unusual accommodations, has just been published in a fourth edition (164 pages, $3.95, Robert P. Long Publisher, 634 Bellmore Ave., East Meadow, N.Y., 11554) and it details over 500 of these hotels and guest houses, complete with historic notes and rate ranges. More than 350 are pictured, and all are located on maps of each of 16 countries.

Some of the castles are over 1,000 years old, and most offer centuries of fascinating history and tradition.

West Germany leads with 98 castle hotels, with France close behind with 80 and Austria with 53. Other countries covered are Belgium, Denmark, Great Britain, Greece, Holland, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Portugal, Scotland, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland.

THE TENNIS capital of the world is just one of the claims made by recreation-minded Palm Springs, Calif. It offers numerous courts, both public and private club, and it offers bright sunshine in which the currently "in" game can be played.

TOURIST TRAFFIC REACHES A NEW HIGH

More than three million American and European tourists crossed the Atlantic during the first half of 1972, on their way to a new annual record for travel in both directions.

"During the first six months of the year more than 1,700,000 Americans traveled to Europe, an increase of 24 per cent over the nearly 1,400,000 who made trips during the same period in 1971," said R. Newell Lusby, board chairman and president of Diners Club. "At the same time, more than 565,000 Europeans came to our shores, an increase of 21 per cent over the 465,000 who came here during the first six months of last year."

Figures for the second half of 1972 have not yet been compiled, but expectations are that they will show a continuation of the trend noted for the previous six months.

Lusby said preliminary figures and reports from government and travel industry sources, including 118 airlines around the world with which Diners Club has credit card agreements, point to new travel records between the U.S. and the Continent. About 98 per cent of Americans traveling to Europe go by air.

"In addition, reports from government agencies, hotels and other establishments in 143 countries and territories where the Diners Club card is used indicate a record year for American tourism all over the globe.

"The American traveler is on the move and it is certain that last year's record of 5,700,000 U.S. tourists to overseas countries has been broken by a large margin," he said. "So has the record number of 2,500,000 foreign visitors who came here last year."

The most popular first stop for Americans visiting Europe remains England, as it was last year, he said. Among the most popular countries on the Continent for U.S. visitors are the Netherlands, France, West Germany and Italy.

"Japan, England and Germany sent the most tourists here during the six-month period, with Japan leading the field with more than 185,000. In 1971 some 300,000 Japanese came to the U.S. and it seems they topped that figure in 1972."

Lusby said the increase in travel by Americans reflects the improved economy, and that travel to this country reflects more favorable currency exchange rates.

"America is obviously a better travel bargain for foreigners than ever before, due to currency adjustments. And lower air fares have helped increase travel in both directions," he said.

Tourism Is Growing In Alaska

Alaska has ended its most successful tourist year in history, and travel officials who say tourism here is still in its infancy predict the sky is the limit as to how big the stripling industry will grow.

State Travel Division officials said 140,000 tourists visited Alaska this year, 90 per cent in the five-month period from May through September. The figure is up from about 115,000 a year ago, they said.

By far the greatest tourist attraction is Mount McKinley National Park, where visitors increased from 45,000 a year ago to 270,000 this year, primarily because of the opening last fall of the new Anchorage-to-Fairbanks Highway, which cuts through a corner of the park.

Visitors to Arctic points of Nome, Kotzebue, and Barrow numbered 15,000 last year, and Wein Consolidated Airlines, which recently was awarded exclusive operating rights in the area by the Civil Aeronautics Board, said the number increased substantially this year.

Alaska Airlines, which received exclusive operating rights in southeastern Alaska, has begun a strong promotion effort to lure tourists to the state capital of Juneau and the fishing and recreation areas around Sitka and Ketchikan.

State travel officials say Alaska could become one of the greatest tourist attractions in the world and point out the state's vast and sparsely populated territory, natural scenery, abundant wildlife and unspoiled environment as reasons for optimism.

THE HARBOR and the skyline of Dakar, Senegal's capital city, show it to be a developing, modern metropolis. But for the visitor, Dakar still retains the imprint of its French colonial days, plus colorful African markets that deal vociferously in a number of local crafts. (Christian Science Monitor photo)

Dakar Is Africa's Modern, Colorful, Growing Gateway

Senegal's Capital City Draws Tourists With Hotels, History

By JOY GERVILLE-REACHE

DAKAR, SENEGAL — Dakar, the capital of Senegal, is the natural gateway to West and Central Africa.

Located in the middle of the African bulge, it is the nearest point on the African continent to both North and South America.

Pan American Airways and Air Afrique, the airline owned by a dozen French-speaking African states, both operate a direct service to Dakar from New York, only seven to eight hours' flying time.

Dakar also is only a few hours by air from the main cities of Western Europe, and many Europeans going south in search of the sun make it their starting point for an African tour.

AIR AFRIQUE now has a network of routes radiating out from Dakar — north to Mauritania and Morocco and south and west to Mali, the Ivory Coast, the Upper Volta, Chad and other French-speaking states. It also covers the English-speaking countries of Liberia, Nigeria, Ghana and Sierra Leone.

All this part of Africa is rich in tourist potential. New hotels are going up to cope with the rising tourist flow, but there still are not enough of them.

Dakar airport — known as Yoff Airport — is modern and efficient but small by American and European standards. It is located on the northern side of the Cap Vert Peninsula, where the Senegalese capital lies on the southern side.

Most of the hotels have their own limousines to run you the nine miles into town. The taxi fare is about $6.

THERE IS A very pleasant hotel located near the airport at N'Gor beach, which has its own tennis courts, golf course and riding facilities. Part of the hotel's accommodations consists of bungalows built among the trees near the shore. These are comfortable if not luxurious, and are equipped with showers and electricity.

The view from the hotel's terrace of the Atlantic Ocean and breakers is a magnificent one. N'Gor Island, just off the coast and reachable by rowing boat, has a good bathing beach.

Like Yoff Airport, the N'Gor Hotel is some way out of town, and you need a taxi to get into Dakar. The taxi drivers are friendly and helpful. If you know any French at all, use it. They'll like it.

IF YOU ARE stopping in downtown Dakar for a day or two don't miss a visit to Goree Island, once the main staging point on the West African coast for the slave trade. The island, where Portuguese seamen first landed in 1444, now is preserved as an historic site. The old slave house is still there and can be visited.

There is a frequent ferry service between Dakar and Go-

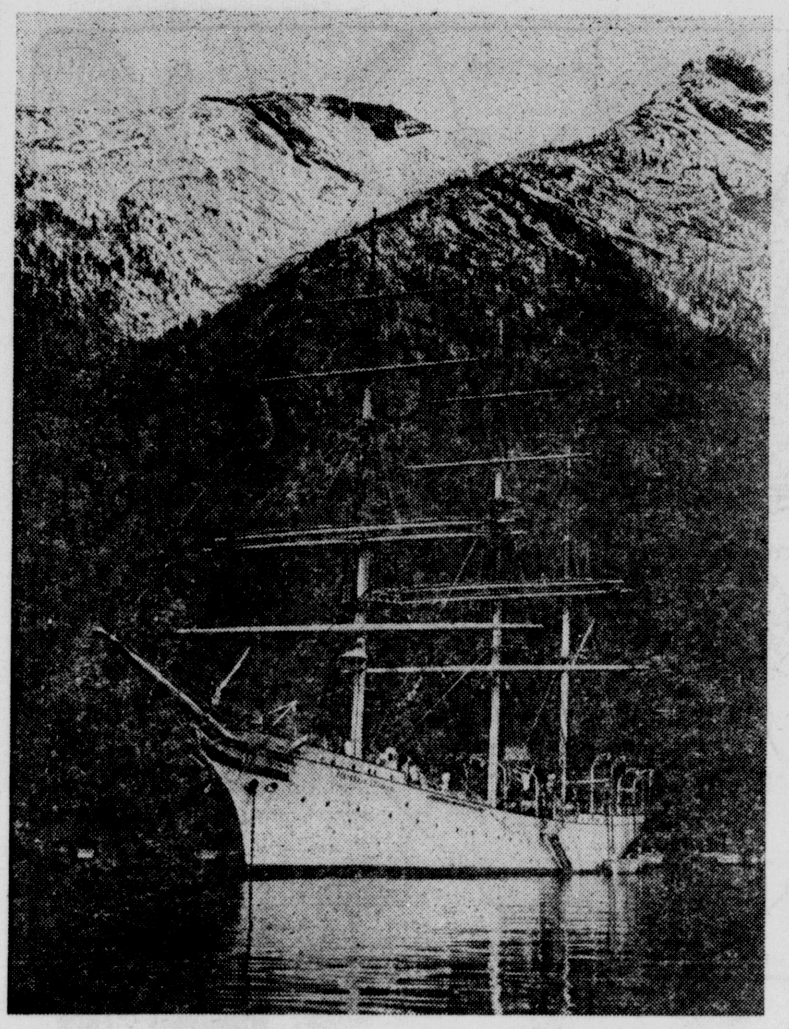
SAILING BEFORE THE MAST



THE SCHOOLSHIP Statsraad Lehmkull, a 316-foot three-masted, square-rigged bark, shown here in a wintry fjord just south of its home port of Bergen, Norway, sails under the auspices of the non-profit school, Oceanics. As such it carries 28 officers and crew, nine teachers and 72 students, sailing to the ports of West Africa, Brazil, the Caribbean, the Mediterranean, etc. But now it also guests in five comfortable double staterooms and an attractive guest-saloon-mess. Electric Carts Help Tourists

By CYRIL GUERRERA

NEW ORLEANS — One of the chronic problems in the quaint Vieux Carre French Quarter is, frankly, aching feet.

Middle-aged matrons from Memphis, schoolteachers from Stillwater, farmers from Fresno — they walk up and down the streets, shopping, seeing the old courtyards, poking around.

They get awfully tired. But this year, they're walking less and seeing more.

NEW TYPES of vehicles are zipping around the French Quarter, giving sightseers an alternative to blisters and fallen arches.

Battery-powered carts decorated to look like fanciful carnival floats and three-wheeled pedicabs have joined taxis, horse carriages and buses in giving tourists some respite from those blocks and blocks of hard pavement.

Advocates of the electric carts and leg-powered pedicabs say they fit in with the Old World atmosphere and don't pollute the environment.

"They are quiet, odorless and completely without any cause to disturb people," Max Hill says of the carts he rents.

"THEY CUT down on pollution and help preserve the old buildings being shaken up by buses," Thomas Baumler Jr., says of his pedicabs.

Vehicles are entirely barred from Jackson Square and its environs. Bourbon Street is open to pedestrians only between 7 p.m. and 3 a.m.

Senegal's Colorful Capital

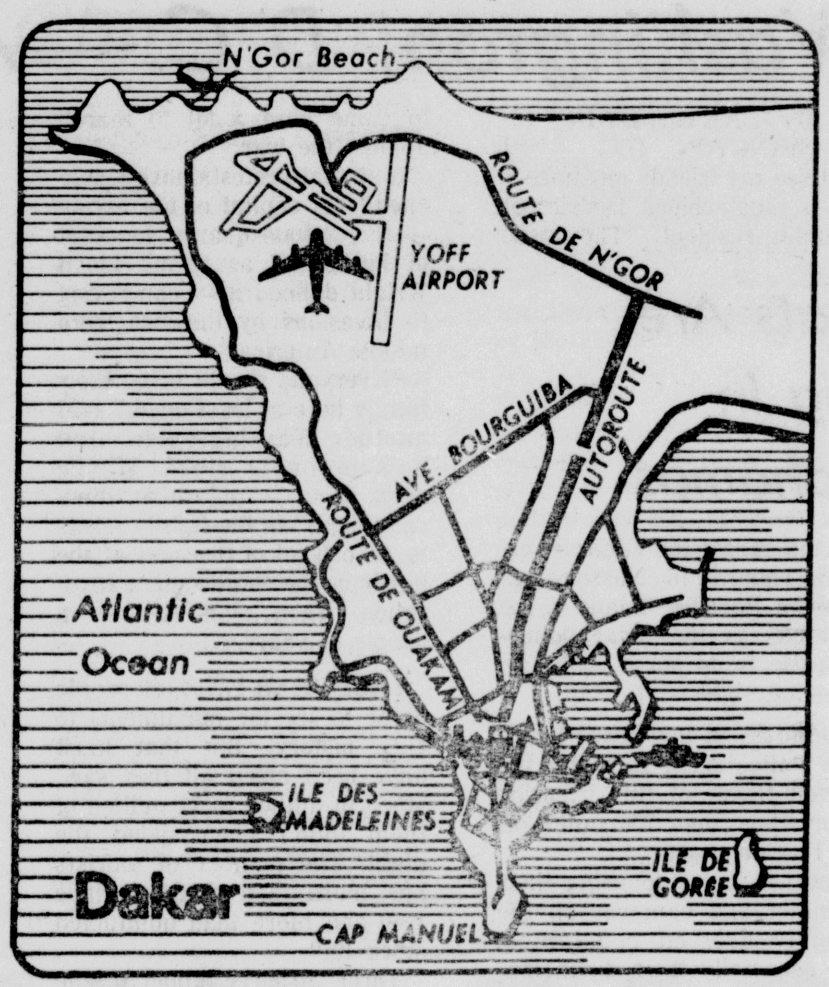
ree, and it is worth spending several hours on the island exploring its old forts. Goree also has a good restaurant with an open-air terrace.

Dakar itself is a developing modern city with, inevitably, strong reminders of the French colonial period.

IT HAS A new luxury hotel, the Teranga, with many of the rooms looking out over Dakar Bay and Goree Island. Of the older hotels in town, the best known is the Hotel de la Croix du Sud. Hilton International is planning to build a 360-room hotel, with its own private beach, on the city's residential fringe.

There are several colorful African markets in Dakar with a wide variety of local products to choose from, ranging from gold and silver jewelry to wooden carvings and gay printed cottons.

The work of the gold and silver craftsmen is sold by weight at government-fixed prices. For all other products be prepared to bargain.



AT YOFF THERE is an airport shop specializing in the products of local craftsmen. Of course it is modest compared with the duty-free stores you find in Paris, London, or Frankfurt. But some of the local souvenirs are excellent buys.

Dakar has the advantage of an excellent climate from December through May, with brilliant sunshine tempered by cool Atlantic breezes and virtually no rainfall.

Washington, D.C.—A City Of Marble And Museums

By JUNE GOODWIN

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "I don't see my friends anymore," said a mustachioed District of Columbia resident. "They used to come here a lot to march against the war."

Now that protests have slackened, this capital of the nation — this "stone quarry gone out of business," as Frank Lloyd Wright dubbed it — can revert to invasions by families from middle America.

"Everyone should bring their family here at least once," said another Washingtonian. And he's probably right. Maybe even twice — unless a "dinosaur fiend" in the family wants to absorb all of the ages of the earth in the Smithsonian Institution. Then plan to stay a couple of years.

LAST YEAR 17,700,000 people came to see the monuments to U.S. history. But that must have been about all they saw, since 10 million to 11 million of them didn't even spend the night. The number of tourists has more than doubled since 1960 and more than quintupled since 1950.

Three airports funnel people into the District of Columbia and the surrounding states of Maryland and Virginia. Friendship Airport, although 28 miles from town, is considered by the natives (if there is such a thing in this politically polyglot city) to be the airport for Baltimore.

National Airport, just 10 minutes from the Washington Monument, has had its activites curtailed by environmentalists and local residents. But congressmen won't give up the convenience of a quick trip to their constituents. Flights are limited to about a 500-mile radius — with Chicago a 700-mile exception.

NO JETS ARE allowed after 10 p.m. and planes must land and take off angled up or down the Potomac River.

Dulles International Airport, 30 miles out into Virginia, takes the long-distance flights.

Designed by the late Eero Saarinen, the Dulles terminal's roof has that aerodynamic curve that is shared by bananas and airplane bellies. The control tower, a stolid concrete atlas, peers over mobile lounges, enormous $80,000 moving rooms that scuttle passengers from planes to a terminal that has no telescoping boarding ramps.

Dulles Airport is one more magnificent Washington monument — even if it is 40 minutes (buses ply the route) into the Virginia countryside.

IF MONUMENTS and magnificent buildings don't move you, chances are Washington won't. Fortunately for this city, they move a lot of people.

One friend of mine raved so much about the Lincoln Monument lighted up at night that I made a special trip to see it. He was right. It's an awesome, columned temple to equality and freedom. It literally and figuratively raises all heads.

While there, go across the street and down the steps to the edge of the reflecting pool. You can then see the whole watery Washington Monument, including the pyramid tip with its blinking red warning light.

When the magnificence of marble and granite cools for you and an office building becomes a stack of tinted aquariums, don't bolt the city. There are some humanizing activities.

FOR EXAMPLE, you can eat at the Museum of History and Technology's cafeteria and watch the waves of school children who allow no artificial awe to settle, even in a monumental city.

Also, the Federal Bureau of Investigation runs a popular tour. "They shoot real machine guns," said one grown-up boy.

At the Bureau of Engraving and Printing you can witness the production of stacks upon stacks of very clean "filthy lucre." Or go to Capitol Hill and sit in on a congressional committee hearing. They are usually more lively than activity on the House and Senate floors.

Cherry blossoms may not be by definition "humanizing," but there's no doubt that humanity turns out in force each spring on their account. Cherry blossom week varies each year to avoid conflict with Easter.

"EASTER WEEKEND is when everybody turns up in D.C.," says one cabdriver. "They all have the same idea — to beat the cherry blossom crush."

It's hard to predict the blossoms, but they usually burst out the first two weeks of April. About 10 per cent of the bloms are pink the rest white. At night, lights sweep the Tidal Basin, which wears a necklace of the trees, given to the capital by the mayor of Tokyo in 1912.

One bit of advice for the week-long festival: Walk if you can. Because to drive is to "creep."

Hats Are Big In Bahamas

A top target for camera-carrying visitors to Nassau and adjacent Paradise Island in the Bahamas is the local policeman. He is, to put it aptly, an arresting sight.

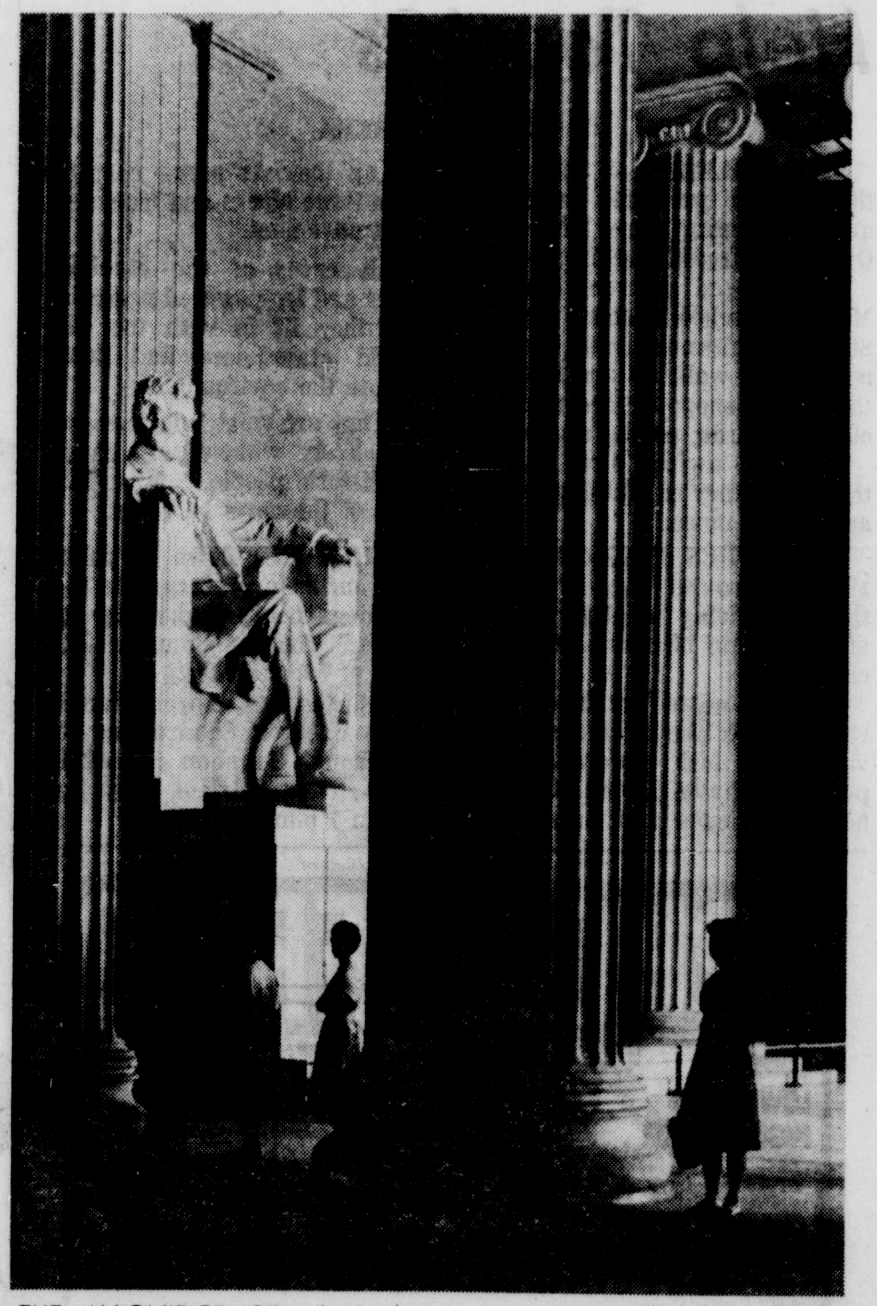
Uniforms of the Royal Bahamas Police seem to typify the foreign flavor of this vacation resort, less than 200 miles off the Florida coast.

Tourists enjoy focusing their attention and cameras on the smartly dressed constables, and especially their distinctive hats . . . tropical pith helmets for walking the beat, flat-topped caps for directing traffic, and spiked helmets for parades and ceremonial duty.

Hats, as a matter of fact, play a big part in the fascination of Nassau and Paradise Island.

In and around Rawson Square, for instance, reasonably-priced hats of varying size, shape and description are offered for sale seven days a week in a mammoth straw market. Industrious workers enjoy chatting with tourists and welcome the chance to give their persuasive sales talks. It's hard to turn down a bargain, and after all, no matter how many boxes and bags occupy hands and arms, a hat is easy to carry when perched on the head.

Even Nassau's surrey horses wear attractive straw bonnets. Rawson Square is the best place to see them — and to arrange for a clip-clopping ride along flower-lined streets.



THE MAGNIFICENCE of the Lincoln Monument has not been overrated, visitors to Washington, D.C., discover for themselves. And the monument is particularly memorable when seen lighted at night.

Fabulous Taiwan Collection Of Chinese Art Treasures

By PEGGY DURDIN

TAIPEI, Taiwan — For the many Americans experiencing an increased or new interest in things Chinese, a visit to the National Palace Museum here during a trip through the Far East is a must. It can easily be the high point of the whole tour.

Under the curves of the museum's green-tiled roof, outlined against mountains which, through centuries, meant far more to the Middle Kingdom's painters than just fine scenery, is the greatest single collection of Chinese art today outside Mao Tse-tung's People's Republic.

Indeed, in this treasure house there is literally something to intrigue every kind of visitor, including those not particularly addicted to art or Asia.

ITS QUARTER of a million objects range in form and time from animal bones on which were scratched, more than 4,000 years ago, the precursors of the most artistic writing now extant, the Chinese ideograph or "character," to the ornate European clocks and watches with which the famous — and infamous — Empress Dowager surrounded and amused herself in the early part of our own century.

Each visitor will of course find delight in and remember best the particular objects or object striking his taste or fancy.

Since intellectual voyages in to the very distant past are so enjoyably mind-stretching, and China's ancient bronzes have yet to be surpassed, it may be a great cooking pot which someone decorated 3,000 years ago with a complicated, bold design artfully escaping ornateness.

IT MAY BE an imperial concubine's gold hairpin, from which extend, on delicate golden wires, butterflies with carved coral wings, jade heads and bodies, pearl eyes and pearl-tipped antennae which once quivered with every little movement of a beauty's silk-clad figure in a royal garden.

It may be objects carved from jade, the hard, many-colored stone Chinese associated with virtue, purity, good luck: a cicada placed two thousand years ago in the mouth of a dead warrior, a royal scepter dotted with flowers of gold and precious stones, or a tiger-shaped talley in two parts, one held by the emperor, the other by one of his field commanders.

These and myriad other artifacts can catch the eye or the imagination. There is calligraphy, long considered their highest art form by a people who so honored the written word that constructing "characters" with balance, carefully contrived imbalance, movement, grace, and strength used to be a prerequisite for official position and was considered a sure revelation of moral integrity or the lack of it.

ONE CAN SPEND hours in front of the museum's great — or simply amusing — paintings: a landscape, its lake and great mountains towering into infinity merely suggested, but done with such skill, feeling, and understanding that it passes the Chinese test of illustrating the artist's view of the universe.

Finally, the best of Chinese porcelain has no peers; anyone attracted by line, color, and texture will pull himself away very reluctantly from the lively imagination of Ming or the refined serenity of Sung. In fact, one of the museum's excellent special exhibitions, a showing of over a thousand pieces of breathtakingly beautiful Sung porcelain, has possibly never been equaled at any time anywhere.

H. DENNIS-JONES

For 600 years the best way to reach Edinburgh from London has been the Great North Road.

It is almost solidly paved in history. The Emperor Constantine was proclaimed at York along the route, most of the Pilgrim Fathers lived along it, Richard III came this way many times and stayed at his favorite inn in Grantham.

Still, the route has remained amazingly standard since the Romans engineered Ermine Street from London to York more than 18 centuries ago.

Today the brand new roads of Britain's growing motorway network are challenging the old A.1. If speed is your object, go by the M.1. northwest to Birmingham, north through industrial Lancashire and through the lovely Lake District to the Roman town of Carlisle, and then northeast to Edinburgh.

IF NATURAL Britain is your quest, by all means take the old road.

Hatfield, just outside London, is the great home of the famous Cecil family. Lord Burghley, famous courtier of Queen Elizabeth I, was one of them. The modern (that is, built around 1620) house is one hundred feet or so from the ancient palace where Princess Elizabeth learned that she had become Queen Elizabeth I.

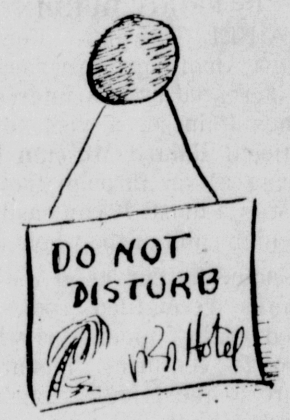
Cambridge lies only 22 miles east of the A.1. Stop off and see the glories of the King's College Chapel, the Backs, and sufficient beauties and glories to take up a week of your time. The medieval cities of Lincoln and York also lie just off the road, although closer.

BY BAWTRY and Doncaster, near Scrooby, are the houses of the Pilgrim Fathers. A bit to the west is Sherwood Forest, with memories of Robin Hood.

Farther north, just off the road, east and west are York and Harrogate, each a mine of beauty and history. York has the greatest cathedral in northern Europe. At Richmond is one of the finest castles in Britain — perfect, because it was built in a useless place, for military purposes.

Along the way, see Durham with its superb cathedral, one of the few truly Norman structures in Britain, high above a bend in the River Wear, also picturesque Alnwick with its mighty castle. It belonged to the Percys, whose long feud with the Scottish Douglases made border history. It was from Alnwick Castle Hotspur rode forth in Shakespeare's Henry IV to his final battle with Prince Hal.

Then proceed to the extraordinary walled town of Berwick-



on-Tweed — which lies on the Scottish side of the river, gives its name to a Scottish county, and yet is in England.

OR ONE CAN follow the unbelievably lovely roads to Jedburgh across the wild Durham and Northumberland moors from Darlington or Newcastle, or cross England from Newcastle to Carlisle along the line of Hadrian's Roman Wall.

If you like, you may take the excursion to Northumberland's castle-studded coast and the mystic isle of Lindisfarne.

After a period in Edinburgh, long or short according to your needs and desires, try returning to London, if you go by car, on the other coast. Divert at Penrith for a tour of the Lake District via Keswick, Grasmere, Ambleside and Kendal. Then hurry south on the M.6.

If you turn off the motorway to visit the enchanting town of Chester with its still flourishing medieval shopping center, why not continue west to the North Wales mountains? Or turn south along the Welsh border to Ludlow, then to London via Worcester, the rolling Cotswold Hills, Shakespeare's home-town of Stratford-upon-Avon and Oxford.

The possibilities are endless, each more beautiful than the other. If you give yourself time, driving from London to Edinburgh can be a memory worth cherishing for life.

And there's a vehicle that can help you answer that call to adventure. It's at our showroom now. The '73 Jeep Commando Wagon.

To roam over those back country trails and paths, a vehicle has to be tough. Tough enough to take on torture tracks like the Baja Peninsula — like the Jeep Commando has done time and time again for years.

And to help make that kind of adventure the pleasure it should be, a vehicle should be comfortable. Again, the '73 Commando fills the bill. Front bucket and optional rear bench seats give back-easing support, complementing the Commando's smooth highway ride. And, if you choose, you can top the whole package with air conditioning and automatic transmission.

It's Still The Frontier

Anchorage Isn't Yet The Cosmopolitan City That It Would Like To Be

By LANSING and KATHARINE SHEPARD

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The interesting thing about Anchorage is that everything isn't at all what it first seems.

Driving in from the city's brand new international airport makes one feel as though he has landed in any average, modern American city. The city's outskirts are lined with clusters of recently built, prefabricated, development-type houses, interspersed with plastic-looking franchise establishments and shopping centers, as are common along the outskirts of many American cities.

Clothing stores both in and around Anchorage display the latest in men's and women's fashions. Modern street lights arch over the city's wide, multi-laned, one-way thoroughfares.

The four square blocks of downtown Anchorage really resemble those of any other city.

HERE AND THERE, from the wood and cinder-block underbrush of an older Anchorage sprout modern office buildings and hotels 15 stories and more, with colors maroon, pink, yellow, white and brown. Buzzing, flickering neon signs flash below.

But an approach by land along the Alaskan Highway gives one another feeling about Anchorage.

Coming in from the east by car one sees no hint of civilization for hundreds of miles at a stretch — just miles of scraggly spruce and tamarack, and magnificent mountains. Occasionally a moose or bear can be spotted crossing the road . . . or even a wolf bolting into the underbrush.

Except for the dirt or macadam road (dirt becomes hardtop at the Alaskan-Canadian border) dipping, hunching and snaking ahead, one could easily imagine himself to be the sole human in a vast, primitive wilderness.

ANCHORAGE LIES ensconced on a tip of land at the confluence of the Knik and Turnagain Arms of Cook Inlet, almost as far west as Honolulu and farther north than Helsinki. It is a community of 50,000 people — somewhat between the big frontier town that it is and the cosmopolitan city it would like to be.

To walk the Anchorage streets is to sense this quickly. There is a rugged looseness about the place that is the trademark of a frontier town. In marked contrast to the business-suit set with whom they share the city, oilmen, Indians, Eskimos and hunters saunter down the wide sidewalks, lending an air of the bush to the metropolis.

Fur is big business here. Eskimos and Indians coming in from the bush sport beautifully made fox and sealskin parkas that would spark the envy of many a wealthy city-dweller from the "lower 48," as Alaskans refer to the rest of the United States.

ORIGINALLY THE construction headquarters for the Alaska Railroad in 1914, the city really didn't begin to come into its own until World War II when it became an armed forces support community and an off-duty retreat for servicemen from the military bases that sprang up in the 1940s. Anchorage is bordered by Elmendorf Air Force Base, and the Army's Ft. Richardson, which, until oil was discovered nearby in 1954, supplied Anchorage with the main reason for its existence.

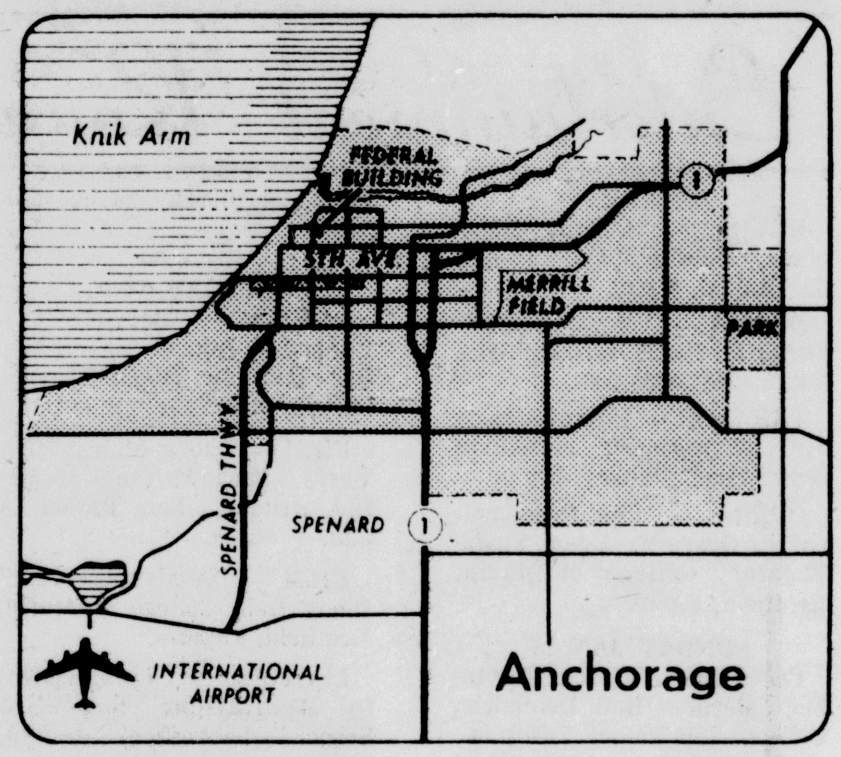
Today, the city is the largest in Alaska. Boosted by the discovery of oil in the Kenai Peninsula and Cook Inlet — and, most recently, in the vast fields of the Alaskan North Slope — Anchorage has become the transportation and commercial heart of its corner of the world.

Since big-game hunting is a major attraction here, it is also the major outfitting center for the western part of the state.

MANY GOOD hotels have sprouted with the city's rapid growth. (Despite inflation, Anchorage has experienced an incredible building boom.) The Anchorage Westward, the Captain Cook, and the Holiday Inn are three of the largest hotels.

The city also boasts several motels, including the Red Ram Motor Lodge whose dining room is one of the city's most popular restaurants.

The cost of living is high because of the city's great distance from markets in the continental United States. We spent $7.25 for breakfast that included two orders of hot cakes, a side of bacon and one of ham, and three orange juices.



Anchorage is bordered closely on two sides by the Alaska Range to the northwest and the Chugach Range to the southeast, by Cook Inlet on the southwest. To the north, on a clear day, you can see faraway Mount McKinley. (We first saw it at about 10 o'clock one October morning, snow-covered and pink-looking in the sunrise.)

IT IS THIS incredible setting which makes Anchorage such a pleasant memory for us.

On the road to Seward along the Turnagain Arm to the south of Anchorage we passed Portage Glacier, so close that we could see the startling deep blue of its glacial fissures. Glacial lakes are turquoise, and we filled our thermos from little streams that rushed down the mountains around us.

PHOENIX LAKE

Phoenix Lake in January —
Ground frozen hard one day,
Muddied the next,
Hoof prints apparent
As if sculptured into the earth,
Ducks huddled together,
On logs bobbing in the water,
Treetops glistening with frost
And stillness too profound to penetrate. . .

PEACE

No storm lasts forever,
Energy in time
Dissipates,
Like in every Little rain drop,
Falling down,
Life and death
New forms and structure
Take,
Matter never succumbs,
Only changed,
Re-spiritualized.

Two Critics Of Medicine's Mainstream

"Younger doctors are a new breed. The salvation of the medical profession probably lies in the new physicians. Many have rejected the traditional conservative approach of their older colleagues. This is particularly true in many of the large cities." Drs. Arthur and Stuart Frank in "The People's Handbook of Medical Care."

By DON KEOWN

THE PEOPLE'S HANDBOOK OF MEDICAL CARE by Dr. Arthur Frank and Dr. Stuart Frank; Random House, 494 pages, $8.95.

The "gadfly" has had a traditional and useful role in American society, especially beneficial in those fields where there is a tendency toward complacency and even arrogance — politics, the law, medicine, journalism, the military, education, etc.

Medicine, however, has been until recently a field in which there has been less criticism from within than most. Partially through the efforts and the power of the American Medical Assn., doctors generally have presented a fairly united front to the public.

Only rarely has a member of the profession had the audacity to suggest openly that all is not what it might be among the practitioners of the healing arts. And when that has occurred, the critics sometimes have found themselves ostracized and on the defensive.

But in recent years that has been changing. A new body of physicians, most of them young activists involved in social welfare causes, has become more and more outspoken in evaluating and criticizing American health care. Any and all professions, journalism not excepted, are certain to benefit from this kind of movement, no matter how disturbing the dust stirred up might be to a smug, prosperous establishment.

Two such outside-the-mainstream doctors who have zoomed to prominence with the publication of their "The People's Handbook of Medical Care" are the young brothers Drs. Arthur and Stuart Frank. Their book is largely devoted to an updated, wide-ranging compendium of the ailments and the emergencies that confront modern Americans and to suggestions as to what to do aboutthem. But the two also incorporate into the book some sharp criticism of their profession as it has functioned in America.

"Medicine is a business as well as a science and an art," they begin. "Anyone who regards it simply as a sacred calling beyond the greed and avarice of 20th Century America is putting himself at a substantial disadvantage in negotiating for the purchase of the very specialized services that doctors and hospitals are selling."

It is a point the Franks make repeatedly — that "the medical care business thrives on the passivity of the patient and reinforces the mysticism of medicine." That "the average person regards the medical profession with awe and fear. He avoids it as long as possible, but when he is forced to deal with it, he usually regresses to the behavior of an anxious 9-year-old and allows himself to be led passively through a maze of out-patient and in-patient care, referrals, consultations, X-rays, operations, enemas and sleeping pills. The mindless cooperation is seldom resented by the patient and is particularly agreeable to the health professionals."

This mystique, built upon shiny equipment, public relations, incomprehensible jargon and a tyrannical or patronizing manner, has the two brothers say, "created the illusion of working tolerably well — at least — for middle America." But, they charge, "it obviously collapses under the weight of such problems as the care of 30 million American poor, the elderly, the family that doesn't speak English, the radical, or the individual with unusual appearance or life style."

They continue: "In America there are three categories of medical care: 1. an unreasonably expensive system for the rich; 2. an increasingly deteriorating system for the middle class; and 3. an unconscionably bad system for the poor." And they add: "Although the medical industry and the AMA will loudly deny it, the quality of medical care often depends on one's ability to pay . . ."

The Franks discuss in detail the various kinds of treatment available, "how to identify good sources of medical care" and the boundaries of patient rights and physician responsibilities. Repeatedly, in their book and in television appearances publicizing it, they return to their thesis that the patient should insist upon his role as an adult consumer in his relationships with the physician, the clinic, the hospital, and reject efforts to treat hin as a child. "Ask your doctor questions," they advise, "and let him know you want an honest answer."

The bulk of their book is given over, after some preliminary discussion of how to recognize disease, to the best courses to follow in the event of medical emergencies (head injuries, rib fractures, stab and bullet wounds, fractures, sprains, bruises, cuts, burns, cardiac arrest, etc.); common ailments (the cold, flu, hepatitis, infections, hemorrhoids, diarrhea, constipation, nosebleed, hiccups, toothache, acne, insect bites, dogbites, motion sickness, etc.); and the health-related "social-political" problems of our age (drugs, draft counseling, tear gas, venereal disease, birth control, abortion, depression, suicide, alcoholism, obesity, nutrition, exercise, sexual problems, etc.).

There's a chapter on medical supplies. And the appendices include a free clinic directory, a listing of the chapters of the Medical Committee for Human Rights with their addresses, and a statement of the military's medical fitness standards.

The credentials of the two Franks are impressive, lending strength to their advice and criticisms.

Arthur specializes in internal medicine and public health in Washington D.C. He received his Bachelor of Science degree from Massachusetts Institute of Techology, a Master's from the University of Pennsylvania and his medical degree from New York University, with postgraduate work at Stanford Medical Center and the National Heart Institute. He has taught at Georgetown University and has been deputy director of the Comprehensive Health Services Program of the Office of Employment Opportunities, chairman of the Washington D.C. Chapter of the Medical Committee for Human Rights, and a coordinator for demonstrations in the national capital.

Stuart holds a B.S. Degree from MIT and a medical degree from New York University with postgraduate work at Yale-New Haven Hospital, the Institute of Cardiology in London and the National Heart Institute. He practices medicine and cardiology in San Francisco, and is a clinical assistant professor of medicine at the Univeristy of California. He has been involved with the Haight-Ashbury Medical Clinic and helped to organize the San Francisco Chapter of Medical Committee for Human Rights.

Such formidable backgrounds lend authority and sting to the criticisms the two doctors aim at their fellow professionals and the system in which they function. It adds, too, to the confidence of the reader in what seems to be sensible, reasonable advice on home care and on how to obtain the best available professional care when such is indicated. And despite the "now" generation connections of the two doctors, their counsel seems to be applicable to people of all economic, social and cultural sectors.

THE 1941 BOOK, "Win at Backgammon" by Millard Hopper," has been reprinted as a $1.50 paperback by Dover Publications, to capitalize upon the renewed interest in that old game.

SWEDENBORG Foundation has reprinted Helen Keller's "My Religion," with introduction by Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, as a $1 paperback.

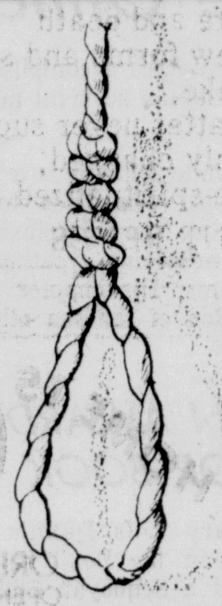
STORMTIDE by Bill Knox: Doubleday, 157 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



This is another of those solid, masculine yarns by Glasgow newspaperman Bill Knox about the Scottish Fisheries Protective Service and its battles with evil-doers.

This time Chief Officer Webb Carrick and his mates are summoned to an island in the Hebrides off Scotland's western coast. There a storm is brewing, both weather-wise and man-wise. A feud has split the island population. A young girl is dead. And soon there are other deaths.

Knox gives you a lot of action, along with a likeable hero in Garrick and some strong "supporting players." And he gives you a good dash of Scottish local color plus some salty nautical flavor as well. It's a good one.

A DIFFERENT TWIST TO STORY OF BOUNTY

CAPTAIN BLIGH AND MR. CHRISTIAN: The men and the Mutiny, by Richard Hough; Dutton, 305 pages, $10. Reviewed by John D. Yates.

Lt. William Bligh was to become a vice-admiral and to live to 63, his naval and political career a patchwork of mutiny and gallantry, hated and feared by some but admired by many more, and earnestly and loyally loved by one woman.

"He was loved, too, for several years — the most eventful and fateful years of his life — by one man, as emotional, passionate and mercurial as himself, with whom his name will always be linked — Fletcher Christian."

This overt reference to a homosexual relationship between these famous protagonists is perhaps the most dramatic and earth-shattering statement ever made about the tragedy of the Bounty's famous voyage. Yet the withering confrontation between the two men, which affected the lives and fortunes of all on board, could be explained as a love-hate relationship — often a phenomenon with most destructive consequences. The author advances his theory with intelligence by giving us a new look at the backgrounds and natures of Bligh and Christian.

Bligh was sailing master on Capt. James Cook's ship HMS Resolution on the last famous voyage of discovery. Then 24, he was known on the lower deck as a man of exceptionally strong will and of uncertain temperament: "He is an uneasy man to have on board... never know what his mood will be... he is a nagger, has a sharp temper, hates indolence and inefficiency, and admires incisiveness but never gives praise for anything..."

On the fateful 14th day of February, 1779, when Cook was killed by the natives of Hawaii, Bligh's actions may have caused his chief's death. It seems that the second ship of the expedition, HMS Discovery, had lost her cutter to some light-handed natives. Cook with several men went ashore to try and get the boat back. Bligh was in command of the Resolution's cutter and stayed offshore to cover the party on the beach and to "prevent any canoe going away." He ordered his men to fire prematurely at a small departing canoe. The shots frightened the natives on shore who were thronging about Cook and prompted them to attack, resulting in the Captain's death.

Bligh never thought twice about the possible result of his action, but others blamed him for Cook's death.

In 1785 he accepted the command of a merchant ship, Britannia, owned by one Duncan Campbell. A friend of Bligh's wife Elizabeth recommended Fletcher Christian to the new commander.

"Wages are no object," wrote Christian, "I will readily enter your ship as a foremaster until there is a vacancy among the officers." Christian sailed on two voyages to the West Indies with the Britannia, first as a gunner, and on the second boyage as second mate. He was 21 and Bligh 10 years older, and a strange close relationship developed between the two. Bligh had Christian to dine every-other day, treated him like a brother, and "was blind to his faults," although Christian was an indifferent seaman.

And so they came together again for the voyage of the Bounty. There was little tension before Tahiti, and Bligh's cruelty and unreasonableness have been exaggerated. After Tahiti things were very different. During their stay in "The Paradise of the World" the men were allowed to decline into a state of dissolution and incompetence. The situation brought Bligh quickly to the end of his tether — his temper became uneven, he became relentless in demands for perfection, and he took to publicly humiliating his officers. The Bounty needed an iron hand; but the pressure should have been applied evenly — with justice, not with abuse and histrionics.

For a man of Christian's sensitivity and mercurial temperament, the return to the rigors and responsibilities of shipboard life and of the renewal of close and intimate relations with Bligh in the confined quarters of the Bounty was especially hard to bear. His own agonized summary of his state of mind at that time — and later — was that he was in hell. Soon the other officers suffered severely from the stresses affecting Bligh and Christian; stresses that were brought about by Bligh's sexual jealousy. The young man, who he had indulged and instructed, had been sharing his bed with a particularly beautiful Tahitian girl, and now became the target for Bligh's vengeance.

Author Richard Hough does not devote his whole narrative to the strange relationships; he tells the whole story of the two men, the navigational feats of the one and the decline of the other on Pitcairn.

Hough has written a number of other stories of the sea, all with a special twist and new interpretation — "The Potemkin Mutiny," "Admirals in Collision," "The Blind Horn's Fate." This latest book about the enduring story of the Bounty — also with a new twist — is a most intriguing addition to his list.

An Historic Romance Made Dull

CARO: THE FATAL PASSION: The Life of Lady Caroline Lamb, by Henry Blyth; 260 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

The affair between Lady Caroline Lamb and Lord Byron is one of literary history's most melodramatic romances.

Yet, in spite of having had access to new material about this stormy incident, author Henry Blyth has produced a trite, boring book.

He uses the critical style — we always know what he, the judge and biographer, thinks — to tell his readers that Caroline and Byron lived dramatically. But he never shows them doing it.

The text is sprinkled with "There is no doubt that..."; "by no stretch of the imagination could he have realized"; or "she must have known." Blyth's style consists primarily of simple sentences laced with homilies.

The bright spots are direct quotations from letters or diaries. Byron once wrote of Caroline, "It is provoking to see her throwing away her own happiness by the handfuls..." And she to him, "You have told me how foreign women revenge: I will show you how an Englishwoman can."

These were exciting people. Henry Blyth doesn't give them a chance.

A Novice In Jungles Of Brazil

TAGGING ALONG by Marika Hanbury Tenison; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 335 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Karen Hunter.

The dense tropical jungles of Brazil are hardly the place one would expect to find a frail wife and mother accustomed to the comforts of a Cornwall country house, but Marika Hanbury Tenison is a delightful exception. She is determined to tag along with her explorer husband on his expedition into the primitive jungles of Brazil to see first-hand the living conditions of the Amerindians.

Her book is a record of the three months they spent in the remote jungles learning about, living with and trying to help and understand these forgotten people whose life style is being threatened by progress.

IN THE UNCHARTED jungles of Brazil, young Marika Hanbury Tenison was photographed with the Amerindian friend she called "Laughing Boy."

It is not really a documentary but rather a very warm personal story of the Amerindian people and of the problems Marika herself encounters trying to cope with intense heat, biting insects, dangerous animals, primitive living conditions and the never ending red-tape that seems to crop up everywhere.

Whereas her husband Robin wrote a very factual book on the serious problems of the Amerindians, Marika's book is quite different. It is a more lighthearted journal, full of the warmth and excitement that can only be seen through the eyes of an intelligent novice in the field of exploring.

The Best Of The Gilliam Columns

FOR BETTER OR FOR WORSE — The Ecology of an Urban Area, by Harold Gilliam; Chronicle Books, 183 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Jean Rauzy.

The author of "San Francisco Bay" and the beautiful "Island in Time," about Point Reyes Peninsula, offers a selection of articles from his regular feature "This Land" from the Sunday Chronicle "This World" section.

The composite effect is a strong treatise on the progress made in the preservation of nature's bounty in the Bay Region and an eloquent plea for further moves toward this end. He effectively links all these efforts — and he takes pride in the Bay Area accomplishments — to human survival in general.

Marinite Gilliam is a practical soul, who tries to view fairly all the complexities of problem-solving creating other problems. His chapter on the salvation of the sea otter and its effect on the abalone industry has some fairly workable suggestions for a possible solution.

The section on the Tamalpais Creek struggle will be particularly interesting to Marinities as it represents a calm, after-the-fact analysis of an event which generated so much heat at the time.

The final chapters of the book "To Enjoy the Environment" illustrate what seems to be Gilliam's personal philosophy: "The natural environment can also be a means to survival, at least a means of achieving health and sanity." The descriptions of the coastline and the personally conducted tours through the wonders of the Bay Region are sheer poetry.

Some New Books For The Juniors —

The church mouse is an established favorite character in children's literature.

But never before has there been one quite like Arthur, the title character in Graham Oakley's "The Church Mouse" (Atheneum, $5.95). And rarely before has a church cat, this one named Sampson, figured in the tale.

Although Sampson is friendly he is also often sleepy, so that Arthur suffers from loneliness. His solution: To invite all the other mice in town to also live in the church.

Needless to say, this creates problems —for the parson, the congregation, Sampson and even for Arthur. But when the situation nears a crisis, the mice population has an opportunity to restore itself to good graces by thwarting a burglar with evil intent upon the church candlesticks. Sampson, too, gets into the act.

Oakley, a scenery designer for British television, has in the past concentrated upon illustrations for children's books. But this time he proves he can also tell a witty, amusing story — one that parents will enjoy along with their offspring. And the art is first-rate — colorful, detailed, tingling with life and humor. One of those special books that number only a few during any one publishing season.

OTHER NEW books for juniors:

For the young joke and riddle buff: "The Electric Radish and Other Jokes" (Doubleday, $3.95) by Susan Thorndike with funny illustrations by Ray Cruz. "Gems" like: "What goes 999 thump, 999 thump, 999 thump?" The answer: "A centipede with a wooden leg." And: "What is the best way to catch a squirrel?" Answer: "Sit in a tree and act like a nut." Corny? Chestnuts? Sure, and that's the way kids like them. They'll break up over the same old jokes time after time. Here the question is on a front page, the answer on its back page. It should provide lots of fun. And may drive dad and mother nuts and up that tree where the squirrel awaits.

"Across the Meadow" (Doubleday, $4.50) is a simple little tale, story and pictures by Ben Shecter, of how Alfred the cat decides to take a vacation. His itinerary takes him across the meadow and brings him into contact with many old and new animal friends. But there's an underlying meaning behind Alfred's journey. For his is a trip from which he will not return. And the message is that life's end, like Alfred's arrival at his destination, can be a gentle, restful thing. This secondary meaning, however, will escape the smaller child, which might be just as well. Shecter once again demonstrates he is a truly gifted graphic artist, producing some marvelous illustrations.

"Moon-Uncle, Moon-Uncle" (Doubleday, $4.95) is a book of rhymes from India, translated by Sylvia Cassedy and Parvathi Thampi, with illustrations by Susanne Suba. The translators have managed to give their English versions of these traditionals borrowed from another land and culture a kind of nursery rhyme lilt that should please young ears.

The Right Way With The Paint Roller

Handyman's Pages

By ANDY LANG

Selecting the proper paint roller for the job at hand may sometimes appear a bit confusing because of the wide variety of roller covers offered by manufacturers.

There is, however, a rule-of-thumb developed from years of experience: the smoother the surface to be painted, the shorter the nap of the roller; therefore, the rougher the surface, the longer the nap.

Short nap covers are best on plaster and dry walls; medium on light stucco and smooth concrete; long nap on rough masonry, brick, block, heavy stucco and wire fences.

While manufacturers neglected for years to advise consumers which rollers were intended for which jobs, the tendency is now to tell on the packaging some facts about the rollers. Some hardware and building supply dealers have displays to assist in making the correct choice.

THE PAINT TRAY should be filled to where the shoreline of paint reaches halfway up the slanted surface. The roller is loaded by dipping it in the tray, then rolling over the higher and drier surface to remove paint. On vertical surfaces, the first stroke should be upward, then downward, then crosswise.

Always start rolling in a dry section and toward the one just painted. Don't press down. Let the roller do the work. Roll slowly and carefully into trimmed edges.

The edging should be done first with a trim brush or edging tool.

IF YOU ROLL too fast, the roller will spin at the end of a stroke, causing splattering. Don't make the common mistake of keeping the roller going after it has begun to run dry.

Prompt cleaning of the roller immediately after it has been used will assure longer life and continued good results. Squeeze excess paint from a removable cover with a roller cleaning tool or roll repeatedly on old newspapers.

For oil paints, immerse the cover in any good roller cleaner, turpentine or mineral spirits. Or place the roller cover in a large glass jar partially filled with a cleaner, then agitate and repeat several times. If you have used latex or water paints, clean the roller with mild soap and lukewarm water. Wipe the roller dry.

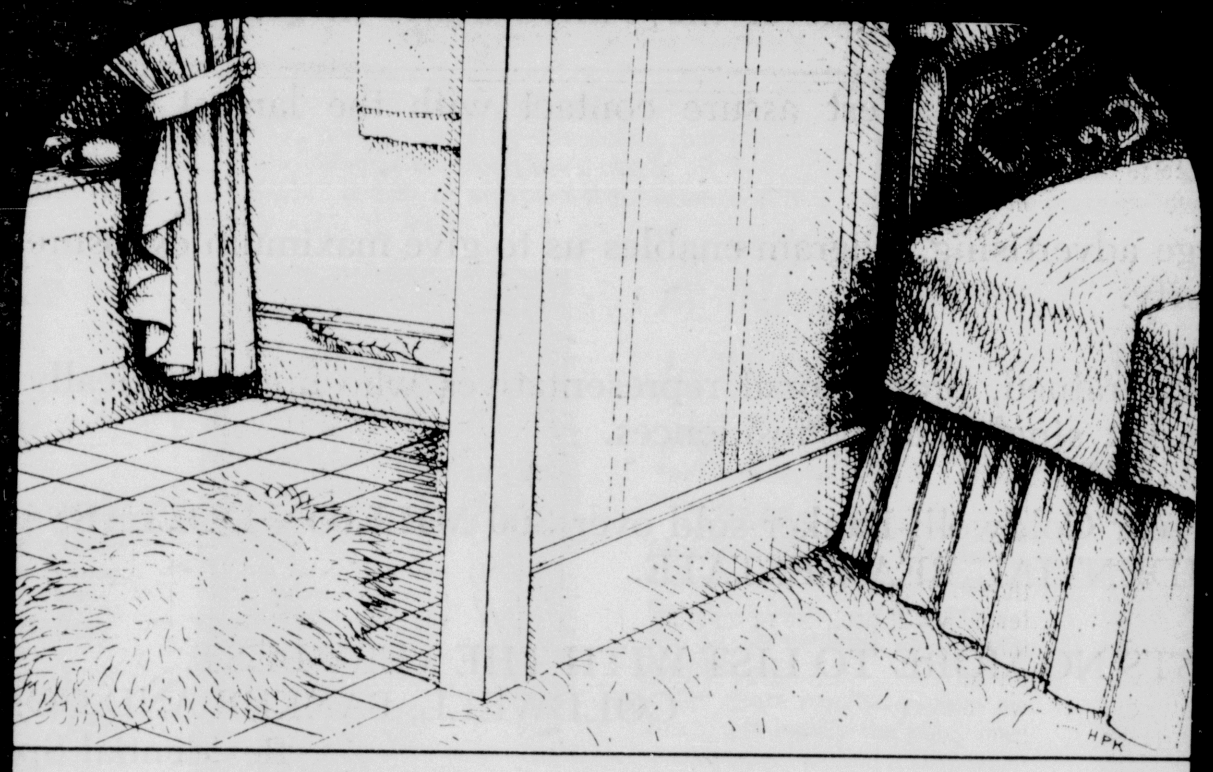
STORING THE ROLLER in a plastic bag will keep it fresh and clean.

Close relatives of paint rollers are flat applicators and paint mits.

The applicator, a kind of pad, usually of lambskin or mohair, is akin to brushing, since it strokes the finish right onto and into the surface.

The mitt, which fits over the hand, is especially useful for painting things like pipes, gutters, downspouts, wrought iron railings, flagpoles, etc.

Marin Homeowner's Notebook



CHECK FOR DRAINAGE PROBLEMS NOW.

Every homeowner in Marin should get in touch with his walls immediately. Your walls can warn you about hidden water leaks or drainage problems.

Some water problems are obvious. Puddles around the house or in the garage can be easily seen (and should be corrected). But water trapped under your house, seepage under your concrete-slab floor, or hidden plumbing leaks might not be noticed. Unless your walls warn you.

Inspect the base of your inside walls on the lowest level of the house. Look for darkened circles in the paint or wallpaper. Feel along for wet or slimy areas. Sniff for musty odors in all the rooms. Be sure to move large pieces of furniture and look for mildew on the wall behind. Also look behind boxes in the closets.

These are signs that water is standing under your house instead of draining away. The water is soaking upward, spreading dampness through the walls and floors.

In time, the dampness will warp floors and damage wall and floor coverings. But far more dangerous, the dampness makes your home's understructure vulnerable to all of Marin's most destructive pests—termites, boring beetles, and dry rot. All are attracted by dampness.

So if you read the writing on the wall, call Hinkley & Gordon. We're a licensed structural pest control company. We're licensed general contractors. And with two generations of experience in Marin, we're experts at correcting drainage problems.

Age Of Plastics Still In Infancy

By CAROLYN MURRAY

The idea of molded plastic furniture may turn off some traditionalists. They still carry the "plastic" idea of the late 1940s when the industry was just beginning to develop, and manufacturers were merely imitating other materials and forms.

Now the nature of the raw material is better understood and color control specialists have achieved new heights. Yet we are still in the infancy of the age of plastics, so we seem afraid to break away from recognizable forms in home furnishings.

EXAMPLES OF the new concepts in plastic furniture are the table and chairs shown here. Made by Syroco of durable ABS plastic, they represent recent technology in the use of a mold to create an integral piece of furniture. But the finished product looks and serves the traditional role established by the classic idea of a table.

The chairs have moved a little away from older seating concepts, but even they are "chairs" in the most traditional sense, with three legs instead of four, but legs even so.

These are great and good buys. The table is about $60, the armchairs retail for about $20 each. They are light in weight, strong on color (available in white, black and yellow). They're perfect for 20th Century gypsies, mobile home owners, high-rise dwellers. And certainly they are most acceptable as a trial run with plastics.

THEY MIGHT be a good way for a young family to explore moded plastics as future home furnishings material. They are visually "safe"; not too way out and practical to boot.

But one of these days the consumer audience may want to see molded plastic furnishings that speak more directly for the nature of the raw material. If the word molded means anything at all, it means formed and shaped to a rounded countour. The hard-edge object doesn't seem "molded," does it?

When we consumers are ready to accept the molded concept, manufacturers are capable of creating new forms for seating, eating, sleeping and living.

YOUR WHOLE house might well be a molded shell, with plastic plumbing pipes, tubular circuitry and precast, plastic bathroom equipment, cook centers and storage units. There's nothing revolutionary about any of these ideas, each has already been developed and marketed, but in individual industries.

The Sears' catalog, for example, sells molded plastic sinks in delightful colors, molded toilet seat covers, PVC pipe for every purpose, precast shower bases, laundry tubs, plastic tile and wall panels, plastic brick and stone wall coverings, awnings. You name it, it's probably been delineated in plastic.

My point?

This is the age of plastics, yet many of us still reject the word and the concept. Now that major manufacturers are seeking ways to make their products more nearly biodegradable (although that's not exactly the term they'll use), we're moving into a new wave of creativity for the design world. Why don't we encourage the best they have to offer, instead of pretending that plastics don't exist?

THIS DINING GROUP might be a nice and easy way to introduce molded plastics into the decor of your home. Certainly there is nothing radical or extreme about the design. Made by Syroco, a division of Dar Industries, the bistro chair sells for about $20, the table for less than $60.

About CARPETS

By Doug Emerson

THE SHAGGY CARPET STORY is only just beginning, it seems. This most popular of today's carpets is not through adapting and changing its ways to take its place in today's casual surroundings.

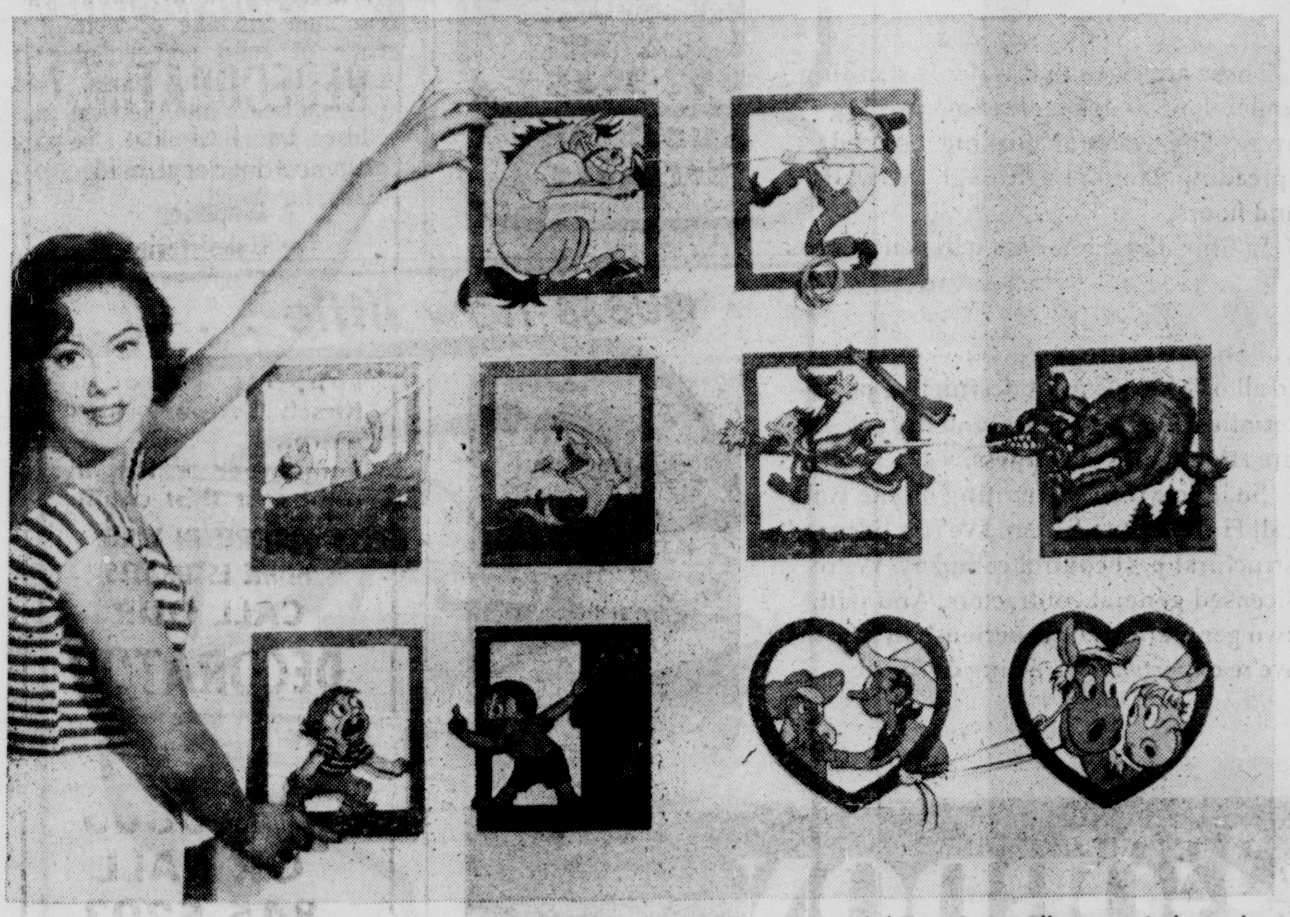
You can have shags, for instance, that are multi-level, combining very long and short fibers to create new textured beauty that is ever changing. And patterened shags are beginning to make their appearance on the floor fashion scene.

Brighter colors and brighter fibers are seen in all the new carpets, including shags. And the delicious new combinations of colors give you almost unlimited decorating versatility. You'll find these blends in bold colors and patterns, and also in very subtle combinations of two, three or more colors.

Shaggy carpets look and feel luxurious, the long, long pile taking much of the credit. And now the carpet designers have discovered there is great variety possible in textures and patterns working with these longer length yarns.

Discover the shaggy story for yourself and your home by visiting our extensive carpet displays, featuring the collections of America's foremost carpet designers and manufacturers. The long story is a great value story, too!

RIB-TICKLERS FOR THE WALL



THERE IS NOTHING like a bit of humor on the wall to brighten up a room — and the faces of the occupants. Steve Ellingson has come up with this set of do-it-yourself wall pictures that smacks of the slapstick comedy of the Mack Sennett era. They are perfect for the recreation room, the den, the children's room —even the office. There are 10 in all of these pictures, and they come in sets of two. Ellingson calls them his "double talk" pictures. To obtain the complete set of patterns for all 10 pictures, just send $2 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Group C-2. Patterns are full-size, so that you can trace them onto wood. Then cut them out with a coping saw, and paint as directed. Scrap plywood will do fine for the wood. And it is such a simple job that the kids can get into the act, too. Their reward? Well, perhaps the Pecos Kid tugging away at a stubborn bronc.

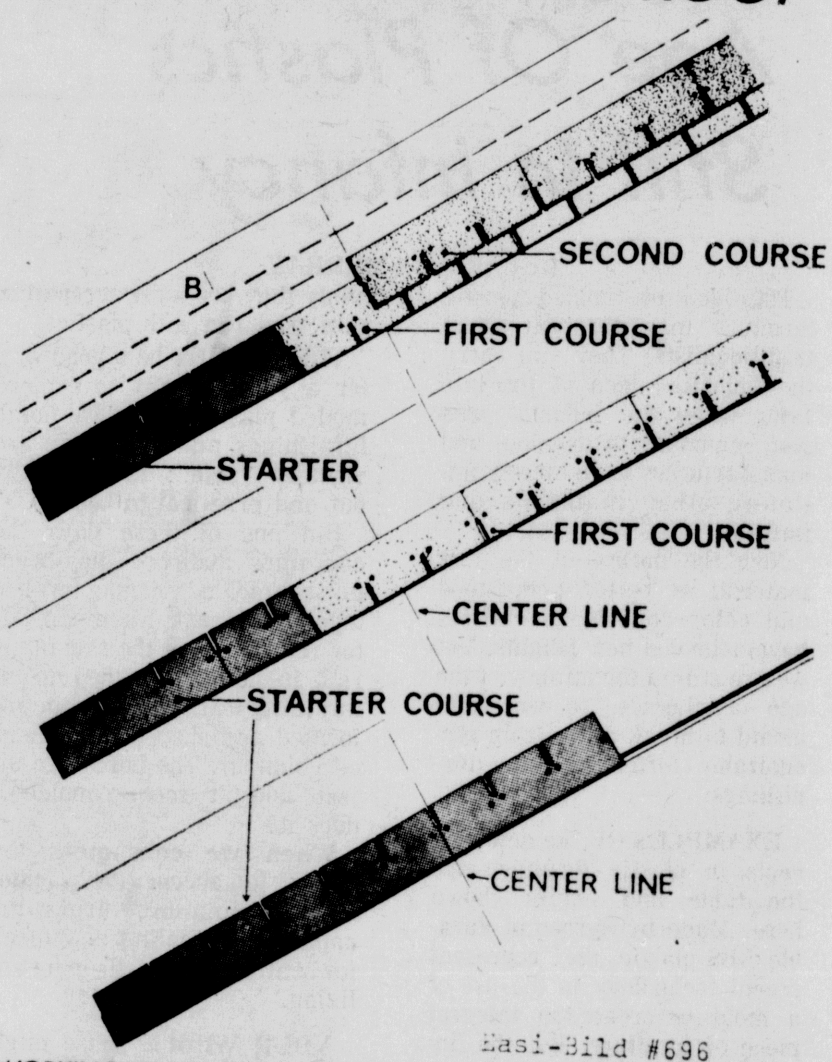
WORKING ON THE ROOF



Easi-Bild #696

WORKING ON THE roof is a job many home handymen consider out of bounds for them. But, claims Donald R. Brann of the Easi-Bild Pattern Co., it isn't difficult or dangerous, once the proper precautions have been taken. And providing the handyman knows what he is doing. A check for $1.50 made out to Easi-Bild and sent to Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, with a request for "Roofing Simplified Book" 696 will get you off to that good start. Directions and illustrations cover new roofing, re-roofing, repairs, gutter and skylight installation. The instructions are applicable to all kinds of roofing — asphalt, wood, metal, slate, etc. The handyman is advised to use a scaffold. And, in case he can't rent one, there are directions on how to build one. There is also guidance for the making of a safety harness. Include your zip code number to speed delivery of the book.

Soap: For Washing, Not For Loosening

When a drawer shows signs of sticking, don't make the common mistake of wetting a cake of soap and running it along the sliding parts. This puts moisture into the wood and causes future trouble. Use paraffin or a lubricant made especially for wood.

Some Groundcovers For California Yards

Garden Page

In the micro-environment that used to be called his yard, the home gardener faces no problem when it comes to covering ground.

In days gone by, Ivy was the traditional cover. Today, gardeners in California have, in greater number and variety, more plants to select from as groundcovers than gardeners in any other state.

Ivy — in its many interesting forms and textures — is still a popular choice with Californians. Yet, if one's micro-environment was covered up to here with Ivy, it would be an uninteresting world.

INTEREST: Perhaps that's what contemporary gardeners look upon their ground covers to provide.

Focal interest and beauty is provided by a cover of Bougainvillea. The dwarf types produce mounds of luxuriant green foliage and blankets of red flowers for many months of the year.

If frost is a threat, Sasanqua Camellias may add just the touch of interest needed in a part of the landscape. Junipers tolerate cold weather and in this big family are many top performers when it comes to providing beautiful cover.

TALKING ABOUT popularity: The Trailing African Daisy is near the top of the list. It's fast-growing and will fill in quickly when planted two feet apart. Besides white, there are pinkish and lavender flowers — good size, and in great profusion.

More carpet-like in appearance is Potentilla, which features tiny crisp green leaves and small bright yellow blooms. The effect is something else. The foliage and texture add a dimension to the sunny areas of the garden.

Potentilla would be a possibility for shadier locations, too, as would Ajuga (Carpet Bugle). The latter boasts blue spikes of quaint color; green or bronze foliage provides a refreshing accent to the setting.

FREEWAY-TOUGH, Baccharis, Ornamental Strawberries and even some native Ceanothus varieties are also California choices for groundcovers.

It's not feasible to mention them all — or even list them. In making selections, visit your nursery. It will have a host of covers from which to choose — and the nurseryman can play a role in assuring that you glean the utility, beauty and enjoyment from the plants; in your micro-environment.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓Select your new roses now at the nursery while bareroot stocks are still plentiful.

✓During the winter months, lawns should be kept mowed and fed. But delay those chores while the soil is wet and mushy. Constant treading on wet lawns tend to compact the soil and create problems for later in the year.

✓Now is a good time to shop for azaleas in bloom. Most prefer shade or part-shade, although Sun Azaleas will tolerate a fair amount of sunshine.

✓For immediate winter and early spring color in your garden, set out transplants of pansies, violas, calendulas and fairy primroses.

✓Remember those two prime winter-time garden chores — pruning, and dormant spraying — if you haven't already taken care of them in your own yard.

FLOWER OF THE YEAR

WHEN LEADING seedmen, meeting at Pennsylvania State University, were asked to select a "flower of the year," they voted overwhelmingly for the Giant Cactus-Flowered Zinnia, basing their choice upon its popularity with their customers and its performance in their trial gardens. It's a popular flower with Marin gardeners, too. It comes in a wide range of colors, from snow white, through shades of yellow, orange, pink and red, to purple. The huge flowers sometimes measure five inches across. And the quilled petals give it the name "cactus-flowered." They withstand heat, drouth and humidity well, thriving in a sunny location.

FRANCISCO BLVD. FLOOD SALE

On the mornings of January 16th and 18th, Francisco Boulevard was completely under-water. Many businesses suffered tremendous flooding and water damage to all types of merchandise including stereo equipment, carpeting and even brand new automobiles. Bellach's Furniture Parking Lot was completely submerged by the extensive flooding as well as our receiving warehouse. Fortunately we experienced very little damage to merchandise, however we suffered tremendous loss of SALES. Because of rising waters the entire Francisco Boulevard area was not accessible. Our January Floor Sample Clearance Sale was affected tremendously because of the flooding. We were not able to make enough room for our 1973 incoming new merchandise. Therefore we have to further sacrifice in price much of our remaining floor samples. The following is just a small listing of many of our special floor sample prices:

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Mary Martin will be seen again in the musical version of "Peter Pan" on the NBC network from 8 to 10 p.m. March 2. This is a repeat of the color tape production first aired in 1960 and repeated in 1963 and 1966. Previously, the star had appeared in two live colorcasts of the notable James Barrie play in 1955 and 1956.

ABC plans a two-hour sports special for the afternoon of Feb. 25 in which 10 of the world's outstanding athletes will compete in a series of events other than their specialties. They may choose seven of 10 events in which to participate. The athletes are Joe Frazier, Johnny Bench, Johnny Unitas, Gary Player, Rod Laver, Jean-Claude Killy, Stan Mikita, Elvin Hayes, Jim Stefanich and Peter Revson.

A weekly series of 90-minute contemporary musical specials will be introduced on NBC Feb. 3. Titled "Midnight Special," the shows will begin at 1 a.m., immediately following conclusion of "The Tonight Show starring Johnny Carson." About 10 musical acts will appear each week, with a major recording artist or group acting as host.

A musical salute to Broadway composer Harold Arlen is the theme of "Jack Lemmon-Get Happy," a one-hour special on NBC at 9:30 p.m. Feb. 25. Arlen himself is among those who will help present his songs as actor Jack Lemmon plays host. Diahann Carroll, Cass Elliot, Johnny Mathis and Doc Severinsen will appear.

Ed Sullivan is host for a pair of CBS specials coming up in February and March. The first is "TV Comedy Years," a salute to past and present television comedians and their programs. "Ed Sullivan's Broadway" will be devoted to a resume of New York stage entertainment, with highlights from Broadway musicals, as well as from vaudeville and burlesque.

Ethel Merman Can Still Belt Out A Song 40 Years After Her Career Began

By WILLIAM LAFFLER

More than 40 years ago Ethel Merman stepped into the world of show business as a young singer bubbling over with vitality.

There had been no singer like her. There has been none since. Imitators come and go but nobody has ever been able to offer a reasonable facsimile of her voice.

When composers wrote songs which needed a vibrant voice they kept Merman in mind. Among them were Cole Porter, Irving Berlin and George Gershwin. On stage or on screen, Ethel Merman made their songs unforgettable.

Time has had no effect on her ability to belt a song. Today her voice is just as clear and youthful as it was when she delighted audiences in the 1930s.

If you don't believe this, just listen to "Merman Sings Merman" (London XPS-901). The album contains such Porter classics as "I Get a Kick Out of You," "Blow Gabriel Blow," "It's D'Lovely" and "You're the Top."

Even though the lyrics of "You're the Top" are dated, Merman sings them in such a lively manner that they invoke visions of nostalgia.

The Merm leans heavily on Berlin tunes — "You're Just In Love," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "I Got Lost in His Arms," "They Say It's Wonderful" and "There's No Business Like Show Business."

Stanley Black and the London Festival Orchestra and Chorus offer a backdrop of music reminiscent of the 1930s for Miss Merman's marvelous performance.

COLE PORTER also was an ideal composer for Ella Fitzgerald, another great singer who defies the ravages of time.

"Ella Loves Cole" (Atlantic SD 1631) contains new Fitzgerald interpretations of 13 Porter showtunes, including "I Get a Kick Out of You," one of the numbers in the Merman album.

While it is senseless to compare the voices of Merman and Fitzgerald, it might be interesting to hear their interpretations of "I Get a Kick Out of You" side by side. Merman goes after the lyrics in a wild, carefree manner, while Fitzgerald caresses each word.

ETHEL MERMAN
No reasonable facsimile

Among the songs in the Fitzgerald album are "I've Got You Under My Skin," "All of You," "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," "Just One of Those Things," "C'est Magnifique," "Love for Sale" and "Anything Goes."

Nelson Riddle devised the orchestral arrangements and his band is augmented by Miss Fitzgerald's own rhythm section consisting of Ed Thigpen on drums, Tommy Flanagan on piano and Keter Betts on base.

TAPE DECK — While the Dolby system of noise reduction has changed the future of the tape cassette, putting it on the same sound category with the stereo disc, its greatest application is made to the open-reel tape because it unreels at a faster speed. A good model open-reeler is "Annunzio Paolo Montovani" (London LON 1 47193) because Montovani's music covers a wide spectrum of sound.

A Teac noise reduction box can be plugged into any good tape recorder and pre-amp and improve the sound noticeably.
